A Murder in Chicago.

Another chapter in the criminal history of Chicago was finished last night in the open street, and another human life has been suddenly and violently sacrificed on the altar of evil impulses. Several years ago there resided in Chicago a young lawyer, of mild manners and excellent promise, named Geo W. Brizee. When the Pike's Peak excitement called hundreds of enterprising young men to that region, Brizee was one of them. Abandoning his profession he adopted the more laborious and ruder one of a miner, with more or less success, gradully acquiring habits of life that probably led to his assassin-like exploit of last night. After a prolonged absence, he returned to this city yesterday, and, for the purpose of seeing the vast improvements which the city had undergone during all the years he was away, he started out, at rather a late hour of the night, for a walk of observation. He soon found himself on Clark street, near Van Buren, where he fell in with John Sayers, better known as "Jewler Jack," a saloon keeper doing business in that vicinity. Although strangers to each other, they entered into conversation, Brizee making inquiries concerning localities with which he was formerly acquainted, and the two walked along towards Quincy street. Officer Shippy, of the First Precinct police, had observed their movements, and when accosted by Brizee as to the locality of the old "Colby House," gave the information and walked on. From this juncture, a dispute seemed to arise between Sayers and Brizee, and presently the officer, then a short distance off, saw the latter draw a large dirk or bowie knife and strike his companion a heavy blow upon the head, Sayers being felled to the ground, and the blood streaming from his wound. The officer immediately secured Brizee and the weapon, and two firemen, passing at the time, picked up the sheath a little distance off. Sayers soon recovered from the blow sufficiently to walk along with the officer and his prisoner to the Armory, although he bled profusely all the way, and was faint from loss of blood after his arrival. Dr Jas A Collins was immediately called to dress the wound, which he did as soon as possible. At that time he did not consider Sayers' injury dangerous, although severe.—Sayers, however, began to sink immediately, and was conveyed to his home, 277½ Clark street, in a hack accompanied by a policeman. But no time elapsed before he became insensible, and death immediately intervened, he having survived the attack but two hours, dying at 3½ o'clock this morning.

An Invitation to Dinner.

It was observed that a certain covetous rich man never invited any one to dine with him. 'I'll lay a wager,' said a way, 'I get an invitation from him.'

The wager being accepted, he goes the next day to the rich man's house about the time he was to dine, and tells the servant he must speak with the master immediately, for he can same him a thousand pounds.

Out came the master. 'What is that, sir, you can save me a thousand pounds?'

'Yes, sir, I can, but I see you are at dinner; I will go away, and call again.'

'Oh, pray, sir, come in and take dinner with me.'

'It shall be troublesome.'

'Not at all.'

The invitation was accepted. As soon as the dinner was over and the family retired, 'Well, sir,' said the man of the house, 'now to your business. Pray let me know how I am to save a thousand pounds?'

'Well, sir, I hear you have a daughter to dispose of in marriage.'

'I have, sir.'

'And you intend to portion her with ten thousand pounds?'

'I do sir.'

'Why, then, sir, let me have her, and I will take her with nine thousand.'

The master of the house arose in a passion, and kicked him out of doors.

Kissing a Bachelor.

A correspondent relates the following incident:—"We have a friend—a bachelor friend—very fond of the society of the ladies, but extremely modest and diffident withal.—A few evenings since he went to make a call upon an acquaintance who had recently taken to himself a wife, young and beautiful, and, as a matter of course, overflowing with affection for her husband. Now this lovely wife of a week, like all other wives, could scarcely survive the brief absence of her husband for the discharge of his business, and always upon his return met him upon the threshold, and smothered him with kisses. It so happened, when our friend called, that the husband was absent, but was momentarily expected by the fond and anxious wife. She heard his footfall upon the step, and supposing it to be her husband, rushed forth to meet him; and he had scarcely laid his hand upon the bell-pull before the door flew open, and his neck was encircled by a pair of white arms, and burning kisses fell thick and fast upon his lips and cheeks—while a full and throbbing breast was strained to his. Here was a trying situation for a diffident man, and our friend came near to fainting on the spot; but, fortunately, the lady discovered her mistake in season to prevent such a melancholy event, and he escaped more dead than alive. The last we saw of him, he was leaning against a tree, fanning himself with his sombrero, in order to recover strength to regain his lodgings.—[New York Home Journal.

The N. Y. Sun has the following on the advantages of advertising:—"To properly appreciate the value of advertising, over other methods of making one's business known to the community, we have only to instance the many large fortunes that have been derived from a systematic course of advertising a good article in the columns of newspapers.—Benjamin Brandreth, who is now worth half a million of dollars, attributes his success to advertising, which began with small notices in the Sun. Dr. Townsend, and many others, are living examples. Shortly after the war commenced Mr. Barnum concluded that his expenses must be curtailed, and accordingly gave orders to one of his agents that his advertisments in the Sun must be cut down one half. A few days later the 'great showman' discovered that his daily receipts were growing 'smaller by degrees and beautifully less.' He doubled his attractions, but still his receipts were not increased. The matter became serious, and troubled Mr. Barnum so much that it disturbed his slumbers. He gave orders to double the size of the advertisments. It was done, and the result, as related by Barnum himself, was an increase of $150 in his receipts the first week, and $250 per week subsequently. Since then he has never attempted to economize by reducing the amount paid for his advertisments."

A Postmaster stationed at the delivery window of a post office, serving the impatient throng without, was suddenly confronted by a countenance flaming with wrath; which countenance was that of a well known gentleman by the name of M—— H——, who had elbowed his way through the crowd, demanding justice. Handing the Postmaster a British letter marked "unpaid, 25c." M—— H—— exclaimed in a tone of righteous indignation, "Here, sir, is a letter that I paid 25 cints for out of my own pocket, and the letter is from Pat Cosgrove, me cousin in old Ireland, and Pat is as honest a boy as iver saw daylight, and Pat says inside the letter, that he paid the postage, and so some raskill has cheated me, and I mane to make him smart for't, and I'll be obleiged to you if you'd tell me who to sue. Bedad, it isn't me that's going to put up with such rashcality." Here he brought down his shillaley on the floor, to the imminent danger of his neighbor's toes, suggestive of a fixed determination to have satisfaction from the unknown defrauder. The postmaster informed him that if any mistake had occured the Post Office Department in England was to blame, and therefore the party to be sued.—"Is it the British Government?" enquired he.—"Certainly" was the reply. M—— H—— settled his hat over his eyes, remarking as he did so, "it's all up wid my 25 cents."—Ten years among bags.

Mr. Vice-President Johnson made a very boozy speech at the inaugural ceremony. Cause—too much wine.

Maple Sugar Making.

In answer to a request last month from practical sugar makers, a gentleman writes to the American Agriculturist as follows:—"I make from 1,400 to 2,000 pounds of maple sugar per year, according to the flow of sap. First, for the spouts: I think the sumach best, the pith of which can easily be burned out with a piece of wire the proper size. The spouts are then sharpened to fit a ½ inch bit (a little smaller will answer as well,) and put two spouts in a tree, unless the tree is quite small. When the holes become dry, I ream out the holes with a pod bit a little larger than the first, and the sap will often flow as freely as at first. The sap is gathered and boiled in sheet iron evaporators, the best of which I think are made of two sheets rivited lengthwise, and one across the end; this is turned up six inches, and if made of good iron, with a ¼ inch wire put in around the top, or a strip of band iron 1 inch wide and ¼ inch thick riveted around in place of the wire, it will need no other support. Bars of iron should not be put under the pan, as they would cause it to burn out much sooner. An evaporater made this way, of good material and well taken care of, will last fifteen years. The syrup should be boiled until it will break in scales from a sheet iron dipper. Then strain through a flannel into a tub the largest at the bottom, and let stand a few hours to settle. Milk may be used to clarify the syrup when sugared off. The milk should be put in when the syrup is cool, and thoroughly mixed with it. A good vessel to finish off sugar is made also of sheet iron, 2½ feet long, 14 inches wide on the bottom, and 1 foot high—a little larger on the top—with wire put in to strenghed it, and handles on the ends.

"A very nice way to prepare sugar for market is to run in moulds made in boards of cherry (which I think best,) or good pine will do. They are made with 1½ inches on the bottom and enough larger at the top to make them come out readily, and nearly one inch deep. It should take about twenty such cakes to make a pound. Pour hot water over the boards, and then let them get nearly dry.—The sugar should be done quite dry, and then stirred until it is just cool enough to run smoothly. Let it stand in the moulds until nearly cold, then turn over and rap on the board, and they will come out nicely, and can be packed in boxes for market. Saleratus and candle boxes for packing in can usually be bought at the stores and groceries cheaper than the new boxes can be made."

Mother and Child Drowned in a Cistern.—The Peoria Transcript says that a week ago last Saturday a Mrs. Lucretia Ashburn and child, residing in Tremont township, Tazwell county, met their death in the following manner. Her child, an infant 18 months old, while playing in the yard, fell into the cistern. Mrs. A. tied a rope around her waist, and went down to get it out, but was unable to return. Her two children, aged 4 and 6 years, at her request threw down a chair, churn and a plank, but were too young to go for assistance, and the unfortunate mother and child were drowned. The mother had placed the body of the babe in the churn no doubt thinking it would be safe, and then worn out with her efforts, sank below the surface. When her husband came home, the two children told him that the baby was in the cistern, and on going to see, and drawing up the rope, he found the dead bodies of his wife and child.

Throwing Away their Lives.—The Montreal 'Herald' says that since the beginning of the war no fewer than 40,000 Canadians have joined the Federal army, 30,000 of whom are known to have been French Canadians. It would be interesting to know how many of these have sacrificed their lives in a quarrel in which they had no right to interfere; but we may safely presume that not one in four now lives.

Sacrilege.—Some miscreants entered the old Methodist Church on King street, one evening during the past week, and broke open three cash boxes placed there for Missionary purposes. Fortunately the box which contained the largest sum ($67) had been emptied by the Superintendent the night previous. The thieves took all the silver from the other two boxes, leaving the copper.—[Hamilton Spectator.

Terrible Death in a Railroad Car.—The Buffalo papers give the following particulars of the death of Mr. Godfrey Schultz of that city:—He was on his way to Warren, Pa., when a collison took place and he grasped his carpet bag, and essayed to make his escape from the car. Just then the baggage car came crashing in through the car he occupied, and before he could release himself he was jammed in between two seats. The stove was upset, and in a moment the car was in flames. Every effort was made to release him from his frightful position, but without avail. Large quantities of snow were thrown in through the window of the burning car, and with desperate energy he stooped down, gathered it with his hands, and applied it to his face and body. But the merciless flames continued to wrap the unfortunate man in their folds, and for twenty minutes he was clothed in fire before the soul deserted the veriest cinder of a body.

Oil Items.

A Chatham Planet correspondent writes:—"The Colville farm, sold a short time since for $10,700, to Mr. Benjamin of Montreal, has changed hands several times, the last transfer being from Mr Munson, of Oil Springs, to Messrs. Messmore & Co., of New York, at $35,000. The adjoining 48 acres, secured by Messrs. Duncan & Rose at an early date, from Mr Atwell, at $5,500, is now largely increased in value, the sum of $8,500 being offered for it at time of transfer. Mr. Sualwell sold 30 acres at $200 per acre to Messrs. Jordan, Lawrence & Co., of Adrian. Mr. Lick's well is yielding at the rate of at least 40 barrels per day, and more if the power can be kept up."

A remarkable surgical operation has just been performed in New York, viz., the removal of the lower jaw for necrosis, induced by exposure to the fumes of lucifer matches,—the patient, a boy of twelve years of age, having been employed in match-making. Hardly a fortnight has elapsed since the operation and the boy is said to be doing well, being able to walk out in the air, and his speedy perfect recovery is certain.

The Negro Troops.—The Richmond Sentinel of Monday says:—"Both Houses of the Virginia Legislature have concurred in Congress to support the policy of introducing negroes as soldiers in the field. The resolutions take the broadest grounds, and we trust the Confederate Senate well now act without delay."

A few days ago, at Dalmellington station, Ayrshire, an elder Irishwoman, who arrived a few minutes after the train had started, set off to run after it. She of course soon came to a halt, abusing the unaccommodating engine, and adding with a nate brogue.—Paugh. The great big ugly lump, when she gets as ould as me, bedad she won't run so quick!

"That was a horrible affair—the murder of Dean, and the sealing up of his remains in a tin box!" "What Dean?" asked half a dozen voices at once. "Sar Deen."

A man very much intoxicated was sent to prison. "Why don't you bail him out? inquired a bystander. "Bale him out!" exclaimed the other; "you couldn't pump him out!"

The Fenians!—A Boston telegram says: A great meeting of the friends of Irish nationality was held last Thursday night in Faneuil Hall, under the auspices of the Fenian brotherhood, at which speeches were made by Col. Mathony, head centre of the brotherhood of the United States; Captain R. R. Walsh, of Penn. and A. P. Sernalt, of Boston; the meeting adopted resolutions ratifying the proceedings and resolutions of the late Fenian congress held in Cincicatti. Great enthusiasm prevailed.

A notorious miser, having heard a very eloquent charity sermons, exclaimed: "This sermon strongly proves the necessity of alms. I have almost a mind to turn beggar.
