"It Saved My Life"

Is a common expression, often heard from those who have realized, by personal use, the curative powers of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. "I cannot say enough in praise of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, believing as I do that, but for its use, I should long since have died from lung troubles.—E. Bragdon, Palestine, Tex.

About six months ago I had a severe Hemorrhage of the Lungs, brought on by a distressing Cough, which deprived me of sleep and rest. I had used various cough balsams and expectorants, without obtaining relief. A friend advised me to try

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

I did so, and am happy to say that it helped me at once. By continued use this medicine cured my cough, and, I am satisfied, saved my life.—Mrs. E. Coburn, 18 Second st., Lowell, Mass.

I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for over a year, and sincerely believe I should have been in my grave, had it not been for this medicine. It has cured me of a dangerous affection of the lungs, for which I had almost despaired of ever finding a remedy.—D. A. McMullen, Windsor, Province of Ontario.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved my life. Two years ago I took a very severe Cold which settled on my lungs. I consulted physicians, and took the remedies they prescribed, but failed to obtain relief until I began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. Two bottles of this medicine completely restored my health.—Lizzie M. Allen, West Lancaster, Ohio.

A Great Cause of Human Misery
In the Loss of MANHOOD

We have recently published a new edition of Dr. Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical and permanent cure (without medicine) of Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Inoapacity, Impediments to Marriage, etc., resulting from excesses.

Price, in a sealed envelope, only 6 cents, or two postage stamps.

The celebrated author in this admirable Essay, clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicines or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

This lecture should be in the hands of every youth and every man in the land.

Address,
The Culverwell Medical Co.,
41 Ann St., New York.
Post Office Box, 450.

NOVA SCOTIA SPORTSMEN Attention!

I beg to call your attention to the RODS and FLIES I am manufacturing. The rods are as far superior to the ordinary wooden Rod, as the Breech Loader is to the percussion gun, and is sold at prices that defy competition. These Rods are made on the same principles as the Split Bamboo Rods, only my Rod is made of wood instead of cane. The woods, Lancewood and Greenheart, the two best woods known for rod making, are used in the construction of my rods in sections with silk between joints, making a wonderfully light and powerful rod, being superior to split bamboo, for in the enamel is the strength of a bamboo rod and that once chipped the rod is done. My $10 rod can be subjected to the roughest usage without injury. I will test my rod with any now manufactured.

PRICE LIST.

Combination Rod full nickle finish 1 tip	$10.00

Shortening the Baby.

Our baby now is four months old,
A bonnie boy, with hair like gold;
And his long clothes are put away—
For Mother shortened him to-day.

He has the loveliest of frocks,
All trimmed with lace, and two pink socks
That Father bought, the best by far
And prettiest in the whole bazar.

And now the rogue can kick about;
His little feet go in and out
As though they could not rest, and he
Is just as happy as can be.

Besides, he feels quite proud to-day
With all his long clothes put away,
And dress so fine! And then, you know,
We praise the boy, and love him so!

His grandmamma must see him soon;
We all will go this afternoon,
And take the pet, stay for tea,—
And what a riot there will be!

At first perhaps, she may not know
The baby, he has dwindled so;
But let her guess, and do not say
That Mother shortened him to-day!

A Lucky Opal.

I felt horribly cheap and crushed as I came out of Deacon Fairmeadow's fine house on a bright Winter morning, and made a movement to tear my opal ring from my finger and grind it under my heel.

What mad fatuity had impelled me to wear it on this occasion of all others? I had asked for the hand of the Deacon's only daughter, Mabel, whose heart was already mine, and had been coldly, and almost contemptuously shown to the door by the masterly old gentleman in person.

'I will credit you, sir, with being merely a harmless lunatic,' was one of his parting remarks. 'Neither my daughter nor my daughter's portion is for a poor devil of a doctor without reputation of a baker's half dozen of patients to bless himself with. The idea is preposterous. Make a name for yourself, show some signs of conquering a success, and the case may be different. As it is, you may cease your visits to my house. Good morning sir.'

That was the Deacon's style. Self-made old curmudgeon, with his broad acres and assured comforts around him, brutal plain-speaking was his forte. It is a luxury that only wealthy and self-made men can afford.

Small comfort, to me, at least, as I passed through the garden gate, that Mabel's woeful, tear-stained little face peered sadly after me from one of the upper windows. True, she might love me, but she none the less regarded her father as a sort of Jovian will-subjector and bolt dispenser, whose word was no more to be gainsaid than the fiat of fate, and the paternal authority would doubtless be enforced to the bitter end. She had no fond mother to help her in this adverse stoke, and her loving little heart was probably destined to emotional shipwreck.

I felt, I knew this, as I strode away desperately, inwardly cursing myself in the most senseless and childish manner for having worn my opal ring. It was an heirloom, and my dear old mother's last words in consigning it to my possession, a short time before leaving me an orphan, recurred to me at that very moment.

'Never believe in the common report that the opal is an unlucky stone,' she had said. 'That self-same ring has been in my father's family for many generations, and has never brought other than good fortune to the wearer. Reserve its use for every critical enterprise in which you are about to engage, my son; and God bless you!'

Poor, good, dear, superstitious, and mistaken old soul! Had I not proved the malignity of the gem this very morning, in the most critical enterprise of my career? At all events, what sort of fortune had it brought me? Confusion, defeat, humiliation and despair.

By no means naturally superstitious myself, I yet began to think that there was a fatality in the ring. But common report had been right, and my poor mother wrong, for was not Mabel lost to me? Yes, without a doubt my dream of love was over and done. Mabel would hold out for a while but the stern old father's will-power would have away in the end. My image would fade from her heart, and the suit of that gilded puppy, Dick Pestle—the only son of Dr. Pestle, my Esculapian rival in this village—would at last prevail. I ground my teeth in impotent rage. In love, as in the medical art, I was destined to nothing but defeat.

In this unenviable mood I entered my modest little office, and threw myself in my easy chair. No message on the office slate, as a matter of course. How mean, cheap and discouraging the furniture of the cosy little den looked! The consulting chair confronted me with an emptiness that was exasperating. My surgical instruments looked at me from out of their half-open case with a sort of reproachfulness in their steely glitter. 'Are we to rust unused for ever? they seem to murmur. 'Was it for this inglorious ease that you brought us from the great city, with your diploma in your pocket, three years ago, with high hope in your heart, and prospective fees in your brain?'

My medicine-case and prescription-pad seemed to rebuke me with no less bitterness and irony. Moreover, Deacon Fairmeadow's taunt as to my baker's half-dozen of patients—supposing that number equivalent to six and a half, had chanced to strike the mark with painful accuracy. I had at that time just exactly six and a half in my wide circuit—six adults and a little two-year-old invalid, who might count as a moiety, and the latter had only been resigned to me after being given up as a hopeless case by the majority of the medical fraternity in New Jersey. Such was my despair, that I seriously thought of tearing down my signboard, setting fire to my office—and that without being insured—and so making an end.

But just then the cheating rainbow twinkle of the opal on the third finger of my left hand once more caught my eye. I made a motion to pull it off and throw it in the stove, when a feeling of compunction restrained me.

'No,' thought I. 'Thou hast apparently brought me irreparable misfortune, old ring; but as misfortune and I may henceforth be inseparable, so shalt thou remain with me to the last!'

The weather was fine, and almost spring-like. I determined to take a long tramp over the half-frozen level roads, and get the better of my despondency at any cost.

When about to pass Deacon Fairmeadow's house once more, I partly drew back. The Deacon's carriage was at the gate, and Mr. Fairmeadow was in the act of handing his daughter into it, while Dick Pestle, grinning from ear to ear, was bowing and scraping around them like the Frenchified little jackanapes that he was. Mabel was looking very sad, but had not yet noticed my approach.

I really think that I would have turned back but at that moment the terrible cry of 'mad dog! mad dog!' was heard, just round the street corner at which they were standing, and there was an alarming hubbub of shouting men, yelling urchins, and barking curs in the air.

I saw Mabel pause, paralyzed with fear, at the side of the carriage, while her father stood, white, irresolute, with his hand on his horse's neck, and at the same instant little Dick Pestle turned on his high heels in an agony of trepidation, and fled like a scared cat. The next instant the rabid dog—a huge, fluffy animal, with lolling tongue and crazy eyes—came into view, turning the corner in a flash, and bounding open-mouthed, straight at Mabel Fairmeadow.

I had no weapon, not as much as a walking stick, and I was myself almost petrified with horror, and how I did it I never exactly knew, but somehow I darted between the animal and Mabel and got in a tremendous kick against its ribs with the toe of my heavy boot. Then I lost my balance, and fell headlong at the young woman's feet, also overturning her in my fall.

When I regained my feet the danger was to all appearance past. The mad dog had just been shot dead by a constable, and the mob were rejoicing over the carcass but a short distance away. Mabel had also recovered her equilibrium, and still white and trembling, was supported by her father, whose agitation likewise remained; while Dick Prestle was returning from his inglorious fight, accompanied by old Prestle, his father. There was some blood upon my left hand, and my ring-finger felt a little stiff, but I was instinctively aware that the rabid brute had not injured me.

Why then, was Mabel still so terrified, and her father's agitation even greater than at the extremity of the peril? Suddenly I noticed that the gaiter of Mabel's exquisite right foot had been ripped down at the side and that the stocking at the instep was stained with blood.

Then the terrible revelation seemed to flash upon me. The dog had succeeded in biting her—a fatal scratch must have been inflicted just at the instant of my rushing to the rescue. Yes; that seemed the only explanation, and her terrified cry at this juncture: 'Oh, dear! he must have bitten me. I am sure of it!' seemed confirmatory of the dreadful truth.

I hurried up to her just as old Prestle and his cowardly son likewise approached.

'It seemed that I was too late, after all!' I faltered out. 'Cauterization is the first thing. After that, I have a theory of my own for cases of this kind, which I hope to prove efficacious.'

But the Deacon brusquely waved me back.

'I thank you, sir, for your courageous attempt,' said he. 'But your treatment is not to be thought of. You are as yet too young and experienced, sir. Dr. Prestle, you are just in time.

Then the two old gentleman helped Mabel to the house—even the craven Dick Prestle following complacently and grinning at my discomfort—and I was left in the cold, staring after them like a fool.

I returned to my little office as one stunned. Nevertheless, I took off my ring, and, while laving my bruised hand, fell once more to amathematizing the unlucky opal, as I considered it. But here was a mystery. My hand had been considerably contused by my fall, but there was no sign of a scratch or abrasion of any sort. Whence, then, the blood that was still on the ring.

I carefully studied the rough edges of its setting. The blood-stain was still upon it, and what appeared to be a faint shred of flesh adhering. Then it occurred to me to examine it microscopically. As I did so, another revelation, accompanied by a great feeling of relief, rushed into my mind.

I hastily arose, washed the ring, dried it, returned it caressingly to my finger, and set out forthwith for Deacon Fairmeadow's house, with a renewed and mighty hope knocking at my heart.

'I shall still retain and love thee, my opal!' I muttered to myself. 'Heaven grant it may prove that my dear old mother was right, after all, in trusting in thee against age-long calumny and ill report. At all events, old heir-loom, thy malevolence or beneficence, as the case may be, shall now be put to the proof.'

I reached the house just as Dr. Prestle was being ushered out of it by Mr. Fairmeadow. They both looked perturbed and anxious, and the Deacon eagerly signed me to approach as soon as he caught sight of me.

'Dr. Brightly,' said he. 'There is no doubt that my daughter was scratched by the rabid brute before you rushed so heroically to the rescue. Dr. Pestle is sure of it, and has already cauterized the wound. But my daughter is still beside herself with fear—has, in fact, given herself up as irretrievably doomed—and Dr. Pestle is hopeless of saving her unless her alarm can be allayed. You spoke of having a theory of your own in cases of this appalling nature. Do you think it can be of avail?'

I well understood Mabel's excitable temperament, and the frenzy of alarm that was possessing her. It was in the midst of the hydrophobic epidemic prevailing at Newark, and elsewhere in New Jersey. The six little bitten boys had just been sent to France to undergo the treatment of Monsieur Pasteur, and, in fact, the whole country was interested and fevered. Hydrophobia was in the very air. Timid persons were fearful of even the canine glance; unwonted barks or yelps brought on the shivers, and the fact of a strange dog showing its teeth was positively terrifying. I could readily appreciate the extent to which my poor darling had imbibed the popular alarm. And yet I had the hardihood to respond to her father's appeal with a smile of quiet self-confidence.

'I not only cheerfully undertake the case at once, sir, said I, 'but I also guarantee a cure.'

My confidence was infectious, at least with the Deacon.

'What may your theory of treatment be?' he inquired.

I hesitated, and then, with a bold originality, replied:

'It lies in the virtue of a little stone—of an opal.'

And I exhibited my ring, causing its irridescence to wink prismatically in the sunshine.

Old Pestle emitted a sort of derisive snort.

'Ha,' he ejaculated. 'I have heard of mad-stones before, but never yet of a mad opal. Why, sir, you are already mad yourself—mad as a hatter—crazy as a bedbug.'

This complimentary language was altogether wasted upon me.

'My first care, sir,' said I still addressing Mr. Fairmeadow, 'shall be to quiet the patient's nerves—inspire her with confidence—relieve her of all doubt as to the beneficial results of my treatment; and this I shall effect with no other means than the powerful little stone sparkling in this ring. Its virtue is wonderful.'

'Well, if you effect that, it will be more than I hope for, and far more than Dr. Prestle has succeeded in doing, be your agency what it may,' said the Deacon. 'Come, let no more time be lost.'

I accompanied him into the house, followed by Dr. Prestle and his idiot of a son, who had by this time put in appearance from somewhere or other.

I insisted on being left alone with the patient. She was reclining in an invalid's chair in her own room, with her bandaged foot supported by a pillow. The extremity of her fright had not been exaggerated. She was simply distracted—in an apathy of fear. Her condition, indeed, was so deplorable that she hardly noticed my presence, but lay there gazing vaguely at me, with dilated eyes, quivering lips, and a face like chalk.

'I have come to save you,' said I, pressing her hand. 'Do you not have confidence in me?' And I straightway began unbandaging her foot.

'Thank you for coming, George; but there is no hope for me,' she murmured. 'Even your love and skill can be of no avail. The mad dog's teeth scratched me ere you could interpose. I have read these terrible accounts in the newspapers. The poison is already in my veins. I am lost.'

'Not at all, if you will only try and not be frightened to death,' said I cheerfully; and her I examined the scratch on her foot, which had been skilfully cauterized.

'Now, listen to me, Mabel. Suppose I should at once relieve you of all anxiety as to the consequence of this scratch. Do you think that would help you?'

'Yes, dear,' was her trembling reply. 'But that would be impossible.'

'Nonsense,' said I. 'Here's a mad-stone—an opal talisman—that is going to effect your restoration like magic.' I slipped off the ring, and handed it to her. 'Consider that opal well, my darling.'

She was mystified, which was a good sign, on the principle that any change was for the better.

'But this is not the first time I have seen it,' said she. 'You have often shown me the stone.'

'True, but there is a little romance connected with it, that is necessary for you to know, in order to feel its magical properties. Listen.'

I had by this time bandaged the foot, and now began to pour a strange story into her ear in low earnest tones.

As I proceeded, the set look of horror faded out of her sweet eyes, her breath came and went, the color returned to her lovely cheeks, and when I had finished she was almost radiant with the vigor of hope restored.

'Can it be possible?' she exclaimed. 'You assure me of this?'

'I do, by the love I bear you.'

'Oh, then, I believe you. Leave me some sort of a prescription for form's sake, George—together with the opal, of course—and then tell my father that I am much better. Wait a minute. You may kiss me, too; that is, if you think I can bear the additional excitement.'

It may not have been strictly professional, but nevertheless I ran the risk of enduring it.

A moment later both Mr. Fairmeadow and the old doctor entered the room, in astonishment at the change that had been effected in the patient. The grinning puppy, Dick, would have followed them in, but that I assumed the responsibility of waving him back from the door with a gesture that he could neither mistake nor defy.

'This is simply marvellous,' said the Deacon, stroking his daughter's pretty head. 'What, have you really got over your fright, my dear?'

'Yes,' said Mabel, with much sprightliness, while pressing the opal to her lips. 'It is this wonderful mad stone that has done it, I suppose. At all events I feel perfect confidence in the medicine Dr. Brightly has prescribed for me. I don't believe I shall have the hydrophobia at all.'

The Deacon looked yet more astonished and delighted. So much, in fact that when old Prestle gave another snort and began unpacking his medicine case, he waved him back a little impatiently.

'No, no, doctor,' said he. 'You have given up the case once, and I rather think I shall leave it to young Dr. Brightly's hands now. Mad stone or no mad stone, fair play is a jewel and the young fellow shall not be cheated out of his chance.'

He then bowed the old doctor out of the room, and a few minutes later I had the satisfaction of hearing him say to me, when taking my leave on the porch:

'Young man, there appears to be more in you, than I was willing to credit you with this morning, when you called on a rather different errand. Let by-gones be by-gones. Anyway, there is my hand, sir, and if you succeed in curing my daughter, I will cheerfully add liers into the bargain. Bless me, we old fellows are apt to forget at times that we were once young ourselves.'

I thanked him from the bottom of my heart, assured him that the cure was as good as performed already, and took my departure like a man treading on air.

As Dick Pestle still haunted the vicinity of the garden gate, I even assumed the responsibility of assisting him therefrom on the toe of my boot; and, as I shortly afterward heard of his being sent abroad, I might as well add that I never saw the aspiring and troublesome youth again.

To make a short story yet longer, three months thereafter I led Mabel Fairmeadow to the altar, and fair and meadowy, indeed have been the pastures of my subsequent career.

The old deacon behaved like a regular Brick. He bought out old Prestle's practice for me, and made us go to live with him in his handsome house directly after our wedding tour, and in various other ways acted by us amiably.

But, hard-headed old fellow as he was, he never could exactly give in to the efficacy of my opal as a mad stone, though of course crediting me in some way with Mabel's cure.

'How did you manage it, my boy?' said he one evening when we were sitting cozily together after dinner. 'Come let me know. It is all well enough that you have frozen out old Prestle and caused him to sell out to you through sheer chagrin, but I want to know your specific for the hydrophobia. Bless me you might publish it to the world, and become a rival to the great Pasteur himself. Who knows.'

I glanced at Mabel, she nodded her head, as much as to say, 'Tell him the secret, George; you have got me now, so what should you care.'

'Well, then, dear father-in-law,' said I, 'the secret is just this. I have no specific for the bite of a mad dog. I very much doubt, indeed, if any such specific exists where the system of a victim, once inoculated with the rabies virus, is predisposed to the progress of the disease. But, nevertheless my opal did cure Mabel, so far as there was anything the matter with her, and that I am ready to swear to.'

'What do you mean?' said the old gentleman, greatly puzzled.

'Simply that it cured her of her fright; and as for the hydrophobia, she was never in any danger from it. It was my opal ring, and not the tooth of a mad dog, that had scratched her instep.'

'You don't tell me so.'

'Yes I do. My ring finger was stiff and bloody after the accident. But a microscopic examination of both finger and ring convinced me that the blood was Mabel's and not mine. In falling at her feet, after kicking the brute in the ribs, my ring must have come in contact with the upper part of her gaiter, tearing it and the stocking down, and making the scratch you and she imagined to have been made by the rabid animal. The microscope satisfied me of this, for tiny fragments of her flesh as well as of her stocking had adhered to the rough edge of the setting. I had but to communicate this fact to Mabel to quiet her nerves, dissipate her fright, and render a recovery from the shock as speedy as you can imagine. Perhaps the knowledge of your having relented in your opposition to me as a son-in-law had almost as much to do with her restoration as the opal itself.'

Mr. Fairmeadow slapped his thign, and looked a little resentful; but Mabel's gentle arms were around him, and his anger was of short duration.

'It was a clever trick,' said he; 'but since fate itself seems to have favored its success, there is nothing to regret so far as I can see. God bless you both, my dears.'

The lucky opal may be wholly unique in its properties, but the reader can depend upon it that it will be handed down as a treasured heirloom forever hereafter.

Golden Medical Discovery.

Thoroughly cleanses the blood, which is the fountain of health, by using Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and good digestion, a fair skin, buoyant spirits, vital strength, and soundness of constitution will be established.

Golden Medical Discovery cures all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the worst Scrofula, or blood-poison. Especially has it proved its efficacy in curing Salt-rheum or Tetter, Fever-sores, Hip-joint Disease, Scrofulous Sores and Swellings, Enlarged Glands, and Rating Ulcers.

Golden Medical Discovery cures Consumption (which is Scrofula of the Lungs), by its wonderful blood-purifying, invigorating, and nutritive properties. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Shortness of Breath, Bronchitis, Severe Coughs, Asthma, and kindred affections, it is a sovereign remedy. It promptly cures the severest Coughs.

The Weekly Monitor.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 22nd, 1887.

GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.

All good and loyal citizens in all of England's vast dominions, must feel a glow of patriotic pride as they glance backward over the record of the English nation during the long and eventful reign of our beloved Queen. Fitting is it, that the four corners of the earth should unite in demonstrations of joy, that a monarch who has swayed the sceptre of power so wisely and well, should have reached the half century of her reign, and with the prospect still before her of years of useful life.

Queen Victoria, ascended the throne when but eighteen years of age, and when she took the coronation oath, the cabinet ministers and privy councillors swore allegiance to her in due form, and expressed themselves as "charmed by her gentle dignity and engaging manners." Upon the Queen's accession to the throne, she was happily surrounded by some of the cleverest and most astute men the world has ever known. The Whig or Liberal ministry was in power, of whom Lord Melbourne was the leader. Opposed to him were Lords Brougham and Lyndhurst. In addition to these famous men were Lord Palmerston, Sir Robert Peel, Mr. Gladstone, Bulwer Lytton, afterwards Lord Lytton, Grote, the Grecian historian, Lord John Russel and many others. Shortly after the reign commenced, John Bright, Richard Cobden and Lord Macauley also entered parliamentary life. It will thus be seen, that Her Majesty's reign was commenced under the most auspicious circumstances. It is not our purpose, as we would not be able to do justice to the subject in our limited space, to attempt to follow the various events that have marked the half century. Cruel wars have left their dark imprint on the pages of its history. In 1840, the "Opium war" took place in China; in 1842, the people of Afghanistan sorely worsted the English, but in the following year the latter re-conquered the country; in 1844 the Sikhs revolted in India; in 1851 a short war in Burmah occurred; in 1854, England and France declared war against Russia and peace was not declared until 1856; in this year further trouble was had with China; in 1857, the bloody Indian mutiny began; the later wars in Abyssina, Zululand, Egypt, are all fresh in memory. The Kingdom is now happily at peace, without a ripple on the surface, with the exception of the somewhat uncertain state of the eastern question, and possibly the unsatisfactory character of the settlement of the Afghanistan boundary with Russia. At the present time, England's most serious constitutional trouble is the vexed "Irish question," with which our readers are all familiar.

The half century reign has been signalized with the most wonderful advancement in all departments of the vast machinery of human affairs. The christian religion has increased its sphere of usefulness beyond computation, the utmost liberality is now extended to all denominations, and there are few places on the globe that the feet of the missionary have not trod. The marvelous forces of steam and electricity have reached high development and application in this reign. By their potent means the utmost confines of the earth are drawn close together. The growth of England's commerce, within the period, will be realized when we state that in 1837 the imports were £92,000,000, and the exports £88,000,000, and now the exports reach the enormous figures of £600,000,000 and the exports £500,000,000. The population has increased from 126,000,000 to 325,000,000 and Her Majesty now rules over 6,500,000 more square miles of territory than when she ascended the throne, the extent of the English possessions having increased to nearly three fold during this period. Shipping has increased from 16,000,000 tons to 142,000,000 and the railway mileage from 1,500 to 52,000 miles. The varied departments of art, literature and science have all kept pace with the same wonderful speed of development. Free schools and the lightning steam press place education within the reach of the poorest; sanitary and medical discoveries have greatly lengthened the average of human life, and so we might go on ad infinitum; but it is unnecessary, as all those who wish to fully post themselves in the fifty years' progress, can derive the fullest information from various current works.

Our beloved Queen, independent of her wonderful capacities as a ruler, is also the embodiment in a superlative degree of the charming virtues of woman, mother and wife. Her name is deserving of the highest honor, and every one of her subjects should say with reverence "God Save our Noble Queen," and salute with loyal pride the glorious old flag that has "braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze."

—The war department of the present administration of the United States has issued an order that all flags captured from the south during the civil war shall be collected together and returned to the respective states to which they belonged. This order has raised a storm of indignation among the old Union soldiers, and some very wild talk has been indulged in. The latter contend they have fought and bled for the possession of these colors, and that they should be allowed to retain them as trophies of the struggle. Those who favor the return of the flags contend that it is the wiser and far more politic course to endeavor to do all that is possible to obliterate all recollection of the cruel and bloody strife between the North and South, and endeavor to draw the two sections closer together: that the captured flags were a bitter memory to southerners, and treasuring them up and showing them as trophies, was a perpetual insult and affront to the men who were now good loyal American citizens.

The return of the flags will be a gracious act, and will do much to cement the cordial relations that have gradually but surely grown up between the two parties of the internecine strife. Only firebrands and persons of poor judgment could wish to do anything that will retard the obliteration of the bitter memories of the past. The south was conquered and ruined for the time being. Those of her sons that survived the bloody struggle, returned to desolated homes, a wasted country, and the foundation upon which so many had built prosperity — slavery — knocked clean from under them. The prospect ahead of them was gloomy indeed. What wonder that for a long time revengeful feelings were dominant in their breasts. These have gradually died away, the people are adapting themselves to the new order of things, and are rapidly becoming prosperous. Under these reviving influences, and a clearer perception of the evils of the slave curse, kindlier feelings arise, and is certainly the wiser and more christian-like policy for the people in the north to do all that can be done to foster such feelings.

Jubilee Celebration.

Bridgetown celebrated the Queen's Jubilee with honors.

On Tuesday night the Band played for some time at the square in front of the Grand Central Hotel and a quantity of fire works were sent off by Mr. R. Shipley, in front of his store, and Mr. C. J. Willis, on his own premises The boys also took advantage of the occasion and discharged fire-crackers by the hundreds, in the air, in barrels, in bunches, and in any way they could make the most noise. Wherever a rocket would be sent up or at the report of fire arms they would huzza as if their throats would burst.

Last night, however (Wednesday), the town did itself real honor. We believe that to Mr. Enoch Dodge, our postmaster, and to Mr. A. E Sulis, organ manufacturer, is chiefly due the credit of having started this celebration, which was done in the morning. After a consultation with several of the leading citizens and they agreeing to assist, preparations were at once begun to illuminate the town and have a torch light procession in the evening. The word was quickly sent around to have all houses and stores lighted up, willing hands decorated the hose reel and fire engine, torch lamps were fitted up, and by night everything was ready. It was surprising what a brilliant effect was made, considering the the short notice.

Nearly every house and store in the whole town was brilliantly lighted in all windows facing the street. The torch light procession was headed by a man bearing a transparency, having the words "Queen's Jubilee" on one side and "Water Works, 1887" on the obverse side, next the hose cart, gaily decorated with flowers and evergreens, surmounted with a boy carrying a torch, following them the members of the Bridgetown Brass Band, then the fire engine, also tastefully decorated, with a number of boys bearing torches walking on each side, and with several standing erect on the machine also bearing torches, while the rear of the procession was brought up by a double column of school boys, each with a torch. The procession marched through all the principal streets, with the band playing national airs. In returning up Queen street, the young lads at a signal struck up the soul-stirring anthem, "God Save the Queen," At the head of the street the procession stopped, and after the band had also played the national song and three cheers and a tiger had been given for the Queen, C. S. Harrington, Esq., Q. C., of Halifax, and W. MacCoy, Esq., Q. C. and Shelburne's representative in our legislature, who are both here attending court, were called upon for a few remarks in honor of the occasion. This request they complied with, and speaking from the balcony of the Grand Central Hotel, in a few happily chosen words they each paid a glowing tribute to Her Gracious Majesty and congratulated the citizens of the town upon their creditable display. Each speaker was heartily applauded. Three cheers were then given for the Prince of Wales, and the crowd dispersed. During both Tuesday and yesterday, a string of flags waved across Queen Street and everyone in the town who owned a flag flung it to the breeze.

The school children also did their part towards the event by assembling in the principal's room, on Monday last and singing with hearty voices several jubilee odes. The principal, Mr. Brown, also made them a short but instructive address at the close of which they gave three ringing cheers for Her Majesty, and then dispersed with the comfortable feeling that they had done their part and were going to have a holiday on the morrow.

Western Baptist Association.

The thirty-seventh annual gathering of this season was held at Digby, commencing on Saturday morning last and closing yesterday. No more pleasant place could have been selected for holding such meetings. Digby is a pretty little town at any season of the year, but in June it is simply charming.

A large number of delegates and other visitors were in attendance. They found ample accommodation for their sessions in the new and tastefully furnished Baptist meeting-house, and the hospitality shown by their entertainers was generous and cordial.

Rev. W. H. Warren, the retiring moderator called the association to order at the appointed hour, and a short time was spent in devotional exercises A list of the delegates having been made out, the following officers were chosen for the current year:—Rev. J. H. Saunders, moderator. Rev. J. W. Weeks, clerk; Rev. J. W. Tingley, assistant clerk; Mr. Leason Baker and Mr. S. N. Jackson, treasurers.

Letters from the churches composing the association were read. From these it was learned that solid work has been done during the past year. About 420 have been added to the churches connected with the body within that time. A careful revision of the lists of members has been made, which will somewhat lessen the apparent increase in membership.

A stirring temperance meeting was held on Saturday evening, addressed by Rev. W. H. Richan, Rev. J. B. Woodland, Rev. J. Rowe, Rev. F. H. Adams, and others. The chief points made were in reference to the necessity of combined effort in our churches, and of having honorable temperance representatives in parliament. On Sunday most of the pulpits in Digby and places adjacent were filled by ministers connected with the association. At the Baptist place of worship Rev. J. E. Bill, D. D., preached in the morning, and Rev. F. H. Adams in the evening. Rev. C. Goodspeed and Rev. A. Cohoon occupied the Methodist pulpit; and Rev. W. H. Richan and Rev. Dr. Day preached for the Presbyterians.

The association sermon was preached on Monday morning by Rev. R. D. Potter. It was an excellent discourse, highly appreciated by all who heard it. Rev. W. H. Warren read the circular letter, the subject being, "A Plea for Scriptural Methods in Christian Work." It was decided to have both sermon and letter printed in the Messenger and Visitor.

An excellent report on Sabbath Schools was read and adopted. The report on education was then submitted and warmly discussed. Ninety-one students have been studying at Acadia College during the past year. The Academy and Ladies' Seminary have also been well filled, and the work done has been most satisfactory. Seventeen young men graduated, and about forty have matriculated. Rev. A. Cohoon spoke with much earnestness in reference to the needs of the institutions, and explained the method by which he proposes to raise $50,000.00 as a jubilee offering to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the college.

A delegation from the Free Christian Baptists, consisting of Rev. Messrs Atwood and Crowell, was cordially received. These gentlemen addressed the body in terms of warm sympathy, and a resolution was passed reciprocating the kindly expressions.

Rev Dr. Day read the report on Denominational Literature, and spoke strongly in favor of increased efforts to promote the spread of a sound and healthful literature among the people. Mr. Geo. A. McDonald, Secretary of the Baptist Book Room, gave a concise statement of what has been done through this important agency.

In the evening a grand missionary meeting was held at which stirring addresses were given by Rev. J. Rowe, Rev. J. C. Morse, Rev. W. H. Warren, Rev. Dr. Day, Rev. F. Rouleau, French Missionary, and Rev. A. Cohoon. The marked success which has attended the labors of missionaries both at home and abroad was strikingly shown. About 340 baptisms were reported by the home missions as alone.

From the report on obituaries it was learned that none of the ministers connected with the body had been removed by death during the year. But about 131 laymen had within this time gone to their reward.

Important routine business occupied the closing sections of the association. The utmost harmony prevailed at all the meetings. The next annual gathering will be held at Clarence.

—Mr. Herbert Jones, son of H. Clair Jones, of Weymouth, has been nominated by the Conservative party to contest the County. The Liberals offered the nomination of their party to Mr. Chas. Burrell, of Digby, but he declined. It is not yet known who is to be the candidate.

Local and Other Matter.

—In order that our employes might have a holiday on Jubilee Day, we concluded to postpone issuing the MONITOR until Thursday. The regular date of issuing, however, appears in the headlines.

ACCIDENTS.—A lad named Herbert Reynolds, an employe of Messrs. J. B. Reed & Sons, had two fingers of his left hand badly cut in the jointer machine last week.

On Monday last Mr. H. Nichols, another employe, had the top of his thumb nearly cut off by one of the circular saws.

—We had a call from our genial friend Mr. R. A. Carder, agent of the International and N. S. S. Companies, at Annapolis, on Saturday last. He reports the season's business up to the present time as excellent, both in the freight and passenger traffic. The S. S. New Brunswick, is now on the direct route between Annapolis and Boston, and is a favorite with the travelling public. It is well officered and well fitted up.

—J. W. Beckwith has a fine lot of of sawed No. 1 Pine Shingles, for sale. 1i

SAD.—In the obituary corner will be found the notice of the death of Miss. Mary Goucher, daughter of the late Alpheus Goucher, of Margaretville. The deceased left Kingston Station for Boston, on the 1st inst., and on the 14th her remains were brought back to the same station for burial in the Wiswall Cemetery at Melvern Square.

—Capt. John Longmire, has purchased the schooner Temple Bar, of Barrington, 44 tons, register, and will resume his packet route between this port and St. John. His former schooner—the Ivica—he sold in St. John, as we mentioned in a previous issue. An advertisement will be found in this issue.

—Quite an excitement was occasioned yesterday afternoon by a drunken negro, who is said to hail from Kentville. He became quarrelsome and abusive and finally drew a razor and made threatening demonstrations against a bystander. This brought matters to a climax, and a lot of youths made for him, chased him down the street and into a house near the railway bridge. After a time he was driven out; but not before he had done considerable damage to property in the house, and smashed out a window frame, glass and all. He was then chased up the railroad track, finally caught and punished severely. What is wanted in this town is a jail, and when the quiet of our streets is disturbed by drunken negroes or whites, have them arrested just as soon as they commence to make a disturbance. The fact of the business is, rowdies think they can do about as they please in this town, and it is high time that our citizens demanded that some means should be provided to put a stop to such actions.

—The Methodist Conference met in Truro last week. The city press published full reports of the meetings. Rev. Jas. Gaetz was elected President. The membership returns give:—On trial, 553; full numbers, 12,618; a total of 131,71—an increase, after deducting large members for deaths and removals, of 745 over the previous year. For ministerial support $48,003.-83 was reported, being a net deficiency of $10,709. The conference unanimously adopted the resolutions of the Montreal conference in regard to making every effort towards securing prohibitory legislation. The station list for the Annapolis district is as follows:—

Annapolis—J. Cassidy.
Granville Ferry—S. B. Dunn.
Bridgetown—J. G. Angwin; Supernumeraries, J. F. Bent, J. R. Hart.

—Jubilee day was celebrated at the Wilmot Spa Springs in an enjoyable manner. A large number of people were present from first to last, during the day. Capt. Hall, is a popular host and does everything in his power to make it pleasant for those who visit his pleasant retreat. The arrangements for bathing, which we have described in a former issue, are such that all can partake of them with comfort and on Monday, a number availed themselves of the opportunity. A substantial repast was served under the trees during the noon hour, and again at six o'clock, and was partaken of by a goodly portion of those present, some of whom we noticed had appetites suitable to the importance of the day. The captain has erected a floor under the trees for the accomodation of those who delight in tripping the "light fantastic." The festivities in this direction, while apparently popular enough, where not to any extent indulged in during the day. In the evening, however, the floor did not lack for occupants; Chinese lanterns hung under the trees giving the scene a picturesque effect. Several inviting hammocks were hung under the trees and swings, croquet and quoits, added their quota to the pleasure of the guests.

The Captain, during his eventful life on the sea, took pains to collect in different parts of the world, mementoes of his voyages, Among these curiosities, and the most important of them, is a suite of parlor furniture made in Bombay, India. It is constructed of a very dense and hard wood called blackwood, and is carved in the most elaborate and intricate manner, which must be seen to be appreciated. Polished horns from the heads of the denizens of tropical forests, a South Sea islander's dress and girdle, swords of the sword fish, Chinese sandals, fans, tropical birds and butterflies, shells from the shores of the Pacific and Indian oceans, etc., are also contained in this room, and every information relative to them will be furnished by the obliging hostess, Mrs. Hall.

The following persons are now registered at the springs:—Mrs. Morrow, Halifax; Mrs. J. Brown, Miss Brown, and Mr. and Mrs. J. Bowes and child from Dartmouth.

—The Western Counties Railway bill has been passed.

—Upland and Marsh Grass for sale by J. W. Beckwith. 1i

—Fresh mackerel sent to Boston must be packed, or they will be seized; this is a matter of great importance to shippers.

—$4,000 has been placed in the estimates for a new building to be used as a Post Office and Customs House at Annapolis.

—Major Margetts of the Salvation Army, will give a lecture and address on the "Rise and Progress of the Salvation Army," at Victoria Hall, Tuesday, July 5th. Admission, 10 cents.

—If any of our readers desire to purchase one of the fine rods made by Dalzell of St. John, they can do so by applying at this office. These rods are among the very best made. See his advertisement on first page.

—The Acadia correspondent of the Truro Guardian says:—The present headmaster in the school is Mr. L. Roggles from the golden country, famed in story, away down in the west—Annapolis. He is spoken of as a man "well up" in the teaching profession and well fitted for the position he occupies.

—The Kings College Encœnia commences on Thursday, 30th of this month. The anniversary sermon will be preached by Rev. D. C. Moore, and His Honor the Lieut. Governor of Nova Scotia is expected to be present and deliver an address. Addresses are also expected from Rev. F. A. P. Barnard, D. D., L. L. D., President of Columbia College, New York, Rev. W. C. Wilson, Ph. D., L. L. D., Egyptologist, V. P. of Egyptian Exploration Fund, and Rev. Canon Brigstocke, M. A., Rector Trinity Church, St. John, N. B.

—The gentlemens' driving race at Kentville on Wednesday, was witnessed by about 300 people. The race was won by J. D. Moore's b. g. Mike; G. W. Barnaby's g. g. Hanlan, second; J. L. Neary's b. s. Confidence, Jr. third. The other competitors were K. Ross' b. g. Darwin, and J. A. Power's b. g. Lakeville Charlie. Between the heats the stallions Black Pilot and Allie Clay were exhibited on the track. A mile dash for $20 a side, between Hanlan and Mike, the former being driven to sulky, and the latter to a track wagon. The former won.

BURGLARS' BOOTY.—G. W. Cox & Co.'s store at the Londonderry iron mines was burglarized early Thursday morning, and a cash box containing $200, three pocket books with a considerable sum of money in them and some papers were carried off. The robbery was accomplished by blowing open the safe, which was damaged to the extent of about $100. Several men are suspected of having been connected with the burglary.

Burglaries, were also committed at Kentville, on Thursday night last, presumably by the same gang. The safe in E. H. Dodge's store was blown open and what money was contained there, fortunately a small amount, was taken. Attempt was also made at the safe in J. E. DeWolfe & Co.'s store, but for some reason the rascals discontinued operations, after boring a few holes and filling them with powder. They stole nothing from this store. People down this way should be on their guard. Mr. Hoyt, the manager of the B. N. S., has had a night watchman on the bank premises since the news of the burglarly.

SUPREME COURT.—The June term of the Supreme Court will open in this town, tomorrow, Judge James presiding. The following is the docket:

—My customers will kindly remember that one very essential thing in my business enabled to secure the high prices that I do for Eggs, is that the Eggs I ship have the reputation in the Boston markets, of always being fresh. In order for me to keep up this reputation it is absolutely necessary that customers should bring me their Eggs every week. Any neglect in this particular is at once detected in Boston, by consumers, as I supply a special trade and do not deal with a commission merchant.

TOMANO is a magnificent looking horse, perfectly sound in all respects. Although but 5 years old and never trained he can now show a 40 clip.

If sufficient mares offer, TOMANO will visit this County and Kings during the present season. Breeders are advised to communicate at once with the undersigned. Such an opportunity to breed trotters seldom occurs.

TERMS:

$20 for the season, with privilege of offers below stated, or $10 cash without privilege of offers.

Mares not proving in foal can be returned the following season free if not parted with and stallion still in my possession.

Season to close August 30th, 1887.

Service fee due at time of service, to be settled by note.

Look at These Offers.

Any owner of a son or daughter of TOMANO will be entitled to $100.00 in cash or an equivalent in service fees as he may elect, when he may give such animal a bona fide record in a race of 2:30 or better, provided TOMANO is living at the time the said record is made.

I will also give to the owner of the fastest colt or filly sired by Tomano $50.00, to be trotted for in the fall of 1890 on Moosepath or any other track that is agreed on by the majority of owners of his colts, half mile heats. All 1888 colts eligible for race; no entrance fee; all are welcome.

I will also give $50.00 to the owner of TOMANO colts or fillies, if they can bona fide beat in a race in 1891 as three year olds, the produce of Harry Wilkes, Aurora, or any other stallion now standing for service in New Brunswick or Nova Scotia—one mile heats.

I will also give to the owner of TOMANO colts or fillies $20.00 if at any Government Exhibition held in 1888, 1889 or 1890, they win the 1st prize over other colts or fillies, for style, action, soundness and general make up, to be decided by judges appointed by the managers of exhibition.

Any owner of colt or filly that competes for any of the above prizes must have a certificate signed by James S. McGivern, of the date of service and date of birth, with marks of mare and foal; also receipt for service fee. Certificate will be given after birth of colt.

For further information apply by letter to JAMES S. McGIVERN, St. John, or Hampton Station. tf

General News.

—More than one hundred clergymen sailed from New York for Europe one day last week. The devil being unable to take an outing can be found doing business at the old stand.

—The recent art sales in New York demonstrated that a $500 painting owned by a prominent man will bring $10,000 at public auction, while a $10,000 picture owned by an unknown individual is frequently knocked down for $500.

—An old subscriber at Bear River, informs us that in 1886, he took thirty-nine American buckets full of maple sap, equal to ninety-seven wine gallons, from one tree. Of this quantity, eighteen buckets-fuls were taken within three days.—Digby Courier.

—Ayer's Sarsaparilla operates radically upon the blood, thoroughly cleansing and invigorating it. As a safe and absolute cure for the various disorders caused by constitutional taint or infection, this remedy has no equal. Take it this month.

—Prince Edward Island farmers have learned that it pays to improve their stock. We read in the Summerside Journal that a Mr. Steele has sold a half interest in a "Hernando" colt for $400 and that a Mr. Dockendorff sold a three year old colt of the same stock to a Cape Breton society for $500. Good horses are always in demand.

—Harry Baker, a resident of Concord, N. H., well known and very popular, died at the home of his father, on Thursday afternoon. He was married on Wednesday, at 5 o'clock in the evening, and after a visit to Plymouth on the day following complained of not feeling well, and died at the same hour that his marriage occurred on the previous day. He was 29 years of age.

HALIFAX MARKETS.—The following quotations are dated June 16th, and are furnished us by Messrs. Mumford Bros., Argyle St. Butter, choice dairy, 17 to 18; rolls in boxes,— egge per doz., 11 to 12; hams and bacon, per ℔ 3 to 10; beef, quarters, 6 to 8; hogs dressed, 6 to 7; mutton, by carcass, 7 to 9; veal, do., 4; turkeys, per lb., 17 to 18; fowls and chickens, pairs, 50; potatoes, $1.25 to $1.50; oats, bush., 43 to 44; hay, ton, $14.00 to $16.00; wool skins, 75 to $1.00; dried apples, per lb., 6.

—On Tuesday night there was a "frost, a killing frost," and many of the gardens in Windsor and vicinity suffered severely. In many parts of the county, ice was formed, and frost was so thick on fences that it could be scraped off with the hand. The leaves of trees were stiff and say late blossoms must have suffered. Early potatoes, beans and such like were nipped, but it is hoped the fruits and crops generally will not be injured. It is seldom we have so heavy frosts in June.—Tribune.

St. John, June 10.—On Sunday last Mrs Thibideau, of St. Leonard's station, on the New Brunswick railway, gave birth to a son. On Tuesday morning following a daughter was born and on Tuesday evening another son. This was all that had arrived up to last accounts. The children weighed respectively 7, 8¼, and 7 pounds. The mother of the children is over thirty years of age and was married twelve months ago. Both parents are pure French.

—Henry Cargill thought that a speech from him was the dagger that would assassinate the Scott Act. He went from the hamlet of Cargill, deep in the woods of East Bruce, to Ottawa. There his wrath centred on the Scott Act which he promised to kill or maim. The Scott Act is still there, and Henry will creep out from the ruins of his bill to abolish it, with a conviction that only in the activities of the hay-field can he find true scope for his statesmanly energy.—Toronto Telegraph.

JUBILEE JOLLITIES.—The Jubilee issue of Grip's Own Library, entitled Jubilee Jollities, has just been issued and is having a very large sale. In addition to a fine double-page cartoon, there are two full page cartoons, the words and music of a popular song by John Imrie, "Queen Victoria's Jubilee," and pictures on almost every page of the book. The price is only ten cents, and it may be had at all bookstores, or will be sent on receipt of price by the publishers. Address Grip, Toronto Ont.

WORTH YOUR ATTENTION.—Cut this out and mail it to Allen & Co., Augusta, Maine, who will send you free, something new, that just coins money for all workers. As wonderful as the electric light, as genuine as pure gold, it will prove of lifelong value and importance to you. Both sexes, all ages. Allen & Co. bear expenses of starting you in business. It will bring you in more cash, right away, than anything else in the world. Anyone anywhere can do the work, and live at home also. Better write at once; then, knowing all, should you conclude that you don't care to engage, why no harm is done.

A FRENCH RELICT.—Councillor W. H. Knowles, of Avondale, has shown us a curious pipe which he dug out of an old French cellar on his farm a few days ago. It is about the size and shape of the most modern make of tobacco pipes, but instead of being constructed of clay or meerschaum is neatly made of wrought iron. On the Knowles homestead, five old cellars have located, and within a mile some twenty more have been discovered from time to time. These were occupied by the Acadians previous to the great "evictions."—Windsor Tribune.

PETROLEUM IN BURMAH.—Immense petroleum fields have been discovered in Burmah. The work is being prosecuted with much zeal, several wells having been sunk varying from 500 feet to 1,200 feet deep, from which large quantities of oil have been obtained of a superior quality. The probability is that the manufacture of petroleum oil in Burmah will so far increase as to supply India and Eastern colonies. The oil obtained at Burmah is very thick, and if the temperature or air is below 80 degrees it becomes solid.

One noticeable thing is that the temperature of oil is considerably above that of atmosphere. This difference would seem to indicate that the oil on the average comes from a depth of 500 feet below the surface. Considering the large quantities that are found in Burmah, petroleum may very probably come into general use as fuel.

ENJOY LIFE.

What a truly beautiful world we live in? Nature gives us grandeur of mountains, glens and oceans, and thousands of means of enjoyment. We can desire no better when in perfect health; but how often do the majority of people feel like giving it up disheartened, discouraged and worn out with disease, when there is no occasion for this feeling, as every sufferer can easily obtain satisfactory proof, that Green's August Flower, will make them free from disease, as when born. Dyspepsia and Liver complaint are the direct causes of seventy-five per cent. of such maladies as Biliousness, Indigestion, Sick Headache, Costiveness, Nervous Prostration, Dizziness of the Head, Palpitation of the Heart, and distressing symptoms. Three doses of August Flower will prove its wonderful effect. Sample bottles, 10 cents. Try it.

A $10,000 MAIL BAG MISSING.—It is reported that a mail bag from Halifax for Charlottetown, went astray on the Intercolonial, on Thursday, somewhere between Halifax and Pictou. The bag is said to have contained, besides ordinary registered letters, several bank packages, containing, it is said, from $7,000 to $10,000. The bag should have been transferred to the Pictou mail clerk at Truro station; but he alleges that he did not receive it; and it is said that the valuable bag was subsequently found somewhere in New Brunswick—the scene of many missing mail bags containing money. It was only a few months ago that a registered bag containing $5000 was lost between Chatham and St. John. The bank interested, who came so near being victimized, will doubtless insist upon a searching investigation. The fact that the bag subsequently turned up all right is no guarantee against future mistakes or carelessness on the part of railway or post-office officials.—Halifax Herald.

Local and Other Matter.

A. V. S. F. G. A.—The Annapolis Valley Small Fruit Growers' Association contemplated, as per notice published in the several local papers, holding its semi-annual meeting at 10 a. m., on the 9th day of June, inst. But a series of refreshing showers that set in during the early hours of the morning and continued through the greater part of the forenoon, interfered with the arrangements for this third attempt at a meeting of the association within the year; however, the storm having subsided about the middle of the day and the beautiful sunshine appearing, a small gathering of the members and some visitors, also a few others who added their names to our list, were convened in Spurr's Hall, at Aylesford, at half-past two o'clock p. m., president Wm. McNeil, in the chair. After the usual opening exercises, reading minutes of the annual meeting held on the 29th day of March last, and some correspondence with P. Innes, Esq., manager of W. & A. R., by the committee appointed at the annual meeting to confer with that gentleman in reference to special arrangements for carrying and handling our fruits, etc., the meeting proceeded to business.

James McLearn, Esq., of Halifax, being present in person was interrogated by the president and others on many interesting points regarding the arrangements in the city for landing, handling, conveying to consignees, and prospects of the markets in general of our fruits, to all of which the gentleman responded in a most satisfactory and pleasing manner, and, by motion, an agreement was made with him to convey the fruits of members of the association this year from the railway depot to the consigners at the same rate as heretofore. After a vote of expression of pleasure and of thanks to Mr. McLearn for his presence and kindness in favoring us with so important information, the gentleman took his leave by express train for the city. The following resolution was then brought forward, and after some remarks by Rev. J. R. Hart and others passed unanimously, viz:—

Resolved, That the meeting, having heard the reports of the committee appointed to confer with Mr. Innes as to freight arrangements with the W. A. Railway, approve of the steps they have taken and also of their determination to follow up the matter as we do not consider such arrangements yet entirely satisfactory.

Some correspondence was received from commission merchants in Halifax, soliciting the patronage of members, and the secretary was directed to reply thereto. A bill of $1.25 having been rendered to the secretary by John Bryenton, publisher of the Western Chronicle, for publishing in its columns a notice of the annual meeting in March last, was laid before the meeting and after being commented upon by members and visitors was ordered to be paid. The secretary was also ordered to have blank certificates of attendance printed. The association expressed its appreciation of the past services of its secretary by a donation from the small amount of funds in hand. The following resolution was then laid before the meeting, which drew forth various remarks from members and was unanimously passed, viz:—

Resolved, That the names of members of the Association in full standing be furnished by the Secretary to Jas. McLearn & Son, and to the station agents of the W. & A. Railway, so that such members may secure the advantages of special arrangements made on behalf of the association.

The business routine being completed, the president laid before the meeting a report from Jas. McLearn & Son, showing the aggregate number of cases of small fruits handled by them in 1886 to be about 2800. He also read portions of an "editorial contribution" to a paper published by the David C. Cook Publishing Company, Chicago, and headed "Among the Bluenoses." A short extract from which may not be uninteresting to our people.

"So little interest have the people of the United States had in this country, that but few know just where it is, and their knowledge seldom exceeds a vague impression that it constitutes a part of Canada. A change, however, in the popular feeling is following the discovery that here is to be found a most delightful summer resort. While we, whose homes are farther to the south, are suffering from the burning heat, here the traveller may ride for hundreds of miles through an almost continuous strawberry bed, while, on every hand, the eye feasts on lake and mountain scenery, with here and there valleys richer than any to be found east of the great prairies of Illinois."

Following this, a discussion was freely entered into, respecting varieties, modes of culture, and general treatment of the several genera or classes of small fruits under cultivation, in which nearly all took part, each giving his experience or asking some question which was highly interesting and instructive. The day being thus far spent, this very interesting session was, on motion, brought to a close.

The Pacer Joe Howe.

Just a few words about the little chestnut pacer, Joe Howe. He is going stronger than ever, and the indications are that he will place his pacing record where it will not be disturbed by any provincial bred horse for some time to come. Within a few days he has won two races, each of them in three straight heats, in the 2.30 class, getting a record of 2.25 in his fastest heat. We generally suppose that after our provincial horses are brought here, they must have the benefit of Boston culture for quite a long time, before they develop much speed. Little Joe made them open their eyes, though, as soon as he came on the track, and I guess they have come to the conclusion that Hall gave him something more than the first lessons in speed. I am glad to see that this promising horse is in the hands of Jack Trout, for he is one of the most skilful trainers and smooth-handed reinsmen in New England. If I remember rightly, he is the one that took in hand, the high-spirited "Wayland" after he had been given up as too wild to train for trotting in a race. Trout soothed him and levelled his gait until he could put Wayland in a race, take the reins in one hand and send him squarely through a field of trotting horses and yelling drivers, at a gait low down in the twenties. He held Joe Howe on his feet when the second horse had his nose at Joe's throttlatch, sticking there as determined as a bulldog, but before they reached the wire, the little Flying Frenchman let out an extra link and gained half a length. Here's to his success when he enters the 2.20. MEL.

NOTICE.—Rev. J. W. Tingley, write us:—

The new Baptist meeting house at Port George, Annapolis Co., N. S., which has been in the course of construction for the last two years, is now complete and will be dedicated on the 26th inst. In this quiet little village by the sea with its bracing breeze, in a beautiful new house and with a man of such power, as a preacher, as Prof. Keiratsed, of Acadia College, to preach the dedication sermon, and with others ministers of note to participate in the services, a very enjoyable and profitable day may be anticipated by all who expect to be present. The services will be as follows: Dedication sermon at 11 a. m., preaching at 3 p. m. and at 7.30 p. m.

NOVA SCOTIA, June 18th, 1887.

MR. EDITOR:—

DEAR SIR,—There have been great preparations in this Dominion of ours to celebrate the Queen's Jubilee. A jubilee it should indeed be, for few nations could ever have the privileges and blessings of so good and wise a sovereign. But what do we see? Some of the subjects of this good Queen, with only as much loyalty as a child would have who stole his mother's purse, are trying to get their hands into the Queen's pocket. Now this pocket in the Dominion represents the moneys collected from the people by taxes, paid directly and indirectly, directly, from property, and indirectly, by the various custom houses, the last being contributed to by every one who is not actually a pauper.

Now this pocket or chest, should be a sacred trust to those who have the command of it. But what do we find? The chief or treasurer holding this pocket, while those who fight under his banner, which is not the "banner of equality and the rights of man," are calling for $500.00 bonus, in honor of the Queen. The chief with a smile as bland as that of an auctioneer, says, "All right boys, fix bayonets and charge" and out will tumble the $150,000 and if you know of any weak member who could be strengthened in this way, charge again and he too shall enjoy the Jubilee.

Now we, all over this Dominion, have done more than we were able in the filling this pocket, and it is not the bitter that is called sweet, to see those who have too much already, having the jubilee plunders all to themselves. If there is $150,000 to spend, beside the demand made by the uncivil, civil service, in the name of humanity, why do they not build and endow, a Dominion poor house, for methinks it will be needed ere long.

Yours truly, H.

—Middleton is to be the next to swing into line in the matter of centennials. Early next month the Trinity Church of this place will have been built one hundred years, and the ladies of the congregation intend to celebrate the event by holding a Strawberry Festival and Fancy Sale, in the beautiful grove surrounding the building. Many visiting clergymen are expected, and eloquent speeches may be looked for. Every effort will be made to make the gathering one to be remembered, and those who miss it will hardly have time to come see us the next centennial. W. R. M.

ANNAPOLIS ITEM.—Nothing of importance this week, further than that Freeman Chute, of Virginia Settlement, (the man who so ill treated and abused a steer that it died in two or three days after, a reference which appeared in this paper at the time,) was today brought before Stipendiary Leavitt, on the complaint of the Secty. of the Annapolis branch of the society for preventing cruelty to animals, and costs. The case may be taken to the supreme court.

THE C. P. R. IN MAINE.—There are now 2,600 men at work on the Canadian Pacific railroad in the vicinity of Greenville, and it is the desire of the contractors to increase this force to 3,000. They are having no trouble in hiring unskilled labor, but now need woodsmen, laborers who can wield an axe satisfactorily. These are very scarce and hard to obtain. They are paid $1.50 per day of ten hours, and are usually able to make a day and a quarter between sunrise and sunset. Eight thousand men will make quite an army in the Maine woods.—Hx. Chronicle.

DEATH OF AN OLD ENGINEER.—William Boyd, a well-known railway engineer, died at the "Clifton House" on Wednesday, at the age of 75 years. Billy Boyd, as he was kindly known by the boys on the line, was one of the oldest engineers in the Province. He was sent out from Scotland when railroads were first built in Nova Scotia. He brought the first train from Halifax to Windsor, with John Murray as conductor. Later on he went into the service of the W. & A. R., and also drove the first engine on the line. After that he ran Churchill's Pinafore, and his last job was driving the locomotive at Dimock's Plaster works, Wentworth. He was an intelligent, good-natured and industrious man, and died without an enemy in his adopted country. May he rest in peace.—Windsor Tribune.

Toronto, June 16.—The Mail this morning publishes the following special cable:—London, June 15.—Sir Francis DeWinton, reading a paper to-night on practical colonization, proposed a scheme to raise half a million pounds capital, with three percent guaranteed by the Government for four years, half the interest being borne by the Imperial Government and the other half pro rata, according to the number of families sent to each colony, by the Colonial Governments. It is proposed that of the first thousand families three hundred should be sent to Canada. The income would be derived from interest on capital, the balance of profits from and stores and acceptance fees. At the end of five years the scheme will be fairly established on business principles and the operations will be then continued on a scale regulated by the amount of available funds Lord Lorne approved of the scheme.

—Sir Charles Tupper has proposed the following new tariff changes:—

Brass in bars bolts and tubing is reduced to ten per cent.; dress combs, thirty per cent.; bed quilts and comforts, thirty per cent.; nail plate, of iron or steel, thirteen dollars per ton; marble, in blocks, ten per cent.; marble slabs, fifteen per cent; finished marble, twenty-five per cent.; linseed oil, raw or boiled, thirty per cent.; opium, one dollar per pound; black or blue roofing slate, eighty cents per square rod; green slate one dollar per square; other slates, one cent per square foot and twenty-five per cent.; ready-made clothing and wearing apparel of every description, ten cents per pound and twenty-five per cent.; socks and stockings, ten cents per pound and thirty per cent.; chopping axes, two dollars per and twenty per cent.; garden rakes, dozen and ten per cent.; hay knives and forks, two dollars per dozen five cents each and twenty-five per cent.; shovels and spades and blanks for same one dollar per dozen and twenty-five per cent.; iron and steel wire, fifteen gauge and coarser, twenty-five per cent.; sole leather, one-half cent per pound and fifteen per cent.; clay tobacco pipes, thirty-five per cent.; tinsmiths' tools and saddlers' hardware, 35 per cent.; harness and saddlery, thirty-five per cent.; chromos, etc., six cents per pound and twenty per cent.; tubes, not welded, fifteen per cent.; rolled nail rods, for horse shoe nails, fifteen per cent., lap welded iron tubing, twenty per cent.; composition buttons, twenty-five per cent; flasks and vials, thirty per cent.; boiler and other plate iron, thirteen dollars per ton; rolled iron or steel angles, half a cent per pound and ten per cent.; rolled iron or steel beams, girders, etc, twelve and a half per cent.; wrought iron tubes, sixtenths of a cent per pounds and thirty per cent.; of pianos, twenty-five per cent.; fire-bricks, free; spruce and elm logs annex port duty of two dollars per thousand feet, board measure; rolled rods of steel, under half an inch in diameter, books for deaf and dumb and blind institutions, and wire, of iron and steel, are placed on the free list.

Advice To Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms as generally debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night-sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections, it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on consumption, send 10 cents in stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

A UNIQUE WORK ON CANADIAN TOPICS.—MR. ERASTUS WIMAN, president of the Canadian Club, writes to the editor of this paper as follows: It is the intention of certain members of the Canadian Club, in New York, to issue, in the form of a beautiful book, the papers which have been delivered before the Club during the past winter by prominent parties, together with those which are to be delivered during the remainder of the season.

"These papers will include a speech on "Commercial Union," by the Hon Benjamin Butterworth, member of Congress, who is said to be one of the most eloquent men of that body. A remarkable production by Prof. Goldwin Smith on "The Schism in the Anglo-Saxon Race." A paper by Dr. Grant of the Queen's University on "Canada First." One by J. W. Bengough, Editor of Toronto Grip. By Mr. Le Moine, of Quebec, on "The Heroines of New France.' By J. A. Fraser, 'An Artist's Experience in the Canadian Rockies.' By Edmund Collins, on "The Future of Canada." By Professor G. D. Roberts, of Kings College. By Geo. Stewart, jr., of Quebec. By the Rev. Dr. Eccleston, on "the Canadian North-West." By John McDougall, on "The Minerals of Canada." And by the Editor, G. M. Fairchild, jr., on "The History of the Canadian Club." The work will also include extracts from the speeches and letters of the President.

"The book is to be issued in beautiful style, at $1 per copy.

"A great many Canadians will doubtless desire to possess themselves of this rare compilation, and, by purchasing copies, indicate the interest which is manifest throughout Canada in the attempt of the Canadian Club to lay before Americans the resources, advantages, and attractions of their native country.

"Parties desirous of obtaining copies can do so by enclosing the price of the book to James Ross, Canadian Club, 12 East 29th St., New York."

A LIVING MIRACLE.

"My infant daughter was taken ill with cholera infantum, the doctor said she could not live. The Reverend Wm. McWilliams would not allow her head to be lifted when he baptised her, she was so weak. Dr. Fowler's Wild Strawberry gave immediate relief. She is a living miracle, hale and hearty. Since that time (7 years) our house has never been without that remedy." * * * * From statement of George Johnston, Harwood, Ont.

The Yard.

In the early spring it is a good plan to arrange the surroundings of the yards and make them look bright and cheerful for the summer. A very little labor and time will do wonders in transforming a bare yard into a pretty grass plot, and where burdock and thistles had grown unmolested, substitute sweet flowers and vines. With a garden rake all the dry stalks and autumn leaves, straw and manure can be gathered together in heaps, piled into a wheelbarrow and taken away. Take a large hoop or wheel, and mark a circle by placing stones around it, fill the inside with good rich earth from the garden or road; raise it about six inches. Then mark out a smaller circle; place around another circle of stones—if you can get the white quartz they are prettier, as they show more distinctly. There should be a space of five or six inches between the outer and inner row of stones. Fill in more earth. Then build up another row of stones, and form them into a shallow dish or tub; fill this with earth, and set out a geranium, heliotrope, or petunia; sow flower seeds in the circles of earth, such as mignonette, sweet alyssum or portulaca, and you will have a rockery that will be a delight, not only for one summer, but for many to come. Rustic flower pots can be made of hollow logs sawed off a foot and a half high. Fill in the cavity with rich mould or earth, and if you have pelargoniums or any other house plants, set them in and they will thrive splendidly; while wandering Jew, Kenilworth ivy, or portulaca will form a beautiful fringe to fall over the rough sides of the blocks and gladden your eyes all summer, and the same logs will answer year after year, and require very little care to keep them in loveliness. Such cheap simple arrangements add very much to the looks of a home, and one feels happier to have eyes rest on beauty than on deformity. Neat clean grounds are an index of the inhabitants of a dwelling, far more than the usual observer would imagine. It does not require costly fixings to make a home pleasant and inviting; but neatness is an indispensable requisite in every place. Children can be taught at an early age to help keep the yards tidy. Have them feel they are responsible agents, and if they know it is expected of them to clean up what litter they make, they will very soon learn that it is just as easy to keep yards clean as to clean them up.

—A most pernicious habit, which is very prevalent among children, is that of sleeping with the head under the bed covers. Sometimes children acquire this habit when young, on account of their 'fear of the dark.' Unwise parents often do their children a vast deal of harm by using the imaginary man in the dark as a means of frightening the little one into obedience. Such children, when put to bed, nestle down under the covers as soon as the light is put out, and thus breathe over and over, during sleep, air which is contained by exhalations from both the skin and the lungs. Another cause for this injurious mode of sleeping is cold sleeping rooms. The custom of sleeping in rooms in which there has been no fire for weeks or months is a most pernicious one for many reasons, and this may fairly be included among the number of grave objections to the old-time custom. The temperature of such a room is often some degrees below freezing. Children, and even older people, sleeping in a cold bedroom, are often compelled to cover the head with the bedcovers to protect the nose and ears from freezing. Children who sleep in this way wake in the morning pale and languid, and present all the evidences of systematic poisining. Such children do not develop properly. When they sleep with older persons, as is often the case, the evil is greatly increased by the greater degree of impurity of the air beneath the bed clothing. Infants are not infrequently smothered to death by this means. Several cases of this sort have come under the personal observation of the writer. The habit of sleeping with the head thus covered is sometimes continued to adult life, and a vast deal of constitutional injury is thus done.—Pacific Record.

WHAT BRAIN WORK WILL DO.—A striking instance of the extent to which saving machinery is carried now-a-days is shown in the tin-can industry. Everybody knows that tin cans are manufactured by machinery. One of the machines used in the process solders the longitudinal seams of the cans at the rate of fifty a minute, the cans rushing along in a continuous stream. Now of course a drop or two of solder is left on the can. The drop on the outside is easily enough wiped off, but it is not so easy to secure the drop on the inside. It would not do of course to retard the speed of the work—better waste the drop, it is only a trifle anyhow—and to nine hundred and ninety-nine men in a thousand would not seem worth a minute's attendance. The thousandth man worked for a firm using one of these machines, and he set about devising an ingenious arrangement for wiping the inside of the can, thereby saving that drop of solder and leaving none to come in contact with the contents of the can. He was encouraged by his employers to patent his invention, did so, and has already received several thousand dollars in royalties for its use. As the machine solders 30,000 cans a day, the solder saved by his invention amounted to about fifteen dollars a day. It pays to think as you work.

—"Fire 97," said a busy hotel clerk to the new porter. Presently the porter returned looking very much nussed up. "I fired him sor," he said; "but, begorra for jist wan blissed moment I thought he had me.'

Strictly True

In every respect and attested by the testimony of thousands that Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor is a sure and painless cure for corns. The claim that it is just as good made by those endeavoring to palm off imitations for the genuine, only proves the superiority of 'Putnam's.' Use only Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Sure, safe, painless.

"THE YEAR WITHOUT A SUMMER."—Was in 1816. January was mild, as was also February, with the exception of a few days. The greater part of March was cold and boisterous. April opened warm, but grew colder as it advanced, ending with snow and ice and winter cold. Buds and flowers were frozen in May; ice formed half an inch thick, and corn was killed. Frost, ice and snow were common in June. Almost every green thing was killed, and fruit was nearly all destroyed. Snow fell to the depth of three inches in New York and Massachusetts and ten inches in Maine. July was accompanied with frost and ice; on the fifth of this month ice was formed of the thickness of window glass in New York, New England, and parts of Pennsylvania, and corn was nearly all destroyed in certain sections. In August ice formed half an inch thick. Corn was so frozen that a great deal was cut down and dried for fodder. Very little ripened in New England, and the Middle States. Farmers were obliged to pay four and five dollars a bushel for corn of 1815 for seed at the next spring planting. The first two weeks of September were mild, the remainder of the month was cold, with frost, and ice formed a quarter of an inch thick. October was more than usually cold, with frost and ice. November was cold and blustering, with snow enough for good sleighing. December was quite mild and comfortable.

THE AGE OF WOMAN.—When does a woman cease to be young, or rather to be entitled to that epithet? This is the delicate question which a French prefect has undertaken to answer. Some years ago a certain will left the sum of 10,000 francs, the interest of which was to be given annually to a young unmarried woman of the working classes, who, by her capacity and good conduct, should be in a position to marry with the help of a little money. In carrying out the will it became necessary for the Prefect of the Seine to determine the exact significance of the words "young women," and he has decided that they include the period between 21 and 30. At 30, then, an unmarried woman may bid adieu to youth, and resign herself to be an old maid. This extremely excathedra pronouncement may win a feigned or forced assent from the candidates for the Barbet-Batitol prize, as this kind of prix Monthyon is called, but it will meet with only contemptuous rejection from the sex at large, at least that portion of it which has passed the fatal limit. A woman is as young as she looks, just as a man is as young as he feels, and a really capable woman is never 30 until she is 40 or married.—The Argonaut.

SAVED BY SPIDERS' COBWEB.—Angus Morrison, of Big Glen, was making a loom some days ago, when he struck a chisel into his hand between the thumb and finger, cutting an artery, and the blood spurting out, struck the ceiling and soon covered the floor. Help was called in and the bleeding finally stopped by applying a bunch of spiders' web. The third night afterwards the bandage came off and the blood poured out like the stream of a tea pot, soaking the bed and soon making a large pool on the floor. The arm was tied above the cut, and everything done to stop the bleeding, but ineffectually. Finally the spider's webs were again thought of and applied, and the bleeding stopped, but not before Mr. Morrison had fainted away, and his friends thought him dead. He recovered, however, with no other dressing than spiders' web, the wound healed up, and Mr. Morrison is now nearly as well as ever.

AN INTERESTING EXPERIMENT.—Some curious experiments were made last night in the Tour St. Jaques, that famous and lofty monument of Paris which stands in the Rue de Rivoli, between the Louvre and the hotel de Ville. It was sought to demonstrate the rotatory movement of the earth by Foucault's method, and for that purpose a thin steel wire was affixed to the top of the monument, and to this a leaden ball was attached, which caused it to act as a pendulum. The ball was kept in the middle of the room on the first floor of the building by means of a platina wire. The director of the laboratory of physical studies, who superintended the experiments, gave a signal, and the wire was burned by an electric current, the pendulum being thus released, and after a series of oscillations it returned to its original place in twelve seconds. The unusual spectacle of the illumination of the windows of the tower had attracted a good many sightseers to the place.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

—A darkey in Abbeville, Ga., has discovered a strange method of locating the bodies of drowned persons. A man was drowned there the other day, and this darkey placed a bundle of fodder in the river where the man had sunk. It floated down about fifty yards and suddenly stopped and commenced to whirl slowly round and round. Here the darkey dived and secured the body. He has found four other lost bodies by this means.

—When the Prince of Wales was leaving Manchester after his recent visit a member of the Town Council pushed himself forward and in a burst of loyalty said: "Bring the old woman with thee next time." The Prince looked surprised, not exactly understanding to whom the civic dignitary was referring. Observing this the latter said: I mean your mother!" for in this familiar and local fashion he had alluded to Her Majesty.

A BRIEF SPEECH.—A Judge, anxious to avoid a lengthy speech from a barrister, requested him to be as brief as possible in his remarks. The limb of the law contented himself therefore with the following:—'My lud, my opponent is wrong, I am right; you are a good judge.' With this he sat down.

CHOLERA INFANTUM.

That terrible scourge among children may be speedily cured by Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. All forms of of bowel complaints, nausea and vomiting, from an ordinary diarrhœa to the most severe attack of Canadian Cholera, can be subdued by its prompt use. It is the best remedy known for children or adults suffering from summer complaints.

Perfect Hair

Indicates a natural and healthy condition of the scalp, and of the glands through which nourishment is obtained. When, in consequence of age and disease, the hair becomes weak, thin, and gray, Ayer's Hair Vigor will strengthen it, restore its original color, promote its rapid and vigorous growth, and impart to it the lustre and freshness of youth.

I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for a long time, and am convinced of its value. When I was 17 years of age my hair began to turn gray. I commenced using the Vigor, and was surprised at the good effects it produced. It not only restored the color to my hair, but so stimulated its growth that I have now more hair than ever before.—J. W. Edwards, Coldwater, Miss.

Ayer's Hair Vigor,

Sold by all Druggists and Perfumers.

IF YOU ARE SUFFERING from debility and loss of appetite; if your stomach is out of order, or your mind confused, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine will restore physical force and elasticity to the system, more surely and speedily than any tonic yet discovered.

For six months I suffered from liver and stomach troubles. My food did not nourish me, and I became weak and very much emaciated. I took six bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, and was cured.—Julius M. Palmer, Springfield, Mass.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla,

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co.'s Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), where advertising contracts may be made for IN NEW YORK.

THE DEVIL'S CODE. The Royal Library at Stockholm contains a remarkable literary curiosity, called the devil's code, which is said to be the largest manuscript in the world. Every letter of this gigantic piece of work is as beautifully formed as if it were minutely and carefully drawn, and it seems almost impossible that it should have been done by a single human being. A poor monk, who had been condemned to death, was told that his sentence would be commuted if he were able to copy the whole of the code in a single night. Relying on the impossibility of his task, his judges furnished him with original, pen and ink, and left him in his well-barred prison. A drowning man catches at a straw. The task was impossible to a human agent. Afraid of a cruel and certain death, and perhaps doubting the promise of a better life hereafter, he invoked the aid of the Prince of Darkness, promising to surrender his soul if he were assisted in his task. The dark spirit appeared as soon as he was called, concluded the contract, sat down like any copying clerk, and next morning the devil's code was finished.

—An Indiana farmer, who told his boys to burn every bumble bees' nest they found on the farm, and who was complaining of the failure of his clover seed crop, was surprised when Maurice Thompson, the naturalist, said: That is why your clover seed fails you. Bumble bees make your clover seed. It is a fact that a strong nest of bumble bees in a big clover field is worth $20 to the owner; for these insects are the chief agents in fertilizing the blossoms, thereby insuring a heavy crop of seed. In Australia there are no bumble bees of our kind, and they could not raise clover seed there until they imported some.

ONE AND INDIVISIBLE.—London, June 7.—The Times this morning publishes another instalment of its "Parnellism and Crime" articles. Opposite its leader page it prints a fac-simile of the tenth page of the Irish World, of New York, of Feb. 16th, 1884, and also the greater portion of Patrick Ford's address published in the same issue. The publications are accompanied by an explanatory article describing the various finds mentioned and the fate of the men connected therewith. In an editorial on the subject, the Times says the whole conspiracy whether carried on by mealy-mouthed gentlemen who sit at London dinner tables or by fiends who organize murder, is one and indivisible. It is paid out of the same purse, worked by the same men, directed to the same ends, and inspired by one universal hatred of England, and and a determination to bring about if possible a complete separation between England and Ireland. Whether the money goes to support Gladstonians in parliament or to equip desperadoes for the commitae of outrages in English towns is a mere matter of tactics. Whenever we find the constitutional agitators with the mask laid aside, as in the case of Mr. Davitt at Bodyke, we find that their language, sentiments and aims are identical with those of the ruffians by whose support they live and whom they in parliament pretend to be ignorant of.

RARE COMMERCIAL HONESTY.—Says the Halifax Herald: An instance of honorable dealing in business, sufficiently rare to be deserving of newspaper notoriety, comes from Moncton, N. B. Mr. E. M. Estey, a druggist at that place and proprietor of several toilet and medicinal articles of note, became involved some two or three years ago and was obliged to assign. His embarrassment was due to lack of capital and heavy expenditure appearing in every New Brunswick and P. E. Island news paper, and some in Nova Scotia as well. Had the estate been closed up it would probably have paid less than 50 cents on the dollar, but Mr. Estey was allowed to continue by arrangement, and though under no legal obligation to do so, he has since been paying his creditors in full, 100 cents on the dollar. It is needless to say Mr. Estey now stands better with those with whom he has had business relations than ever before. He is setting a good example to others by opening up trade through the medium of New York exporting houses with the distant colonies in Australia and the China seas.

GOOD WAGES AHEAD.—George Stinson & Co., Portland, Maine, can give you work that you can do and live at home, making great pay. You are started free. Capital not needed. Both sexes. All ages. Cut this out and write at once; no harm will be done if you conclude not to go to work, after you learn all. All particulars free. Best paying work in this world.

AN ISLAND DISAPPEARING.—Sable Island is being submerged, and is traveling eastward at such a rate that any chart of it to be accurate, would need to be corrected every few years. It is safe to say that the latest chart obtainable by mariners is some miles at least out of the way. Since the beginning of the present century, the island has decreased in length from forty miles to twenty-two; in breadth, from two and one-fourth to something less than one; in height, from two hundred feet to eighty, while there has been a variation in the position of the west end of less than twenty-five miles. With such startling figures as these before us, it is not difficult to forecast its future. Slowly perhaps, yet none the less surely, and defying all attempts or devices of feeble man to stay its advance, the time is coming when the victorious waves will fling their triumphant spray high over the last vestige of dry land, and the lights of Sable Island will no longer send their warning gleams across the fatal sands, that will then, far more than ever, merit the sorrow-laden title of "An Ocean Graveyard."—[Scribner.

MIRACULOUS.

"My Miraculous Cure was that I had suffered from kidney disease for about two years, was off work all that time. A friend told me of B. B. B., I tried it, and am happy to say that I was cured by two bottles." Wm. Tier. St. Marys, Ont.

—The London Times furnishes some figures on the enormous cost of maintaining standing armies and keeping them in readiness for war that are almost startling, but of exceeding interest, especially as comparisons are made with America. It says:

The amount annually spent by the European countries to keep up their armies and navies is £181,120,000. The amount spent in America is about £8,000,000 Adding, therefore, the cost of war debts and armaments together it will be seen that Europe pays £394,700,000 and America £18,000,000 per annum. How possibly can Europe hope to hold her own against her transatlantic rival, when she handicaps herself in the struggle for commercial supremacy with the stupendous charge of 394,000,000 per annum? As if this were not enough, Europe is each year increasing her burden, while America is each year reducing hers.

An Indignant Wife.

THE IDEA THE AVERAGE WOMAN HAS OF A BANK ACCOUNT.

A Chicago bank man who has a pretty wife told a pretty good story at his club the other day by way of illustrating the proverbial ways of women. She had said to him: 'Dear, now I'm not going to ask you for an allowance; that is vulgar. You put a couple of thousand in the bank to my credit, give me a check book and I'll run the house, clothe myself, pay the servants and relieve you of so much care.'

The gentleman was struck with the idea. 'After all,' he said to himself, 'this marriage scrape I've got myself into promises to pan me out. Dear, good little woman! How thoughtful of her. Why, of course!' So he drew a check on his own bank, deposited it in another bank to his wife's individual credit, and gave her a separate bank and check-book. Woman-like she tossed the bank-book into a drawer, but held religiously to the check book. Long before the month had expired she got notice from the bank that her account was exhausted, and the last check had over drawn it $1.79. 'Would she kindly make a new deposit?'

The lady was in a furious fume. There must be something wrong, he knew. She pouted over her check book, counted the stubs and the blank checks and then she knew that the bank had made a blunder. She donned her new Easter bonnet and her spring wrap, and full of the spirit of the occasion and the outrage of the bank's insult, sailed into the cashier at his window.

'What does this notice mean?' she asked in a voice quivering with passion.

'It means that your account is overdrawn, madame, that's all.'

'It is not, sir. My husband gave me this check book, and you see yourself that out of the hundred checks in it I haven't used fifty. There's the book sir; see for yourself. Of course you'll have to explain this to Mr——, I never was so insulted!'

'But, my dear madame, don't you see you have drawn out all the money to your credit and $1.79 besides?'

'I just don't care anything about that. My husband gave me a check-book, and here less than half of them
