A Loon.

Mr. Wilmot Guiou is in possession of a live loon which is on exhibition at his store on York Street. The bird was caught the other night in a salmon net by Edward Goodine, at Hammond's Cove, Kingsclear.

Abusive Language.

Charlotte Lucretia Eatman, colored, appeared before the police magistrate yesterday morning, on the complaint of Jane O'Rhea, for abusive language. She acknowledged the offense and was fined $1 and costs.

At McAdam.

Two handsome locomotives are in the N. B. railway shops at McAdam, ready to be sent out on the road. One of them is intended for the St. Andrew's branch and the other for St. Stephen. Mr. Haggerty has spared no pains with them, and for beauty of finish and apparent stability it would be difficult to find their equals.

C. P. R. Telegraph

Mr. Williams, general manager of the C. P. R. telegraph lines, is here on official business. The Canada Pacific Company expect in a short time to have Fredericton and St. John connected with Matawamkeag and the through C. P. R. telegraph line. Mr. Williams is in St. John to-day, but will return to Fredericton the last of the week.

They all appeared in the police court yesterday morning, and each acknowledged the offence. George Lee, James Low, and Owen McLaughan were fined $50 each. It being Edward Quinn's second offence, he was fined $100.

The Florenceville Aground.

The steamer Florenceville grounded on the Grand Pass about six miles above town on her way from Woodstock yesterday afternoon. Every effort was made to get her off, but without avail, and she remained there all night. The passengers were brought down in a row boat, arriving in the city after ten o'clock.

The steamer was got off the bar this morning, and landed at her wharf at twelve o'clock.

The Douglas Revival.

A large gathering of people witnessed the union baptism at Douglas on Sunday afternoon last, many being present from the city. Five converts were baptised by immersion by Rev Wm. Downey (Free Baptist) and Rev. Mr. Hawes (congregationalist) baptised an equal number, three by immersion and two by sprinkling. The baptism took place at the river bank in front of Mr. Stephen Carlysle's residence. The revival meetings are being continued this week. Some 60 converts in all have been baptised since the meeting began.

A Stanley Hotel.

Fishing parties and all others who have occasion to go to Stanley speak in the warmest terms of the hotel kept by "Barney" McMinnamin at Stanley Village. It is without an exception the finest country hotel to be found in the province, and vies in many respects with some of the leading hostelries in the city places. The cuisine is excellent; the house is fitted out with modern improvements and conveniences, and the proprietor is one of the most obliging and popular hotel keepers in the country. All who visit Stanley will be sure of fine hotel accommodations so long as Barney has the swing.

An Amusing Accident.

While a young lad was driving Mr. James Howie's horse down Queen street, yesterday afternoon, the king bolt of the carriage dropped from its position with the usual result. The horse made off with the two front wheels at an ordinary jog, while the young fellow was left trying to balance the carriage, in which he was seated, on the remaining two wheels. He very soon saw that he could not do it, and had to succumb to the laws of nature, being very abruptly spilled out over the dash board. When he regained his feet he saw his horse quietly trotting along with the other two wheels, and a kind of an unwilling smile lit up his countenance. The horse was stopped by Dr. Carter in front of his office.

Summer Arrangements of Trains.

The summer arrangements of trains on the New Brunswick Railway went into effect yesterday. On the main line there is little change from the April time-table. The morning express from St. John arrives half an hour later at 9 25 a. m. standard time and the evening express arrives ten minutes earlier at 7.15 p. m. The afternoon train leaves at 4 26 local time, instead of at 4 o'clock as formerly. The time table otherwise remains unchanged.

On the Gibson branch, the time table is entirely changed, and the trains are run by the same arrangement as last summer. The express from Woodstock arrives at Gibson at 10 32 a. m. and leaves again at 11 30 a. m. standard time. Close connection is made with the Aroostook and Grand Falls trains.

His Arm Torn Off.

A distressing accident occurred in Blair's factory on Saturday afternoon last, Fred Edmonds, one of the employs of the factory, while carrying an armful of material across the floor, stumbled and fell against the planer. He put out his hand, and naturally so, to save himself in the fall, which was caught and was drawn into the feed roller of the planer horribly cutting his hand and arm to the elbow. He was held fast to the machine until Dr. Coburn arrived and had his arm removed at the elbow leaving the mangled part in the machine. The sufferings of the unfortunate young fellow were intense, and his agonizing shrieks could be heard for a long distance away from the factory. His arm has since been removed some two or three inches above the elbow and he is doing quite well. The part of the arm taken of in the machine was terribly mangled, the flesh being literally cut into strings. Edmonds is only about 17 years of age, and has the reputation of being a very industrious and worthy young fellow. Much sympathy is felt for him in his great misfortune.

The Railway Bridge and Track.

Ballast trains are crossing and recrossing the new railway bridge a number of times daily, and a large number of men are at work building up and filling in the approach to the bridge on the city side. The track is now laid past the corner of the Pennyfather residence, the western wing of this building being torn away. The gravel used for "filling" is being hauled from the Marysville pit, by the Northern & Western trains. The embankment across the front streets and sidewalks will be a high one and form quite a hill, and the only one on the city plat. With regard to the Mrs. Sills residence and property on George street, which necessitates an immediate surrender and destruction to make way for the track, the arbitrators have valued the property at $2,000, but the owner does not think this amount sufficient, and ordered the solicitor of the company and the recorder of deeds off her premises when they went to have the deed executed yesterday. Mrs. Sills values her property at $3,500 and refused an offer of $2,500 made by the company before being submitted to arbitration.

SUPREME COURT.

Another Scott Act Point Settled—Queen's Election Case.

Ex parte the City of Fredericton—This was an application by the city to compel the police magistrate to pay to the city treasurer the amount of two fines collected by him for violation of the Canada Temperance Act, committed in the parish of St. Mary's. The city claimed the fines because the police magistrate held his court for the trial of the cases in the police office in the city, and that the summonses were served by the policemen of the city, and therefore the city has contributed to the expense of the prosecutions and were entitled to the fines. The court held that there was no evidence that the city had contributed to the expense of the proceedings, and decided that the fines belonged to the county.

VanWart, of Woodstock, president of the company, in the presence of nearly all the directors and stockholders of the road.

Burglars in the North.

Special to Gleaner.

The watch chains and empty cash box were found in the afternoon along the road. The burglars obtained the tools from a blacksmith shop which was also broken into.

McKendrick's safe in Campbellton was also broken into on Friday last and a quantity of money and watches were stolen. Two pedlars were arrested here this morning, but were discharged because of no evidence against them. Suspicion points to several parties who have been acting as book agents.

HOW SALMON TAKE THE FLY.

Seasonable Information for Those who Are Going to Fish.

A salmon does not take the fly like a trout, and never rises to it while passing up or down a stream. It is only while it is lying at rest in the waves, the reposing water at the foot of swift rapid or the silent starting place of such a rapid, that it will respond to the skillful cast. Salmon may be moving along by the thousand in the deep stretches of the stream that extend sometimes for a mile between rapids, but the angler might drop his flies above them for a year, it it were possible, and never be rewarded by a rise. The pool is the place to whip, and the time early morning or late in the afternoon. If the epicurean denizen of the pool is so inclined there is sport ahead for the angler. He drops his flies lightly on the water, and the salmon starts for it at once. If it were a trout rising to the fly, he would take it with a swoop and a whirl, and away he would go. True, the salmon darts from his hiding upward toward the fly, after the manner of the rocket also, but just before he reaches the fly he stops for a second below it. Only for a second though, and then he rises, opens his great jaws' draws the fly and hook into his mouth and drops like a plummet towards the bottom. In doing that he carries the barbed hook deep in his upper jaw. Then the trouble that follows is divided between the salmon and the angler. The more the salmon tries to get out of trouble the deeper he gets the angler in. The fish no sooner feels the hook in his jaw than he seems to realize what the matter is and things begins to boil. The first thing the fisherman knows a hundred feet of line have spun from his reel, and he thinks he is in for a long chase down stream, when suddenly the salmon changes his mind, doubles and dashes straight back at the boat. Then the angler is put to his mettle to reel in the slack of that line. It is no sooner taut than the salmon feels its tension in his jaw, and the chances are that whirl he will shoot up out of the water until he clears it twice or thrice his length. Then he takes a header and dashes madly down into the depths again, tearing this way and that in his wild fury, darting round and round, and making lively work for both the angler and the paddle. Then again the mad fish may start down stream like a steam yacht, and put the paddle to his best skill and tact to keep the boat along with him. The hooked salmon may lead a chase for a mile in this way, then stop suddenly and resume its leaping and doubling tactics. The fight may last an hour or more, and if the angler is skillful and cool, and the guide or gaffer dexterous and watchful, it will have but one ending, and eventually the glittering, throbbing prize will be stretched on the bottom of the canoe.

The angler in salmon fishes to encourage a "sulker" in his fish. A sulker is always a large fish, and he will not show fight at once but will sink to the bottom and lie there. Whenever he does make up his mind to fight though, the angler may make up his mind at the same time that the struggle will be a good one. But the contrary fish may lie in the sulks for half a day or more, and, as the true sportsmen cannot retreat or abandon the siege with honor, he must sit there and await the salmon's royal pleasure if he has to stay all night.

A Story of Two Little Bears.

A week or two ago, George Glew, section foreman at Canterbury, was down to Shogomoc, and observed a bear's track near the railroad. The path appeared to be a beaten one, and Glew determined to capture the bear if possible. Following the path into the woods a short distance he set a spring trap. The next day he visited the trap, and there, caught by one foot, was a massive she-bear. A well-directed shot from Glew's rifle soon laid her out on the grass. He then began to skin her, when he saw that she had been recently suckled. Gazing up into a large tree near by Glew espied two cubs. He watched them until his brother got an axe, when the tree was felled. The little fellows, who were only about a month old, took to their heels and fled, but were speedily captured and brought back to where their mother's skin was lying. As soon as they smelled it, they lay down peaceably alongside it. When Glew and his brother were ready to depart, they strapped the two cubs together. They then swung the skin of the old bear over their axe and started for the track. The cubs followed them and when they would sit down the two cubs would sit down, too, and fondle the skin in such a caressing fashion that the men almost felt they had been guilty of murder. When the skin was placed on the hand car and the two men started for Canterbury the cubs lay down on it, and there they remained until Canterbury was reached. When they were taken away from it they snapped and fought like two little demons. The bears are now enclosed in a cage alongside Canterbury station.—Globe.

YORK CIRCUIT COURT.

The Grand Jury Have Little to do Except to be Sworn.

The York nisi prius sittings opened in the county court house this morning, Judge King presiding. Those who attended did so in peril of being spotted by the innumerable throng of swallows that flutter about the 242 nests beneath the roof of the county building. The brick edifice is swallow-striped from roof to foundation, and so are all the buildings public and private in the vicinity. If the building is to be continued in use for county purposes, something requires to be done to prevent the swallows from taking full possession. It is understood that the secretary of the S. P. C. A. refuses to allow the hose being turned on this veritable bird cage, and it looks as if the county council will have at least one perplexing question with which to deal at their coming session next week.

At the opening of the court the grand jury was sworn in as follows: Harry Beckwith, foreman; J. J. Weddall, Ludlow Yerxa, W. T. H. Fenety, T. W. Smith, Allan F. Randolph, Jas. H. Hawthorn, Nelson Campbell, John B. Grieves, Thos. A. Sharkey, John Owens, J. W. Tabor, Israel R. Golding, Chas. A. Sampson, Jeremiah Staples, Patrick Sweeney, F. B. Edgecombe, Jas. Dever, Wm. L. Estey. His Honor briefly addressed the jurors congratulating them on the improved appearance of the building [we presume His Honor meant the interior] since he last presided at this court. It was one of the best court rooms, in appearance at least, to be found anywhere in the Province. He was pleased to see so many in attendance at the court and the very small amount of business to come before them. There was but one case entered on the criminal docket, a charge of forgery against Walter A. Russell. His Honor reviewed the deposition in the case, which as presented showed quite conclusively that there was little, if any, intent to defraud.

When the grand jury was about to retire, the attorney general announced that no bill had been prepared nor were there any witnesses on hand, the case having been considered of too trifling a nature to be brought before the grand jury. The grand jury adjourned until 3 o'clock this afternoon. The civil cases will not be taken up until to-morrow morning.

The civil docket was made up as follows:

David Sinnott vs. George Howland—Messrs. Black & Hazen file record.

Samuel H. Estey vs. George Edney—Messrs. J. A. & W. VanWart file record.

Samuel H. Estey vs. William Booker—Messrs. J. A. & W. VanWart file record.

A. F. Randolph, Allan H. Randolph vs. James V. Armstrong—Messrs. J. A. & W. VanWart file record.

A. T. Cook vs. Jas. H. Crocket—Messrs. Black & Hazen file record.

SPORTING MATTERS.

Base Ball.

Umpire Gaffney says: I never allow a player to argue a point in play. When I say a thing I mean it, and I would sooner die standing up than alter my decision. Of course, I may mistake in calling a ball for a strike when a batsman strikes at it and change the ruling, but I'll never alter any other decision."

Monday—Chicago and Detroit met at Detroit, and the leaders were beaten. Washington proved too much for Boston, although the latter had the great Clarkson in the box. Philadelphia sat upon New York in great shape, and Pittsburg outbatted Indianoplis.

The standing to date is:

Boston	30	22	.576

ST. ANN'S, 20—JUBILEES, 16.

The Jubilees took their first defeat for the season in their match with the St. Ann's club on Saturday afternoon, but made a splendid showing against their much larger opponents. A large number of citizens who witnessed the game pronounce it the best of the season. Both nines played exceedingly well, there being but few errors scored. The St. Ann's nine had the advantage over the Jubilees in their batting, all of them being much heavier men, but by good fielding the Jubilees kept the score down as much as it was possible. The St. Ann's club took the lead from the start, but the Jubilees kept pulling it down all the way through. The nice innings were finished with the score standing 20 to 16 against the Jubilees. The following is the score by innings:

St. Ann's	3	1	2	1	0	4	7	0	2—20
Jubilees	0	2	1	3	0	3	4	2	1—16

Aquatic.

Bubear has challenged Ross to a race on the Tyne, English course, for $1,000 a side.

Hanlan has challenged Peter Kemp to again row for the single scull championship of the world and $500 a side, but stipulates that the race must be rowed on the Nepean instead of the Parramatta river.

Copperthwaite, Chase, and the Stove.

Copperthwaite, the teamster, and David Chase of the Salvation army, got into rather an awkward position yesterday afternoon while endeavoring to lift a stove from a raft to the wharf in rear of Captain Sypher's. After getting one end of the stove upon the shore they began to shove against it thinking to push it on the wharf. Instead of pushing the stove on, they were all the time shoving the raft out, and soon they both found themselves at an angle of about five degrees with the surface of the water, with toes on the edge of the raft, and their fingers on the edge of the stove. Then came the splash. The stove tumbled over, while Copperthwaite and Chase simultaneously went in lengthwise. After fishing each other out, they took themselves to their separate homes without ever mentioning the stove. They have however since fished it up. At the Salvation army last night Chase told the story of "his close call," adding that he was all ready for the other world.

A Brutal Assult.

Mansur Bloodworth was examined at Woodstock yesterday for committing an assault on Jas. Fitzherbert, with intention to do grevious bodily harm. The medical testimony was to the effect that Fitzherbert had his scull broken so as to expose his brains to view; one eye was rendered useless, the jawbone broken in three places, and all the teeth in the lower jaw broken out. The brutal affair occurred in the parish of Kent. The victim of the assault lies in a critical condition.

LIBERTY TO-MORROW.

The Imprisoned Editor will be Discharged from Custody on Wednesday Morning.

Mr. Hawke, the editor of the Moncton Transcript, who has been unjustly imprisoned by order of the Supreme Court in the county jail here for two months, will be discharged to-morrow [Wednesday] morning in time to take the boat for St. John. The imprisoned editor has not apparently suffered in health by his imprisonment; and is to-day just as outspoken as he was before his conviction. His imprisonment, on the whole, is likely to favor rather than prejudice him in the public estimation.

On Thursday morning Editor Hawke will leave St. John for Moncton, where he will be received at the railway depot by his friends on both sides of politics, as the reception is to be a non-party one. There will be a musical serenade, after which Mr. Hawke will be driven to the large skating rink, read an address from the people of Westmorland county, and presented with a handsome purse. One of the contributions was by Mr. William Hickman, of Dorchester, who generously donated $200 to the defence fund, which by the way, is the exact amount of the fine imposed upon the editor. Mr. Hickman's practical manner of protesting against the unfair trial which Mr. Hawke received, backed by the other contributions to the defence fund and testimonial, shows that the Westmorland people are sincere in this matter. The most gratifying feature of the affair is that the contributors to the fund are from both sides of politics.

The amount necessary to pay the fine has been received here from Westmorland county; and Mr. Crocket, editor of the GLEANER, has been asked as a journalist to act for the contributors and pay the fine.

Judges and Stockholders.

Moncton Transcript.

The St. John Sun insinuates that Mr. G. F. Gregory, of Fredericton, is responsible for the editorial utterances of the GLEANER, because like a loyal Liberal he probably finds himself generally in accord with them. Our St. John contemporary's trickery in systematically attributing the opinions of Editor Crocket, of the GLEANER, to somebody else, is both childish and unjournalistic. Mr. Crocket might retort, if this sort of thing is to be continued, that the Supreme Court judges are responsible for the editorial utterances of the Sun, because two judges were well known to have been stockholders in the Sun newspaper at the time of their elevation to the judiciary; and there is no public evidence that they have ceased to be such! What would the public think if it should have happened that two of the judges who sat at Libel editor to jail for criticising a miscarriage of justice in an election case, were financially interested in a Tory newspaper!

Example of Conscientiousness.

The matron at Castle Garden has set a good example of conscientiousness by resigning her position because she had little to do beyond drawing her salary. Those who aim to work as little for as great pay as possible might be interested in this new interpretation of business.—Chicago Herald.
