Personal Health Service

(By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D., Noted Physician and Author.)

The Overworked Bronchial Tubes.

Acute bronchitis, or a "cold settled in the chest," as the benighted call it, is not the familiar cough and sore chest that the nostrum exploiters would have the gullible public imagine. In 95 per cent of all such alleged "colds settled in the chest" there is nothing wrong inside the chest. In seeking the source or origin of an acute cough, that is, a newly established cough which does not continue indefinitely, it is well to investigate, (1) the lining of the nose chambers, (2) the lining of the throat, especially that part covering the adenoid body, (3) the lining of the larynx (voice box) and trachea (windpipe). Such a search is much more likely to prove successful than is the most diligent scrutiny of the almanac, the patent medicine testimonial or Dr. Quacker's Dollar Doctor.

Whether the patient notices any rawness or soreness in the chest or not, the physician finds clear evidence, in his examination of the chest, of any actual bronchitis. Inflammation of the lining of the bronchial tubes can never be inferred from cough and sore chest alone; that is, no one, not even a doctor himself, can surmise bronchitis from his own sensations. Any guess about bronchitis or "cold on the chest," not corroborated by the evidence the doctor finds when he listens with ear or stethoscope, is, therefore, usually wrong.

In spite of my kindliest intention many readers will be disappointed in this talk. They will deem it mere destructive criticism. Yet I set out to do good, if I could, and do no harm. Hippocrates gave three raps on my spirit table and said: "Son," said he, "son, let's explain to 'em again about concoctions in the chest. It is coming to the season when humors are wont to penetrate the chest." "Father, what's the use?" said I. "Year after year I've told 'em, but they do love concoctions, and you just can't penetrate their chests with humor, seems 's though." "No, no my son, you do not understand," the Father of Medicine replied. "I meant evil humors concocted in the chest. I think my children now call it inflammation."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Found in a Doctor-Book.

Can you tell me where I can get tincture of aletris farinosa? I found it recommended in a doctor-book as a cure for falling of the womb and other female weaknesses. I have inquired in many drug stores, but they do not seem to know what it is.—Mrs. B. C. H.

Ans.—Star grass, blazing star, mealy starwort and colic root are other names for aletris farinosa. Of course, it has no effect on falling of the womb or any other condition which the quack doctor-book may have led you to attribute to "female weakness." The stuff is an emetic, a harsh cathartic, and very bitter—perhaps the quack thought to divert your attention from the imaginary ailment to the very real medicine.

Popcorn.

My son, 2 years old, has a great craving for popcorn, and will eat a small bag of it if he gets it. It doesn't seem to do any harm, but I am wondering if it is likely to injure him in any way.—Mrs. J. H. B.

Ans.—It may be harmless, but as a rule popcorn should not be given until the child has four molar teeth to masticate it, which the average child has at the age of 30 to 36 months.

A Grain.

You advised giving as a prevention against goitre in school children a quart of drinking water with three grains of sodium iodide dissolved in it, daily for ten days. How much do you consider a grain? I have no way to measure it.—C. V. M.

Ans.—A grain is one-twentieth of a scruple. But may be you have no way to measure scruples. Then a scruple is one-third of a dram. What? No way to measure even a dram! Well, well, how sad! But here's a way to get around the difficulty: Let your druggist measure the dram of sodium iodide and weigh out twenty three-grain powders separately for you; or he can weigh ten three-grain powders from half a dram. Or he may even be able to supply sodium iodide in tablets containing ethree grains.

The Donor of Blood.

What effect has transfusion of blood on the one who gives the blood? I am a big, healthy girl, and I intend to give some blood for a seriously ill friend.—L. M. V.

Ans.—No lasting effect. Sometimes temporary faintness.

George Melford, who has been producing some of the best pictures of the current season, has another winner in "Behold My Wife," which is the feature attraction at the Grand all this week. The photoplay was adapted from Sir Gilbert Parker's stirring tale of the Canadian Northwest, "The Translation of the Savage." Mr. Melford, who has been producing good pictures since the infancy days of the cinema industry, came to the fore recently with his excellent picturization of the morality play "Everywoman." He followed with Jack London's "The Sea Wolf," and subsequently with the famous western play "The Round-Up," in which Roscoe Arbuckle starred. It would be difficult to find Mr. Melford's superior in putting on a strenuous picture of the great outdoors.

WONDER SCENIC AND MUSICAL PROLOGUE.

A. D. Jordan has arranged one of the most fascinating scenic and musical prologues to precede the screening of the big feature. Local vocal stars, with special scenic and musical prologue precede the showing of the wonder Artcraft special. Special lighting and scenic effects, with augmented orchestra do much to add to the big three-hour entertainment.

HAROLD LLOYD IN "GET OUT AND GET UNDER."

Harold Lloyd in his new million dollar comedy success, "Get Opt and Get Under," is one of the big features of the big show. And Harold Lloyd himself will personally lead the big parade of "Flivvers" at the Grand today, at 1 p.m., when prizes will be awarded for the best and worst-looking Ford.

CHARLES RAY RADIATES REAL HICK HUMOR IN "PEACEFUL VALLEY," SHOWING AT THE ALLEN NOW.

Charles Ray's second First National picture, and his newest production "Peaceful Valley," brings the much-loved young star back to the role best liked by his followers, that of the young Reuben who matches his wits against the schemers of the city, and comes out second to none in the game of love and life.

This latest of Charlie's screen triumphs, "Peaceful Valley," which is shown at the Allen today, tomorrow and Saturday, unfolds a most absorbing story of love and adventure on the farm. There's a villain who tries to cheat the young farmer and his widow mother out of rich mineral lands, and lures the young country maiden to the evil of the city's primrose path. It's a picture where real human beings laugh and cry their way through true to life rural struggles and joys, where "Hick" brains prove a match for Wall street. "Peaceful Valley" will delight everybody because it is another example of how a star can successfully depict a role which is in perfect accord with the tastes of screen followers, and create a character that will bring a laugh or a tear, sign or chuckle, according to the ups and downs of the story.

A special feature attraction for the kiddies will be Booth Tarkington's newest Edgar comedy, "Edgar's Jonah Day." Allen World News and numerous other offerings will complete the program. Overture will be Suppe's "Morning, Noon and Night."

NORMA TALMADGE IN THE FIRST NATIONAL PICTURE, "YES OR NO," AT LOEW'S.

Few photoplays of recent years have offered such decided contrasts as "Yes or No?" the latest and best offering of photodrama distributed by First National at Loew's today, Friday and Saturday, in which Norma Talmadge takes the leading role. In the home of Margaret Vane we see the social elite frittering away their time, while a moment later, whisked by the magic of the moving picture camera a few blocks east we encounter Minnie Berry, laboring amid squalid poverty to keep her home and babies in a manner worthy of the love of her devoted but preoccupied husband.

Of course Miss Talmadge handles both roles. And she does it with a rare skill and charm. Both of her characterizations are excellent, her beauty contributing much to the enjoyment of the picture. Even as Minnie Berry in gingham and with hair bedraggled, this delightful little actress is good to look upon, while in the gorgeous wardrobe she has equipped herself with for the part of Margaret Vane her beauty is irresistible.

In making this picture unusual care has been taken by director O'Neill to faithfully reproduce the settings. In fact the scenes in the Berry home are actually shot in a real East Side tenement in New York City. Several of the settings for the society end of the picture are actual scenes in one of the famous homes of wealth which abound in the metropolis.

A screamingly funny comic from the Sunshine studio, Loew's interesting Pictorial of world events, and another excellent menu of vaudeville completes the program for the remaining three days of the week.

"BABY MINE" BIG LAUGHING HIT OF THE SEASON AT THE MAJESTIC.

Do you enjoy a rollicking comedy bill? Then take in the offering of The Majestic Players at the Majestic this week, "Baby Mine," from the pen of that well-known author, Margaret Mayo. The piece was built for producing laughter of the hilarious sort, and Majestic patrons have this week laughed till their sides ached at the screamingly funny comedy lines that run through this comedy farce. The plot or rather the basis for the merry-making surrounds the unsuccessful attempts of a charming young bride to secure a suitable adopted child from the home, in securing the kiddie complications arise, whereby the owners of the adopted kiddies all ask for the return of their offspring, and when hubby is presented with one, then twins and finally triplets, the comedy that results is one long scream. Each and every member of the company is seen to advantage in the current bill, and the work of Miss Pates comes in for much commendation at the hands of this week's audiences. Miss Pates played the original role in "Baby Mine" for successful seasons on the road, and gives a sterling interpretation of the role of the charming wife.

LEOPARD KILLS MAN IN FIGHT

Beast Confined in Warehouse Makes Attack On Owner in the Dark.

HELP TOO LATE

Two Men With Spiked Poles Drove Animal Away From Victim.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—In a terrific battle with a leopard in a dark warehouse in East Tenth street, Charles Dochtermann of 48 St. Mark's Place, it became known received injuries that caused his death in Bellevue Hospital. Dochtermann, owner of the warehouse, entered the place unarmed, when the leopard and other animals started an uproar. The leopard, weighing twice as much as Dochtermann, sprang at him from a corner, buried his teeth in the man's neck and clawed him. Only the arrival of help after the fight had continued several minutes, saved Dochtermann from death.

The story of the attack by the animal was hidden in an incorrectly written certificate of death filed with the department of health. When Dochtermann was taken to Bellevue Hospital a clerk overhead the word "leopard," mistook it for "leprosy," and so filled in the cause of death as the name of the disease. Yesterday, however, the correction was made, and the account of the battle made known.

One of Dochtermann's watchmen called him from his home early in the morning to tell him that the collection of animals stored in the warehouse for a Coney Island amusement company had caused a disturbance and that the vicinity of the warehouse was echoing to their roars.

Dochtermann hurried to the warehouse, at 460 to 468 East Tenth street. Opening the doors against the protests of the watchman, he stepped inside, and, raising an electric torch, started to inspect the place. A loud roar greeted him, and as he stepped forward another pace a mottled body sped through the air and crashed into him. The torch was knocked from his hand and the next instant the animal's teeth had met in his neck and shoulder. The watchman blew a police whistle and a passerby came to his assistance.

Both the watchman and the second man tried to poke the leopard away from Dochtermann with poles. The animal lashed at them with one of his paws and the long, sharp nails narrowly missed the watchman's leg. While the latter was seeking an iron hook Dochtermann, mortally wounded and weakened from loss of blood, was trying to jam his arm down the beast's throat. He had failed when the watchman returned, and the leopard was beginning to shake him when the steel spikes drove him away.

Dochtermann was hurried to Bellevue and his wounds were attended. An infection developed and then he contracted spinal meningitis and pneumonia. Death followed.

FRANCE CLAIMS DEVICE TO PRODUCE FERTILIZER

Paris, Dec. 15.—Germany's claim to lead in the world's production of ammonia essential for keeping up agricultural supremacy has been defied by Dr. Georges Claude, whose researches have resulted in the development of modern processes for liquefying air.

According to Dr. Claude, whose factories and laboratories have been visited by a commission of governmental experts, he is able to obtain pressures fivefold those employed by the synthetic process known in Germany as "Haber's." Under the German process united hydrogen and nitrogen combine to form ammonia, the essentials for sulphates and chlorides which form the basis of modern chemical fertilizers. Dr. Claude's high pressure union of two gases promises to give France at least seven times the amount of sulphate fertilizer from the simple and relatively inexpensive apparatus which scientists say will give French agriculture the independence which has been sought so long.

With fertilizer obtainable from the deposits in Alsace-Lorraine, France will be able even to compete with Germany and South America in exportation to the United States, as nitrogen is obtained from the air as in the Haber process, while hydrogen is supplied by any ordinary illuminating gas apparatus in sufficient quantities to warrant the installation of Claude's apparatus anywhere.

VISCOUNT STEWART WEDS DAUGHTER OF U. S. MILLIONAIRE

London, Dec. 16.—Viscount Stewart, son and heir of the sixth Earl of Castle-Stewart, and Miss Eleanor May Guggenheim, daughter of Solomon R. Guggenheim of New York city, were married here today. The ceremony was performed by Canon David of Coventry, assisted by the Rev. L. S. Stewart, rector of Stewartstown, County Tyrone, Ireland, and was witnessed by more than 100 relatives and intimate friends of the couple.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of the Charles II. period, which was the bridal gown of her mother. It was a hand-woven, pearl-white satin brocade, embroidered with seed pearls and diamonds and had a rose point lace collar, an underskirt of cloth of silver, and a long court train of the same material.

AMENDMENTS ACCEPTED.

New York, Dec. 16.—Three of the four proposed amendments governing the Harmsworth international trophy motorboat race to be held in the United States next summer have been accepted by the American Powerboat Association, it was announced today. The amendments were submitted by the Royal Motor Yacht Club of England.

The amendments accepted stipulate elimination of the use of reverse gears by boats during the race, permission of the winning country to retain the trophy until the next race instead of one year, and permission of the winning club to retain custody of the trophy instead of its being held by the larger governing organization. The amendment rejected provided for over-all measurement to be exclusive of rudders and propellers.

GIRLS' CHOICE OF BOOKS HIT

Librarian Says Younger Set Gets Perverted Life Views From Mushy Novels.

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 15.—Young girls are reading trashy fiction. They don't appreciate good books—not even standard fiction. And as for books dealing with important subjects of the day, they pass them up completely.

This is the opinion of a Boston librarian for urging that younger girls should be taught to read a better class of books than they are reading.

"Girls 15 years old are reading books not fit to be read by even an older person," she said. "They prefer the trashy novels with their impossible plots and questionable situations to the more wholesome stories of standard authors.

Get Wrong Views.

"From these highly-colored and altogether impossible stories they form their views on the great problems of life. After reading a number of such stories dealing with poor but beautiful girls who are rescued in the nick of time from every sin and crime imaginable, by a good, honest man, is it any wonder that these deluded girls have a wrong attitude towards their moral responsibilities.

"Not that I think they should be made to read the classics if they don't wish to, but there is a great field of literature that is not strictly classical, yet is of good sound principles and withal is entertaining.

"There are stories of home life told in a simple, attractive manner, not the welch-rarebit dreams of a writer who thinks only of interesting the morbid-minded. There are stories of girls, interesting and amusing stories, much better for a 15-year-old girl than the sensual, sexual nonsense written by some of the so-called popular authors of the present day.

"Then there are many instructive books written in such a manner that they are as interesting as any fiction and have the added advantage of being true.

Advice to Mothers.

"There are true stories of the war that give the reader as many thrills to the page as any best seller. There are stories written by brave women who were willing to sacrifice all for humanity. Surely such a story is more to be desired than effusion about Gertie, The Mill Girl.

"Mothers should try to direct the reading of their children. They should find out what sort of books they are reading, and if they are not desirable replace them with ones that are. Parents can consult the librarians more than they do, and from them learn what new books are good and what are to be avoided. They can learn from the librarian what books are suitable for certain ages and in this way do much to raise the standard of their children's reading matter."

FEUDAL TENANTS ARE IN REBELLION

Threaten To Seize Farms Unless Owners Abandon Levy On Products.

PARIS, Dec. 16.—Hundreds of farm tenants in the department of the Landes are again threatening to seize the properties they occupy unless the proprietors abandon the ancient system of extorting a large share of the farm products, as well as a percentage of the farmers' yearly income. According to social investigators the movement is being furthered by radicals, who are calling attention to the success of a similar movement in Italy a few months ago, when farms were taken over from their owners, with the semi-official approval of the Government, on the sole condition of a nominal payment made for legal title to the property.

Proprietors in the Landes, however, declared they will fight the movement in Parliament, and mean
