What a Singer Can Eat.

As to diet, the girl who wants to be a singer should avoid sweets of all kinds. There is nothing better than food of the plainest kind. Pastry, nuts, almonds, raisins, pickles, rich sauces are simply poison to a singer. All these are indigestible, and a singer, above all people, should partake of only that class of food which digests easily. Never eat closer than two hours before you sing. I go futher: if I sing at 8 o'clock I eat at 4 in the afternoon. As regards fluids, all are harmful if taken in immoderate quantities. Milk is good, but it is best when mixed with soda-water or seltzer. Wines of any kind are injurious, and I can not be too emphatic in warning all girls who aspire to be singers to abstain from them. I have known some of the most promising voices to be utterly ruined by even the smallest indulgence in wine. Fresh and ripe fruit always makes a good diet for a singer, especially grapes.

The voice is regulated by the health if its possessor, and just as she takes care of that or neglects it will she make a success or failure. A good voice cannot come from an unhealthy constitution. If ever two things were inseparable, they are good health and a good voice. With the former a good voice is possible; without it vocal excellence is impossible.
