CONFESSES TO MURDERS.

Kentucky Feud Artist Tells How Assassinations Occurred.

Louisville, Ky., June 13.—The Courier-Journal to-day, in a despatch from Cynthiana, Ky., prints the confession of Curtis Jett, which gives the alleged details of the assassinations of James B. Marcum and James Cockrill, and also throws new light on the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox, the three crimes having been committed during the reign of feudalism in Breathitt County. The confession is authorized by Jett's attorneys. Jett says he, John Smitr and John Abner killed James Cockrill, that Robert Deaton went after Abner and Smit to aid in the murder and that Elbert Hargis, James Hargis, Ed. Callahan, Jesse Spicer and Bill Britton are the men who formed the conspiracy.

Starting out with these statements, Jett enters extensively into details of the murder and lays bare every feature of the conspiracy and the events before and after the murder.

He then confessed to the murder of James B. Marcum, which, he says, was at the instance of James Hargis and Ed. Callahan, declaring that the pistol with which he did the shooting was furnished him by Callahan, for the purpose. He says E. J. Ewen told the truth about the killing.

Jett's statement in regard to the assassination of Dr. Cox is a little less sensational than his assertions in regard to the other murders. He says he was at the jail and heard three shots, after which the telephone rang. He went to Alex Hargis' home and Hargis asked what the shooting was. Jett continues the story in these words:

"I said I did not know, and Uncle Alex said, 'Let's go down and see if Jim or any of them are hurt?' Uncle Alex stopped at Jim's garden fence; I guess he was afraid to run in, but I was fearless and did not care, you know, and I went into the yard, and in the shadow of the smoke house, moon as bright as day, I shall never forget it, stood Ed. Callahan, Jim Hargis, Bill Britton, Jesse Spicer and Elbert Hargis, with two shot guns. I saw no pistols."

Jett closes his confession by saying that he told the "plain truth, nothing more and nothing less." He relieves Alex Hargis of any complicity in the Cockrill and Marcum murders, saying "He is an innocent man."

Industrial Schools Association.

The annual meeting will be held on Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Alexandra School, East Toronto. Reports for the past year will be presented from both the Victoria and Alexandra Schools, and several short addresses will be given by prominent citizens. Special cars will be run every 15 minutes from Woodbine to the school, from 2 to 3.30. Music will be furnished during the afternoon, and at the close of the meeting refreshments will be served on the lawn. A cordial invitation to be present is extended to all who are interested in the work of the schools.

SICK HEADACHE

Many varieties of headache exist, those most prevalent being sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, etc.

Headache is an effect of disease, the cry of the suffering body for relief from some oppressing disorder.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed in order to cure the headache permanently. Wrong action of the stomach, liver or bowels is responsible for nine out of ten cases of headache.

In sick headache (a very common form) there is sometimes nausea and vomiting and usually constipation.

In nearly all forms of headache

has proved itself a specific—a medicine that has cured where all others failed.

Keep the stomach, liver and bowels in perfect working order by the use of nature's regulator and tonic, Burdock Blood Bitters, which cures all forms of headache by removing the cause.

Miss L. Smith, Morrisburg, Ont., writes: "I desire to let you know how much good Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled with headaches all the time, and could get no relief, until a friend told me of your Burdock Blood Bitters. After taking two bottles of it, I can say that I am completely cured."

B.B.B. is for sale at all druggists and general stores. Do not accept something "just as good."

THE THEOSOPHY OF TO-DAY HAS A PLACE IN RELIGION

Strives to Care for the Increasing Number Searching for a Reality in Their Religion.

Editor World: In an editorial in The Sunday World of 10th inst. there occurs this passage: "What has become of the theosophy which was to inaugurate the new order of things a few years ago, and was on the lips of every fashionable smatterer? Mahatmas have no credit now. Madam Blavatsky is but a curious memory." Will you permit me to make some comment on these remarks, and pardon me if I become personal? I feel some responsibility resting upon me in connection with your question, for I had the privilege of introducing the modern theosophical movement to Canada in 1889. Previous to that it does not appear to have been mentioned here. I remember very well being pointed out on the steamer "Sarnia" of the Dominion line, on the voyage to Montreal by Mr. J. C. Vinycomb of that city as a crank who believed that electric messages could be sent without wires. I had said it would be done in ten years. On arriving in Toronto I began a theosophical propagandum which I have maintained according to my opportunities ever since. There are two theosophical societies in Toronto now, and more people have come under theosophical influences in the past year than in any previous one. I used frequently to resort to newspaper correspondence. For some years it has been unnecessary. The present occasion is apt.

What has become of theosophy? It is asked. I have a volume of "Theosophick Philosophy," published in London in 1691, and have little doubt that in 1706 some persons were asking what had become of it then. Those who want it can always find it, and it is of no consequence to anyone else.

Madame Blavatsky published "Isis Unveiled" in 1875, a generation ago. "Which was to inaugurate a new order of things!" Let any thinking man go back to 1875 and picture the revolution that has occurred since that time. It is needless to put forward the extent to which theosophy has participated in that revolution. All students are aware of it. "Isis" was largely a work of destructive criticism. In 1888 Madame Blavatsky published the "Secret Doctrine," three volumes of constructive philosophy and science. The developments in science since then are precisely and definitely indicate dtherein. The X-ray, wireless telegraph, atomic analysis, the nature of the ether, the identity of gravity and electricity and the interconvertibility of the various chemical and physical forces, radio-activity, and the constitution of the sun as a reservoir of energy, and the vital heart of the solar universe, are among these. As an index to future scientific progress, the study of cosmogenesis and the origin of mankind, the book is a mine of suggestion. In philosophy it does for the student what he may accomplish for himself after toilsome years.

It is, however, in questions of religion that the theosophical movement has been of most assistance to the army of its students. There is an outcry in the churches at present as to why men avoid them and young men fail to undertake pastoral service. Men are in search of a reality in their religion, and they do not feel that thru the churches religion possesses any intimate connection with life. They seek a religion which shows itself to be as much a component element of life as business does, or diet or dollars. Quarrels fought over young lady seminary codes of ethics, or church furniture, or verbal definitions, or the authenticity of parchments twenty hundred years old, or the speculations of unknown persons on unascertainable facts, do not engage thoughtful men. They have more important issues in contemplation. The world has almost abandoned the theory of Archbishop Ussher that it was created 6000 years ago. Geologists and other learned people estimate from one to five hundred millions of years, with liberal disagreement. Blavatsky, not without reasons furnished, suggests 320,000,000 years since first palaeozoic age. Also that man, becoming skeletonizable, first appeared with the limestone strata of 4,000,000 or 5,000,000 years ago. On which wider outlook immortal persons delay not to extend their gaze forward as well as hindward. One result of which is a fuller consciousness of what immortality means. Whence is born the prophet to perpetuate the ancient struggle with the priest.

Organized opinion, which is orthodoxy, always fears independent thought, which is heterodoxy. The elder brother of Nazareth was not welcome to organized opinion. Organized opinion provided for the stoning and persecution of prophets, Savonarola, Huss, Luther and their like, and maintains the principle, with benevolent modifications in practice. Men, consciously immortal, facing eternities, naturally waive consideration of young lady seminary codes and kindred problems, in favor of main issues. Men, not only problematically immortal hereafter, but actually immortal now and here, do by no means rest satisfied with seminary codes.

"We preach Christ crucified," says the master theosophist, St. Paul. Preachers would do well to read the passage in the Greek, I Corinthians i. 23, 24. Christ crucified is the greatest problem in the world. He is crucified daily, says the apostle. The churchmen teach that He was crucified on Calvary.

As I understand it, here lies the difference between theosophy and the churches. The church of old was taught by symbols. The sacrifices and ordinances of the Old Testament were considered by St. Paul as symbols and parables. The question is then, Does the Cross only mean what the churches commonly understand it to mean? Is Calvary all that is to be considered? Do not deeper things lie behind the mystery of Christ, the word made flesh, than the churches generally have dared to dream? "Even tho we have known Christ after the flesh," says St. Paul, "yet now we know Him so no more." II Corinthians v. 16, revised version. With no desire to twist texts, there are many who feel that St. Paul's range was wider than the modern pulpit. He knew diversities of ministrations, but one Lord—Him who had other sheep than the flock in Galilee.

There are only a few in any age deeply concerned about such questions, and it seems unfortunate that the expression of their interest should lead them to be anathematized. But the number of the Christian mystics is growing. The marvelously beautiful invocation which Dr. Robertson Nicoll uses to close his recent volume, "The Garden of Nuts," is the aspiration of them all.

The group of literary occultists oversea who began their work in the Dublin Theosophical Society, under Madam Blavatsky, among whom W. B. Yeats, "A.E.," or George W. Russell, and John Todhunter are prominent, represent one development of theosophical influence. The scholarly work of Mr. George R. S. Mead in numerous volumes on the origins of Christianity is a direct product of the movement. So also is the brilliant work of Charles Johnston, the Sanscrit scholar of Columbia University, New York. And these are by no means alone. Such works are not always labelled as theosophical, but they are contributions to the age from workers in the ranks which are considerably affecting current thought. The work of Professors Crookes, Wallace, Lodge, Myers, Maxwell, James of Harvard and others, is inseparable from the movement inaugurated in 1875. The writers who appeal directly to theosophical students are very numerous, but they are "caviare to the general." Wisdom is still spoken in a mystery.

Man's immortality, the integrity of conscience, and the law expressed in the last word on the subject in the New Testament, which renders to each man according as his work is, are perhaps the chief ideas in this philosophy of the Mahatmas, who have no credit now, says your editorial. After twenty years I still find them most credible and most benign.

WHAT KIND OF "GUSH"?

Bishop Potter of New York says "It's All Gush."
Ah, Potter! if it be "all gush,"
'Tis the gush of the family,
A gush that cannot fail to crush
All foes to unity.

'Tis heaven's purpose; tush, man, tush!
We cannot altered be;
They shall be one, ch, bishop, hush,
And with God's Word agree.

The Anglo-Saxon blood will rush,
Like giant waves of sea,
And all that hinders union brush
Into nonentity.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

Lady Grey's Childhood Home.

Her Excellency the Countess Grey had dinner last week at her old home, Dorchester House, London, her host being the American ambassador. His Majesty King Edward was a fellow guest, and the dinner was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, otherwise "Princess Alice and her husband." It may be news to many that the president's daughter during her stay in London is a guest in the childhood home of the wife of the governor-general of Canada. Dorchester House, which the American ambassador has rented from Major Holford, Lady Grey's brother, was built by her father, who was a great patron of arts and who filled it with artistic treasures. Miss Holford was herself an artist of no mean reputation, and was noted for her great personal charm. The house descended to Mr. and Mrs. Holford's only son, Major Holford, who is one of the King's equerries. It is next door to the mansion built for the late Mr. "Barny Barnato," and in an article on "Park Lane and its Palaces," by Horace Wyndham, is thus described:

"The pride of Park Lane is undoubtedly the splendid building known as Dorchester House. It is the property of Major Holford, equerry to the King, and was designed by Lewis Vulliamy in 1853. To a great extent it may be described as Palladian, being furnished more or less after the style of a Florentin palazzo. Internally it is furnished and decorated with all that taste and wealth in combination can secure, and its salons and corridors are such as royalty might envy. Its principal staircase, too, is unequaled in London, while some of the pictures and art treasures in its galleries are priceless. In particular is this the case with regard to a number of masterpieces by Velasquez, Titian and Cuyp."

Models for Girls.

The young girl is having a monopoly of the prettiest modes just now, and on all sides you see the most charming creations that only the beauty of youth can fitly carry off. One such model was of a particularly dainty shade of "Wedgwood" blue eollenne, which is much to the front this year, the skirt trimmed with a festoon of four narrow flounces, and panels of raised embroidery carried out in silk the exact shade of the dress, almost to the waist; the full bodice was relieved by a white fichu, while a hat and feathers of the gown's blue completed a very pretty ensemble. Another frieze dress of the palest shade of coral pink was in its place in a carriage, and was worn with a pink hat of the same hue loaded with ostrich feathers—emphatically not a gown for working-day wear, but then one cannot always exclude the ornamental.

Correspondence.

Note—The editor of the woman's department will willingly answer any questions relating to household or other woman's interests, letters to be addressed to Correspondence Column, Woman's Department, The World.

Mabel—You are right, the sun is very hard on the pink flowers so popular in millinery just now. Try restoring them with rouge. If they have not become too faded you will find it satisfactory.

F. R. K.—You would find a coat of varnish would restore your hall linoleum wonderfully, and it would also make it wear better. It should be varnished once or twice a year.

Ignoramus—It is not usual to send out wedding cake in boxes nowadays, but some people still cling to that compliment where old friends living at a distance are concerned.

Frank—Unless you tell me the entire circumstances I fear my advice will be of little use.

Ladies Y.M.C.A. Auxiliary.

The ladies' auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association held the last meeting until October yesterday afternoon at the junior camp at Munro Park. Mrs. Kilgour presided. The treasurer reported a balance on hand of $157.54, with which it was decided to purchase window curtains, blinds and portieres for the Y.M.C.A. parlors, estimates having already been submitted. Mr. Felgate, who is in charge of the camp, said that there were twelve boys and two adults in camp just now, but that he has accommodation for twenty-five boys. Those in camp now are all business youths enjoying a few weeks' outing, tho most go in to their work in the day time. Mrs. Massey contributed a vocal selection. A delegation was appointed to make the presentation of a dainty amethyst and pearl pin, on behalf of the auxiliary, to Miss Dilkie, who was unable to be present. At the conclusion of the business an enjoyable tea was served, and the ladies enjoyed a pleasant half hour on the verandah with the beautiful outlook of park and bay before them.

Officers Elected.

The Western Woman's Christian Temperance Union has held its annual meeting, and elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Savage; vice-presidents, Mrs. Alexander, Mrs. Love and Mrs. Bowkeer; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Bullman; recording secretary, Mrs. Ambree; treasurer, Mrs. Duff; financial secretary, Mrs. Pretty. Very encouraging reports of the year's work were submitted, those of mothers and juvenile work being the best. Mrs. Cameron of the Willard-Creighton Union led a discussion upon systematic giving. Afterwards refreshments were served and a social half hour spent.

Port Hope, June 13.—(Special.)—About one hundred and sixty delegates are in attendance at the thirteenth annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte branch of the W. M. S. of the Methodist Church, now being held at the church here.

The opening exercises were presided over by Mrs. Platt, the president of the society. After the usual preliminaries, the business session opened, and the committees were appointed.

At the evening session, Rev. G. W. Henderson extended a hearty welcome to the visiting delegates, and Mrs. Winterbourne of Trenton responded.

The president's annual address, the treasurer's financial statement and the corresponding secretary's report were all of a most gratifying nature, and showed continued and steady growth.

GROWTH OF SCIENCE CHURCH

Followers of Mary Eddy Now Number Over Forty Thousand.

Boston, June 13.—One of the features of the session of the Christian Science Conference was the reading by Judge Septimus J. Hanna of a letter expressing loyalty and confidence on the part of the members of the mother church to Rev. Mary Baker C. Eddy at Concort, N. H., the founder of the faith.

The growth of the denomination was shown in a report read by Clerk Johnson. The membership of the mother church to-day is 40,011, as against 1545 at the first meeting of the church in 1895. The total number of branch churches advertised in the official organ of the faith was 682, a gain of 68, and reports from 614 show a membership of 41,944.

Washington, June 12.—The establishment near Washington of a national arboretum, a reserve for testing foreign plants of all varieties, was discussed by the American Association of park superintendents, whose annual convention is in progress here. William R. Smith, the superintendent of the Botanical Gardens at Washington, presented a paper in which he advised the purchase by the government of the Appalachian mountain range, to be used in the growth of pine trees. The turpentine product from the trees, he said, after being converted into camphor, was a valuable asset in the manufacture of smokeless powder.
