[illegible] philosopher run mad, to see much [illegible] It is quite pleasant to find your own [illegible] completely squeamish about consistency, [illegible] wherever the Whigs are concerned. [illegible] himself with the usual cant [illegible] of gentlemen, to a political party, who [illegible] of Irish wrongs, to a political party, who [illegible] the complete orbit of all possible [illegible] the blessed days of Sir Robert Peel [illegible] high and palmy state, until now that they are fast sinking into a state of extinction. The Tories, I beg pardon, the Conservatives of Sir Robert Peel, in fact converging to the Whig [illegible] I doubt not, must and merge in the overwhelming tide of Hodierna Whiggery.

Surely the editor of the Gazette cannot be in earnest; he is only acting a part; it is all a make believe; when he rails at Whig inconsistency; it is "a very pretty nibble"; for, the very head and front of their offending is only a point, a minimum visible, by the side of the broad, glaring, Sagittate Solecism, of the Pious and Patriarch of Conservatism, that Arch Renegade, the very Proteus of the political world, Sir Robert Peel, who was erewhile the glorious Chief of the Tories, who led their embattled phalanx to war against Whig advocates and abettors of that abominable Catholic Emancipation, that fomented all the destructive Reforms, which have [illegible] and amazement through the Conservative; which have made the grange pale as the [illegible] of death, and have caused the ruddy ruby [illegible] of our high church [illegible] to look like "the setting moon in the [illegible] and pale in the western wave," to the April morn, clad in a wintry cloud". The Gazette should be a little more tender and [illegible] upon Whig inconsistency, and I would most [illegible] recommend to him, to pull out the beam from the eyes of Conservatives before he point his digit at the mote, real or imaginary, in Whig optics.

Where is his own consistency—when he can endure such a rater as Sir Robert, whose political creed, various at suitable scamper—he, in the short space of his public life, undergone such changes and modifications, that losing its own original proper identity, it would require a very critical, or microscopic eye, to trace its divergencies from our Whig orthodoxy. Sir Robert's creed, in the successive improved editions through which it has passed, is now almost the exact counterpart of the Dolon ship famed in Grecian song which had been repaired and mended, until there remained not one stick of the original timbers, of which she was constructed, when Ariot hunted on the [illegible] wave.

Arrt.—The transport Arab, Freeman, 25th May from Cork, arrived on Satu[illegible], with detachments of the 15th, 24th, [illegible] regiments, consisting of the following [illegible] and men:—

[illegible]th Regiment—1 captain, 1 subaltern (Captain Barnham and Ensign Dickenson,) 1 [illegible]geant and 101 rank and file.

24th Regiment—1 captain, 1 subaltern (Captain John Harris and Lieut. J. M. Stack,) 2 sergeants and 75 rank and file.

32d Regiment—1 captain, 1 subaltern, (Captain Everly and Ensign Mowry,) 3 sergeants, 63 rank and file.

All of whom proceed to-night (without halting,) per steamer, to join their several regiments.

Staff-Assistant-Surgeon Stewart also arrived in the Arab.

At the period of the sailing of the Arab, the 1st Royals were at Cork, in daily expectation of orders to embark for Canada, in the Fort Moon transport, which vessel was then in waiting for them.—Quebec Gazette.

The Rideau Canal.—From advices received from the scene of the late accident, so late as Monday last, we learn that the most energetic exertions are being adopted to repair the breach on Bytown. Capt. Bolton, and several other officers of the engineer Department are on the spot, attended by a body of tradesmen and labourers, and one week only from the date of the latter, was mentioned as the time required to make good the damage. We also learn, that [illegible] to prevent a similar occurrence, a [illegible] wash, on the opposite side of the river, is immediately commenced, and completed [illegible] Tate Bywash, will pass behind [illegible] Master's Cottage, on the hill by the locks [illegible] by means of a cut, communicate with [illegible] opposite where the Lock empties [illegible] river.—British Whig.

Melancholy.—Mr. Wm. Henry Cook, [illegible] the city of London, was accidently drowned [illegible] a few evenings since in the north branch [illegible] Creek. The particulars of this melancholy event are have not learned. Mr. Cook married last August to an amiable young lady who, at present is inconsolable and ill-able to bear this afflicting dispensation. Mr. C was much esteemed for his many virtues by those who knew him.—Zendenick Emigrant.

Fire.—The blacksmith's shop of Mr. [illegible] Chrysler was entirely consumed by fire on night of the 12th instant, and very nearly all his account books &c. were destroyed. Mr. C. is an industrious mechanic, and [illegible] ing a good business; and it is to be hoped his neighbors will show their sympathy in [illegible] affliction in the most substantial manner, those who are indebted to him coming forward and settling their accounts in an honorable manner, so that he may not lose earnings which [illegible] destruction of his books will not allow him gain by any other means than the upright [illegible] customers.—Ib.

The Rebellion Arabs.—We were pleasantly gratified by witnessing the extraordinary [illegible] of these inhabitants of the desert, who have been engaged by the proprietors of a museum to increase, with their presence, the attractions of this place of amusement. Our Parisian neighbors, by their unusual [illegible] of their wonderful faces, had led us to [illegible] very highest anticipations of what we should [illegible] we are happy to be able to say that these expectations were not disappointed. The [illegible] were not greatly astonished by the [illegible] with astonishment, and surprised by [illegible] thing of the sort we have ever seen or heard of. The tongues of the illustrious [illegible] of [illegible]
