WOODROW WILSON IN "FIGHTING MOOD"

At Least, This is What He Tells Friendly Philadelphians.

SPLENDID GENERALITIES

President Ready to Defend National Ideals "at Any Cost."

PHILADELPHIA, June 29.—President Wilson, describing himself "as in fighting mood," enunciated today to a large crowd in Independence square his conception of some of the cardinal American ideals. He declared that America in dealing with other nations must "vindicate at whatever cost its principles of liberty, justice and humanity; that America first" must be translated into action exalting it above all selfish interests; and that the nation's policy and development must be guided by the whole people and not by any small group.

Applause repeatedly interrupted the address. The crowd liked particularly the president's declaration that American principles must be vindicated in the country's foreign relations, which apparently was interpreted as referring to the Mexican situation. At no time, however, did Mr. Wilson mention Mexico or any other foreign nation directly.

Ready to Fight.

"I believe," the president said, "that America—the country we put first in our thoughts—should be ready in every point of policy and of action to vindicate at whatever cost the principles of liberty, of justice, and of humanity, to which we have been devoted from the first.

"I believe that at whatever cost America should be just to other people and treat our people as she demands that they should treat her. She has a right to demand that they treat her with justice and respect and she has a right to insist that they treat her in that fashion, but she cannot with dignity or with self-respect insist upon that unless she is willing to act in that same fashion toward them.

"That I am ready to fight for at any cost to myself."
