THE APPLE BLOSSOM.

BY JANE NIXON.

O bloom of the apple so bright!
Rich rose-bloom, dissolving in white!
When Phœbus's brush
Wrought thy beautiful blush,
It must have been dipped in the dawn's tender flush.
Of softest, most exquisite light.

What charm art thou!
The blossom that hangs on the bough!
That sweet cowslip-bell
A wild entry might fell,
Of thy fair form on the sward, where thy petals so all
Adorn its grass Malachite brow.

He led pretty Mab by the hand
To trip with his light fairy band
Out, on Blossom—how new
While the morning dew sings,
And the bats wheel in time, with their broad flapping wings,
Till they hear the fays home to their fane.

O bloom of the apple! my rhyme
Should be read after day's golden prime,
When flowers go to sleep
And pale stars rise and peep,
Into brooks, where spirits a long royal revel might keep,
And fairy bells softly chime!!

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Memoranda for young ladies: An Iowa Court holds that a promise to marry must be in writing in order to bind.

The merchants of Thomastown, Ga., play marbles and settles any little disputes about the game by a resort to knives.

A woman has just died in DeKalb Co., Ga., leaving four hundred living descendants. And her name it was Jones.

The Springfield Republican very properly pitchforks a postmaster, in one of the neighboring towns, who can't distribute the mails till he has read all the postal cards.

In clearing out an old house at Americus, Ga., the other day, four hundred and seventy-five bats were captured, quite a respectable battalion.

Thieves in Augusta, Me., appear to be hard up for employment. One of them lately stole a coffin, which is regarded there as a grave offence for any one to undertake.

Boss Tweed spends the time not required by his duties as nurse in reading his Bible. If he had commenced earlier in life he might not have been where he now is.

Two express trains, rushing ahead on a single track at the rate of twenty miles an hour very naturally got up a collision, Saturday, on the Erie road. Even an idiot couldn't call this an "accident."

A forthcoming book by Julia A. Kempshall, announced by the Lippincotts, has a title which smacks of something clever: "What a Boy! I. What shall I do with him? II. What will he do with himself? III. Who is to blame for the consequences?"

Claiborne county, Miss., is horrified by the marriage of a young white lady, belonging to an influential Democratic family, to Hon. Hawkins Smith, colored representative of the county.

What slaughter of the innocents. Last week, of 790 deaths in New York city, 405 were of infants under a year old. Most of these deaths occurred in the overcrowded quarters of the city, of course.

New York policemen wear two pairs of pants as a precaution against hydrophobia, but we think it is the dogs which need protection. Biting a New York policeman ought to kill any respectable canine.—Detroit Press.

Rather ominous. The warehouse which fell in Boston the other day was a new five-story affair, "constructed" on the site of one which went down in the great fire. Now that it is destructed, it is a pertinent query whether this is the sort of shell that has been put over the famous burned district there!

They get up stupendous jokes in Texas. Recently the entire police force of Jefferson was arraigned for vagrancy in the Mayor's Court. The charge was preferred by the families of the policemen, who stated that the parties arraigned had no visible means of support, having received but $12 from the city during five months.

From the complete reports of the life insurance companies and of the Insurance Commissioners of the various States, it is found that during the last year 201,366 policies were issued, and 150,663 policies terminated, as follows: By death, 8,765; by expiry, 227; by change, 7,833; by discontinuance and non-payment of premium, 133,137.

Mark Twain's house in Hartford is described as outlandishly rakish, with unexpected balconies jutting out at every turn, and unprovoked staircases running irregularly up the outside. The whole structure, brick and wood, is painted the darkest Indian red, and has a sort of drawbridge in the rear reaching over to Warner's house, and a moat for the children to be occasionally rescued from.

What have Chicago women done that their corns should be trodden on continually. The latest insult offered them is the statement of an exchange that when a Chicago woman feels particularly spiteful toward mankind she sleeps with her feet out of the window so as to prevent people from seeing the comet.

The Marr family of Battle Creek, Mich., are elated at the information that they are heirs to part of a $34,000,000 estate in Scotland, and they are going to hold a meeting as a natural consequence. Something is more than likely to mar their hopes, however, as those fortunes in Europe are, "with few exceptions, merely "castles in Spain."

Our thanks are due and freely given to our enterprising young merchant, Richard Dunn, for that bottle of excellent Kentucky whiskey. It has kept our spirit up excellently during this, our loneliest week, and we recommend the contents of the barrels of like and even better stuff to our bachelor community who are after pleasing partners to while away their solitude.—Las Vegas Gazette.

GENERAL.

A man in danger of being hanged said that of all games of his childhood skipping the rope would be most agreeable.

France allows its soldiers to work for farmers during harvest time. The price fixed upon this year is thirty cents a day and board.

An octogenarian Waterloo hero of Liverpool has just had a French musket ball extracted from his body after affording it shelter for sixty years.

It is an admitted fact in China and Japan that the older the tree the better the tea. The shrubs which supply the nobles of Japan with their favorite beverage are said to be in many instances 500 years old.

Big burly butchers in England are now called "Sir Roger" by the boys and other impertinent persons, for which name they have to thank the Wapping butcher, Orton.

If you have been picking or handling acid fruit and have stained your hands, wash them in clear water, wipe them lightly, and while they are yet moist strike a match and shut your hands around it so as to catch the smoke, and the stain will disappear.

Scarcely a week passes without the record of some wonderful surgical operation. Sally Brown was lately taken in hand, had a broken knee and dislocated rib taken out, and new ones put in, and she is now as good as ever. It may not injure the story much to add that Sally is a canal boat.

"Mr. Robertson's only qualifications for a Government berth are that he is a Scotchman, a Grit, and that he was for a time Mackenzie's landlord," says an exchange. His "only qualifications," indeed. Surely it is not expected that every man who gets a Grit appointment shall be Mackenzie's father-in-law or his aunt. The thing's impossible.—Toronto Sun.

Before and after—It is always the same story! The other day a lively individual from the rural districts, having considerable money in his possession and being moderately drunk, was warned by a policeman to take care of himself. To which the self-confident bacchanal responded, "You bet I will! Why, Mister, I'm chain lightning rolled up in a ball and stuck full of red hot bowie-knives. I'm a thunder bolt from Sussex; I'm a regular rip-up thunder bolt! Folks want to let me alone, they do!" Alas! that such a dream of invincibility should be dissipated! When the next morning dawned, the drinker, where was he? Well, he was discovered by the same policeman fast asleep in a coal-shed. His eyes were in mourning, and there was a non-natural hole in his head. Watch gone! Money gone! The policeman, arousing the slumberer, with a touch of irony in his tone, inquired: "Aren't you the Thunderbolt from Sussex?" Then the Thunderbolt sat up and slowly and sadly replied: "No, I haint zackly a thunderbolt, but I'm the durned fool who thought he was."

The Story of Five Aces.

It was a story of five aces, says an exchange. It was at the Hot Springs of Arkansas, where only gentlemen and ladies—not ordinary men and women—go. Ephraim Taggart, of Mississippi, and Colonel Charles Gordon, of Galveston, Texas, were there, and they were engaged in a pleasant game of cards. Mr. Taggart lost all his money, and then, with two aces in his hand, put up his watch against $200, and called. The colonel, with much suavity, and a like amount or presence of mind, showed three aces, and immediately raked in the watch. Then, for some remarkable reason, Ephraim Taggart got angry and said there had been cheating; he never in his life before knew that a single pack or deck of cards had five aces. Colonel Gordon had no time to argue the matter, however. He could simply see the astonishing fact that he had been insulted by a Mississippian. Most men, it strikes us, would have stopped to reflect how the extra ace came in the miserable pack. Colonel Gordon merely remarked that he had been insulted, and, drawing a knife, stabbed Ephraim Taggart to the heart, quietly remarking, as he wiped the blood from his knife, that he guessed that would settle it. It was a most dignified argument from beginning to end on the part of Colonel Gordon. That excellent man could see nothing, could listen to nothing but the astounding fact that his honor had been insulted, and could reach no conclusion but the one at the point of his knife—sometimes rudely mentioned as murder. The refined society at the Hot Springs quite unanimously conceived it a duty, however, to call up Colonel Gordon at a court-martial. There the Colonel stopped to consider the matter in several of its bearings, and magnanimously explained. There were five aces in the pack—that nobody could deny. But had there never been similar accidents before? How should he know that his opponent in the game held the extra ace? He was not a clairvoyant and he did not pretend to any extra wisdom at cards. He was a gentleman and he simply knew that his honor had been at stake. He had played a friendly game with Ephraim Taggart, and that person had charged him with cheating. What might a gentleman do? His hearers must reflect that murder was his only refuge from a blasted character. The statement, we need hardly remark, had its appropriate effect. The court-martial gently censured Col. Gordon for having been "over-hasty in defending his honor," and then let him go; first, however, we doubt not, inviting him to a supper, and the next day the body of the too thoughtless and unhappy Ephraim Taggart was gently laid in the most convenient graveyard. And we shall not visit the Hot Springs of Arkansas this year. The weather is too warm and the journey too long and dusty.

Rewarding Renegades.

It would seem that under the Radical Government of the Dominion none save traitors and renegades are to receive rewards of public contracts. Ross, Cowan, Cartwright, Burpee and others, who betrayed their political friends, now draw $7,000 per annum each from the public exchequer, whilst Goudge and Forbes are squabbling over the Halifax collectorship, and David Glass is howling for the Pacific Telegraph contract. It is now said that Major Walker, M. P. for London, another political recreant, if not worse, is the main wire-puller of the Glass and Sifton tender. It is simply disgraceful that members of Parliament should thus be allowed to tinker in Government contracts and use the influence that should belong to their constituents simply to promote their own self-interest. With R. H. Cook, M. P., for North Simcoe, as the financial sleeping partner of the Dawson road contract, and the recreant hypocrite, Major Walker, M. P. for London, as the partner of Glass & Sifton in the telegraph contract, the country can expect nothing else than continued corruption and increased public expenditure. Poor Evans! he worked in East Middlesex for 15 years, and now that his party is in power, his life-long opponent, David Glass, has the audacity to come to Ottawa and claim his reward. Or treachery, until James Evans remains at home forgotten and spurned by the men he aided in placing in the Treasury Benches! Twelve months ago David Glass was on his knees begging favors of the late Government, and to day he is just as meek an applicant at the shrine of the Radical Administration; and yet we are told this is Reform!—Ottawa Citizen.
