LIVERPOOL AND LONDON
Fire and Life Insurance Company.
Instituted in 1836.
Incorporated by Special Acts of Parliament.
Capital, Two Millions Sterling.
Unlimited liability of the Stockholders of the Company.
Subscribed Capital, £1,500,000.

Instalments called in,	£197,197	10	0
Accumulated funds,	346,972	4	9
	£544,169	14	9

THE 18th annual General Meeting of this company was held at Liverpool on the 16th Feb'ry last, when the following Report of the business of the Company during the past year was submitted:—

"The increase in the Fire Insurance Business must be satisfactory to the Proprietors, as shewing the rapid and safe progress which the Company is making. The receipts for the first year have increased considerably over those of 1852, while the losses have materialy diminished.

	1852.	1853.
Receipts,	£98,654	£113,612
Losses,	59,091	42,846
Profits,	£39,563	£70,766

These results show, notwithstanding the very numerous and destructive fires that have occurred both in this country and especially in America, that great caution has been exercised in taking risks, on the part of those on whose judgement the Directors must necessarily in a great measure rely. The reserved fund now amounts to £143,712.

The Officers for the current year at Liverpool are:

TRUSTEES:
SIR THOMAS BERNARD BIRCH, Bart., M. P.

POETRY.

LIFE, DEATH, IMMORTALITY.

To tread along a dreary way,
With none to call a friend,
Or c'en a heart to sympathize,
When grief your feelings rend;
To strive to wear a joyous smile,
In spite of all your care;
To stifle oft the heartfelt sigh,
And stop the unbidden tear;
To walk with step firm and erect,
Through all this mortal strife,
To banish sorrow from your thoughts—
And this, all this is life.

And when life's fitful fever's o'er,
Its troubled stream o'erflowed.
When all its dark and dreary round,
And night-cloud's ills forbode;
When bitter thoughts of life ill spent,
Come creeping on the mind;
To part from all on earth that's dear,
From dear friends left behind;
The icy hand, the clammy brow,
The struggling grasp for breath,
The severing of life's silken chord—
And this, all this is Death.

And then, we passed the dreaded bourne,
The spirit high in air,
Is borne aloft on angels' wings,
For ever freed from care;
To meet in that celestial sphere
Some love'd one gone before,
And join the voice in angels' song,
Praise God forever more:
Oh, who can paint in colours bright,
The spirits there you'll see,
But yet an angel's whisper soft,
"'Tis Immortality."

Miscellaneous.

MISS SLICER'S SOLILOQUY.

Well, I declare, I never get so tired any other day in the week as I do on Sunday; but now I have eat my supper and washed and put away the tea things, and so I'll sit down and rest a few minutes.

I should'nt think the people of Centreville would tolerate such a minister as Mr. Culver may longer. He does preach such dull prosy sermons, with no striking thoughts clothed in beautiful language, no flight of fancy, no highly-wrought sentences. He only exhorts his hearers to be good and useful, warns them of the punishment that is sure to follow sin, and explains a few passages of Scripture. So old-fashioned! One can't be religious if they would.

I think we need some one here that is talented, some young clergyman that is unmarried.

A man without any family would have so much more time to prepare his sermons, and visit the members of his church. Poor Mr. Culver! I never can see such an inattentive audience as his was to-day. But then it was ridiculous for Deacon Jones to go to sleep in meeting time, sitting bolt upright in his long pew, with his mouth wide open, and snoring loud enough to disturb the whole congregation.

I did feel sorry for old Mrs. Jones when she jogged his elbow, and he gave such a start, knocking her parasol and hymn-book down to the floor. And then to think Ellen Mason should giggle so. I know I blushed every time I looked at her, sitting there looking as innocent as a kitten, with the lining to her dress cut out so low in the neck. Thinks her shoulders are white, I suppose. The shameless creature! If I could get hold of her, I would give her one good shaking, I know. I dont like Mrs. Green's new spring bonnet at all; it is so dashing for a woman of her age. Her children hav'nt got any manners—no kind of bringing up. Everybody could see that when that ugly little brat, Sammy, screamed out in the porch, "there goes old Sally Slicer." His mother boxed his ears soundly, but not half so much as he deserved, and one of those proud Misses Hall smiled, pretending however that she tried to suppress it. I do think it's real wicked for those girls to stand and talk and laugh with the gentlemen in the porch, and then get into church and look straight at the minister and their hymn-books all the time so seriously. I believe they are arrant hypocrites. But it's getting dusk, and I'll go into the parlour and watch by the west window to see who goes by.

That snow-ball bush is right in the way now it's "leaved out," but I'll have it cut down next week. There come the Miss Meddlers; going to Methodist meeting:—think somebody will offer to go home with them, I suppose. All they go to meeting for is to get beaux. Methodist indeed! Time was when all Methodist women were dressed as plainly as the Quakers; but now nobody wears so many feathers, and chains, and flounces, and furbelows, as the Miss Meddlers. There they go swinging and twisting along down the street. I wonder who that is; it must be Dr. Hall going to see Mary Sprague. He goes every Sunday night, and once or twice in the middle of the week besides, but I don't think it's any credit to either of them.

That must be Enoch Treadwell, going to see Polly Hill. The old fool! They say he has killed two wives, and I know Polly won't have anything to say to him. What a life that old maid must lead; she is always scrubbing; everything in her house must be clean and white as snow-drift. Folks say she is half crazy, and I believe it, for whenever there is a hard thunder shower Polly can be heard singing away as happy as a bird.

Mrs. Green and Enoch went there last Sunday night, and Polly locked the doors so that he could'nt get in, and stayed in the chambers. I guess she has done so again to-night. There, sure enough, goes Enoch in at the gate. He is knocking at the south door. No one comes to open it. How he comes back again, and looking in at the window. Polly is raising the chamber window, but I wonder what for:—She is heading a tin pail in her hands. Down goes a whole bucket of water right on to Enoch's head. Ha! ha! ha! the old fellow must be thoroughly drenched. There he goes off sputtering to himself, and I think he will never trouble Polly again. Here comes a waggon. It's George Harris and Susan White; he is leaning over towards her dreadful lovingly, with his arm laid across the back of the waggon-seat. I suppose he thinks Kate Parsons will see them go by. He intends that she shall hear him at any rate. Mercy! you might hear him about two miles, and hear the crack of his whip, anywhere in Centreville. There, Betsy Paine has put a light in the parlour again. She sets a light there every night to make people think somebody is there. But I have watched ten Sunday nights in succession and haven't seen even the shadow of a gentleman knock at the hall door. The deceitful creature! Well, I am tired. I should like to see how long Betsy Paine will keep the candle burning in the parlour, and who goes home with the Miss Meddlers, and how long the Dr stays at Mr. Spragues, but I guess I will not wait to see, for I'm tired and my eyes ache.

And Miss Sally groped her way from the parlor to the kitchen, lit the candle that had been placed in readiness, and stalked to her chamber. After carefully closing the door, she loosened her teeth, rattled them round in her mouth, took them out and placed them on the table, washed the colour from her face, and extinguished the candle.

PEPPERING 'EM.—"Did I ever tell you how near I came to losing my election as Senator?" said the Squire.

"No, I b'lieve not.

"Well, it was altogether owing to Waterem's not having a sufficient supply of liquor on hand. You see the main strength of our party lies in the upper end of the country—' specially among the inhabitants of the swamp as it is called. So you see, about two days before the election, I sends Sam up to the Swampers with five gallons of the real head ache—tremendous stuff—knock a horse down—the last Waterem had on hand. About too hours after back came Sam, horse in perspiration, himself in fright, and everything indicating an untoward state of affairs.

"What's the matter Sam?" said I.

"Matter?" said he, "matter enough—you have outraged the feelings of the virtuous Swampers; they swear that any man who expects to go to Senate for three years, and can't afford ten gallons of whiskey, is too mean for the post—they won't vote for him."

"Matters looked squally enough. Only one storekeeper within a day's ride and he a Whig. Of course he wouldn't sell any liquor to me so near election."

"What did you do?"

"Called a council of war immediately—Lawyer Ross and several more. Ross proposed a letter of apology to the disaffected. Rejected—wouldn't do without the whiskey. Cale Alright was the fellow to help us out, always full of expedients. He proposed to water the liquor up to the quantity. We did so, but on trying it, found it much too weak for our friends. Such stuff wouldn't go down with them. Cale asked if we had any other spirits; handed him about a gallon of gin; in it went, tasted it; not strong enough. Found about a quart of rum—poured it in. Sam tried it; "too weak," said he. We were at our wit's end. "Red pepper said Cale. It was brought; in went a pound; he stirred it up. "Capital," said he. We tried it and nearly blistered our throats; it would have killed rats. Sam took it up the next day, explaining that it was all owing to the scarcity of liquor in the neighbourhood, that a fresh supply of the best "Old Monongahale" had been obtained, and invited a trial of its merits. They were mollified—pronounced it the "rale stuff," and I became Senator by a majority of 200 votes.

A GALLANT COMMANDER.—The Constantinople correspondent of the London Times gives the following account of the last struggle of Lieutenant Burke, who fell at Giurgevo:—

Mr. Burke's body was found after the action in which he lost his life with no less than 33 wounds upon it. The Russians had taken his sword belt, but his sword was found hidden in some long grass close to the corpse. The ring finger of both hands was cut off. He was seen by the sapper who went with him, fighting desperately to the last, though surrounded by a horde of Russians. When he first leapt on shore from the boat six soldiers charged him. Two he shot with his revolver, one he cut down with his sword, the rest turned and fled. While he was encouraging the Turks, who were in the stream, to row quickly to the land, and forming them in line as they landed, conspicuous as he was in full uniform and by his white cap cover, a number of riflemen advanced from behind a ditch, and took deliberate aim at him. Poor Burke charged them with headlong gallantry. As he got near he was struck by a ball, which broke his jaw-bone, but he rushed on, shot three men dead at close quarters with his revolver, and cleft two men through helmet and all into the brain. He was then surrounded, and while engaged in cutting his way, with heroic courage through the ranks of the enemy a sabre cut from behind, given by a dragoon as he went by, neatly severed his head from his body, and he fell dead, covered with bayonet wounds, sabre gashes, and marked with lance thrusts and bullet holes. The sapper who was with him stood by Mr. Burke till the last, but could not save him. He is now only recovering from his wound and the effect of his exertion.

OBJECTS OF PITY.—Our pity is often moved on behalf of rich men, and particularly those who belong to the upper ten. Instead of comforts they have only the luxuries of life—instead of personal independence, a slavish dependence on the tyrannous fashions of the day. Summer comes, and most men of moderate means can stay in the city, and enjoy the privileges which Summer much more abundantly than Winter affords. The rich must lock up their mansions and be off. The "season" opens in June or July—they must not be seen here a week to enjoy it. Fond as they are of music, crazy as they are for the opera, they must pack up and trudge at the very time that the concert and opera season opens. While they stay they cannot furnish their house as they like. Fashion fits up their parlors to suit the taste of Mrs. Grundy, and upholsters their tea-rooms just as Mrs. Upton orders. They cannot walk in the most pleasant avenues, nor take their children to the Elysian Fields, because it is common. They cannot go to see the elephant, or take coffee where it is made better than anywhere else in the city, because admission to the elephant is only a shilling, and the coffee is sold so cheap that vulgar folks can afford to buy it. They cannot dress with freedom, nor carry a bundle in the street, though it would be a great convenience. Their children cannot go to the best schools, because they are free. They cannot hear the best preaching, because the preacher has not the D.D., and his salary is only $1,000 a year. When the poor are all freed, philanthropists must take their case in hand, and see what can be done for the miserably rich.

Yesterday, says the Louisville Courier, August 29, "may be truly called a day of mourning in Louisville. It was appointed for the burial of the unfortunate persons who were killed by the falling in of the church. In accordance with the request of the Mayor, all the principal business houses were closed and the bells were tolled. As early as 10 o'clock, many had congregated in the First Presbyterian Church to witness the funeral ceremonies. The hour of three was appointed for the commencement of the service. Such was the throng in and about the building, that it was thought best to conduct the services in the yard. It as well as the streets around it, were filled with human beings, and every one present seemed to be deeply impressed with the occasion. Only 7 of the bodies were brought. After the chaunting of a hymn, the Rev. Mr. Morrison, who was officiating in the church when it fell, gave a short account of the accident. He said that the door was blown open and the house was filled with dust, rendering the room dark. A crash was then heard and in the twinkling of an eye the work of destruction was complete. A few individuals sitting near the doors and windows sprang out. Immediately after the crash he saw several bodies covered with the ruins.

THE OLDEST BIBLE IN AMERICA.—Dr. John R. Witherspoon, of Greensboro', Ala., has a manuscript Bible, which he believes, on evidence of tradition and by a title page, to have been written about 840 or 850, A. D., making it a thousand years old. It is about eight inches broad, and five inches thick. The substance is written on parchment, as soft and nearly as thin as satin. The covers are of old English oak and pegs of oak are used to wedge in the thong of deer skin that fastens in the leaves. The page is splendidly illuminated with black, red and blue letters—very large at the beginning.

THE MARCH OF REFINEMENT.—An American dealer in ready-made linen advertises his shirts and chemisettes under the delicate application of "male and female envelopes."

VERSATILITY IN LADIES TALKERS.—A lady-writer complimentarily says "From the way in which ladies talk, you would imagine they were paid for their words so much a folio." (Shameful!)

SEMON RINGING WITH A YOUNG WIDOW.—Snow had fallen; the young of the village got up a grand sleighing party to a country tavern at some distance; and the interesting Widow Lambkin set in the same slay, under the same buffalo as myself. "Oh! Joe! don't!" she exclaimed as we came to the first bridge, catching me by the arm, and turning her veiled face towards me, while her little eyes twinkled through the moonlight.—"Don't what?" I asked; "I'm not doing anything."—"Well, but I thought you were going to take toll," replied Mrs. Lambkin. "Toll!" I rejoined; "what's that?" "How!" exclaimed the widow, her clear laugh ringing out above the music of the bells. "Dr. Meadows pretends he don't know what toll is!" "Indeed, I don't, then," I said, laughing in turn. "Don't know that the gentlemen, when they go on a sleighing party, claim a kiss as toll, when they cross a bridge? Well, I never!" When next we came to a bridge, and I claimed toll, the struggles of the widow to hold the veil were not sufficient to tear it; and somehow, when the veil was removed, her face was directly turned towards my own, and in the glittering of the moonlight, the horse trotted on himself, toll was taken for the first time in his life by Doctor Meadows. Soon we came to a long bridge but the widow said it was no use to resist, and she paid up as we reached it, without a struggle. "But you won't take toll for every arch, will you' Dr?" she asked. To which the only reply was a practical affirmative to the question. Did you ever, reader, sleigh-ride with a widow, and take toll at the bridges?

SINGULAR TREE.—In the interesting account which M. Huc, the French missionary, has given of his wanderings with M. Gabet, through China, Tartary and Thibet, he states that a wonderful tree exists on the north-western frontiers of China, which the Buddhists assert to have grown from hair of a reformer of their faith who live in the 15th century. It is called the "Tree of the Ten Thousand Images," and, according to the inhabitants, was not only miraculous in its origin, but is still miraculous in its nature, bearing upon every leaf, and all over its trunk, characters in the sacred language of Thibet—characters naturally formed. MM. Huc and Gabet saw this tree:—"We examined everything," says the former, "with the closest attention, in order to detect some trace of trickery, but we could discern nothing of the sort. The characters all appeared to us portions of the leaf itself, equally with its veins and nerves." In the excellent chapter on Buddhism in Mr. Knighton's Forest Life in Ceylon, the author quotes M. Huc's account of the wonderful tree, and professes himself equally at a loss to suggest any explanation, concluding, however, with a hint that it would be a very proper subject of inquiry on the part of some of our learned societies.

THE COST OF STRIKING.—When workmen obtain an advance of wages by simply abstaining from work for a few days, it would be too much to expect that they should not employ such gentle compulsion to enforce their demands. But when any class of operatives require to go about idle for nine or ten weeks without bringing the employers to their terms—as the dyers, dressers, and finishers of Manchester have already done—it is plain that they have committed a grievous blunder. It may be laid down as a general rule, that unless a demand for higher wages is complied with almost immediately, the trade cannot afford the advance; in which case it is worse than folly to persist.—Even if they should succeed, as they have sometimes done, in exerting a higher rate of wages than the state of the trade affords, they cannot expect to retain it long. The dyers of Manchester ask an advance of 10 per cent; but they have either not chosen the right time, or have not gone the proper way to work, or they would have gained their point before now. Supposing their late wages to average 20s. a week, each one of them has already lost £10; which is equal to ten per cent. of his earning for the next two years. Should they gain the victory at the end of the week (which is doubtful) and resume work on Monday morning at advanced rate of wages, it will take two years of the additional ten per cent. to make up for the substantial loss they have sustained by the strike. In all such cases they should court the cost before they begin.

On Saturday afternoon last, says the Catskill Wasp, was witnessed an instance of youthful heroism and affection worthy of record. A father and two sons, the latter mere boys, ten or a dozen years old, were coming up the Catskill creek, on a canal boat, when by some accident the father fell overboard, and being unable to swim sank twice, and the boys plunged into the water to save him. Right valiantly did the little fellows struggle, and well did they succeed in keeping their father above water until a boat came to their assistance and they were all taken on board.

BREVITIES.—He who is open, without levity; generous, without waste; secret, without craft; humble, without meanness; bold, without insolence; cautious, without anxiety; regular, yet not formal; mild, yet not timid; firm, yet not tyrannical;—is made to pass the ordeal of honour, friendship, and virtue.—Wise men are instructed by reason; men of less understanding by experience; the most ignorant by necessity; and the best by nature. Ladies are violets; the more modest and retiring they appear, the more you love them. Harmless mirth is the best cordial against the consumption of the spirits.

GARIBALDI.—The name of this famous Italian appears in a new connection in the foreign journals, by the Europe, and one that exhibits him in the light of a man of prudence and common sense as well as a true patriot. An improper use having been made of his name at Parma, to excite barren, hopeless and unproductive results, he has deemed it right to issue the following address, dated August 4:—

"Since my arrival in Italy I have twice seen my name mixed up with insurrectionary movements of which I do not approve. I conceive it my duty to declare this publicly, and to warn our young men, always ready to encounter danger for the redemption of their country, not to allow themselves to be so easily led away by the fallacious insinuations of deceiving or deceived men, who, pushing themselves on to untimely attempts, ruin, or at least discredit our cause.

G. GARIBALDI."

HUSBAND FOR SALE.—A strong-minded matron, tired of matrimony, publishes the following advertisement:—

"For Sale. A good husband, warranted sound and kind in any kind of business, especially in the matrimonial. He is of handsome figure and action, and can trot his two babies in an hour easily; he stands to the cradle without tiring, never squints at the tablecloth, is not afraid of locomotives, not even those of the crazy Old Colony road. He is a smart traveller, and is in every respect a good family beast. The present owner being about to emigrate to California, the above property must be sold without delay."

MARTYRS.—The martyrs to vice far outnumber the martyrs to virtue, both in endurance and number. Religion does not forbid the rational enjoyments of life as sternly as avarice forbids them. She does not require such sacrifices of love as ambition, such renunciation of quiet as pride—murder, such sleep-dissipation, as health, like intemperance, or greater wealth like extravagance or gambling. She does not embitter life like discord, or shorten it like drinking, or harrow it like revenge. She does not impose more vigilance upon, or more anxiety than selfishness, or half as much humiliation as vanity.

MORAL PARADOX.—"I think for gold is the idolized as unreasonable by those who never possess it. Deny, that it is a thirst for something solid.

Poetry.

THE HOMES OF ENGLAND.

The stately Homes of England,
How beautiful they stand!
Amidst their tall ancestral trees,
O'er all the pleasant land.
The deer across their greensward bound
Through shade and sunny gleam,
And the swan glides past them with the sound
Of some rejoicing stream.

The merry Homes of England!
Around their hearths by night,
What gladsome looks of household love
Meet in the ruddy light!
There woman's voice flows forth in song,
Or childhood's tale is told,
Or lips move tunefully along
Some glorious page of old.

The blessed Homes of England!
How softely on their bowers
Is laid the holy quietness
That breathes from Sabbath-hours!
Solemn, yet sweet, the church-bell's chime
Floats through their woods at morn;
All other sounds, in that still time,
Of breeze and leaf are born.

The cottage Homes of England!
By thousands on her plains,
They are smiling o'er the silvery brooks,
And round the hamlet-fanes.
Through glowing orchards forth they peep,
Each from its nook of leaves,
And fearless there they lowly sleep,
As the birds beneath the leaves.

The free fair Homes of England!
Long, long, in hut and hall,
May hearts of native proof be reared
To guard each hallow'd wall!
And green for ever be the groves,
And bright the flowery sod,
Where first the child's glad spirit loves
Its country and its God!

Among the literary novelties of the day is a plan for publishing a new monthly magazine, printed in embossed types for the blind. A fund is in course of formation to guarantee its cost for the first year, and the list of subscribers is already considerable. Several of the principal institutions for the blind have promised to support it, and the blind themselves are invited to contribute.

When Abernethy was canvassing for the office of surgeon to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, he called upon a rich grocer. The great man addressing him said, "I suppose, sir, you want my vote and interest at this momentous epoch of your life." "No, I don't," said Abernethy, "I want a pennyworth of figs; come, look sharp and wrap them up. I want to be off."

Upright Men.—We love upright men. Pull them this way and the other, and they only bend but never break. Trip them down, and in a trice they are on their feet again. Bury them in the mud, and in an hour they would be out and bright. You cannot keep them down—you cannot destroy them. They are the salt of the earth. Who but they start any noble project? They build our cities, whiten the ocean with our sails, and black, on the heavens with the smoke of their cars. Look to them, young men, and catch the spark of their engines.

The war of the Police on the milkmen of Paris is prosecuted with great vigour. A very extensive milk dealer named Lefevre, of Verre, near Nantes, and of the Rue d'Amsterdam of Paris, has been condemned to six months imprisonment, and to a fine of 20,900fr., for reducing his milk with water in the proportion of from 20 to 40 per cent. of the latter. Lefevre's books, which were kept with great accuracy, showed that his illicit profits thus realized in the course of the last three months were 80,000fr.

The Renowned Remedy!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

A MOST ASTONISHING CURE OF SCROFULOUS ULCERS.—A CASE CERTIFIED BY THE MAYOR OF BOSTON.

Copy of a Letter from J. Noble, Esq., Mayor of Boston, Lincolnshire.

To Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—Mrs. Sarah Dixon, of Liquorpond-st., Boston, has this day deposed before me that for a considerable period she was severely afflicted with Scrofulous Sores and Ulcers in her arms, feet, legs, and other parts of her body; and although the first of medical advice was obtained, at the cost of a large sum of money, she obtained no abatement of suffering, but gradually grew worse.

Being recommended by a friend to try your Ointment, she procured a small pot, and a box of the Pills, and before that was all used, symptoms of amendment appeared. By persevering with the medicines for a short time longer, according to the directions, and strictly adhering to your rules as to diet, &c., she was perfectly cured, and now enjoys the beast of health.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours truly,
August 12th, 1852. (Signed) J. NOBLE.

AN EXTRAORDINARY AND RAPID CURE OF ERYSIPELAS IN THE LEG, AFTER MEDICAL AID HAD FAILED.

Copy of a Letter from Mrs. Elizabeth Yeates, of the Post Office, Aldwick Road, near Bognor, Sussex, dated Jan. 12th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway.

Sir,—I suffered for a considerable period from a severe attack of Erysipelas, which at length settled in my leg, and resisted all medical treatment. My sufferings were very great, and I quite despaired of any permanent amendment, when I was advised to have recourse to your Ointment and Pills. did so without delay, and am happy to say, the result was eminently successful, for they effected a radical cure of my leg, and restored me to the enjoyment of health. I shall ever speak with the utmost confidence of your medicines, and have recommended them to others in this neighborhood similarly afflicted, who derived equal benefit.

I am, Sir, your obliged and faithful servant,
(Signed) ELIZABETH YEATES.

A DREADFULLY DISEASED ANCLE CURED AFTER BEING GIVEN UP BY THE FACULTY AT MALTA AND PORTSMOUTH HOSPITALS

The following important communication has been forwarded to Professor Holloway for publication, by Mr. B. Dixon, Chemist, King-st., Norwich.

Copy of a Letter from Captain Smith of Great Yarmouth, dated January 19th, 1853.

To Mr. Dixon.

Dear Sir,—I send you the particulars of a cure effected by Professor Holloway's invaluable medicines: Mr. John Walton, late in Her Majesty's Service, in the British Fleet at Malta, had a very bad ulcerated ancle, and after having been in the Malta Hospital for six months, was sent to England as an invalid to Portsmouth Hospital, where he remained an inmate four months, there, as at Malta, refusing to have the limb amputated, he was turned out incurable. He then came to Yarmouth, and was under a medical gentleman for about three months, but his ancle became so much worse, that all hope was lost. At this period, by my advice, he tried Holloway's Ointment and Pills, which by unremitted application, healed all the ulcers, and restored him to perfect health and strength.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours very truly,
(Signed) JOHN SMITH.

SURPRISING CURE OF A BAD BREAST, NERVOUS DEBILITY, AND GENERAL ILL-HEALTH.

Copy of a Letter from Mr. T. F. Ker, Chemist, &c. Lower Moss-Lane, Manchester, dated February 12th, 1853.

To Professor Holloway.

Dear Sir,—I have great pleasure in forwarding to you the particulars of a very extraordinary cure of a bad breast, effected solely by the use of your celebrated Ointment and Pills. Mrs. Martha Bell, of Pitt-street, in this town, had been for a considerable time labouring under nervous debility, loss of appetite, and general ill health, occasioned by ulcerated wounds in the breast. She had had much experience in the use of all the known remedies for the cure of ulcers, but without any beneficial result, in fact she had nearly lost all faith and hope of a cure being effected. In this distressing and painful condition of body and mind, she was persuaded to have recourse to your invaluable Ointment and Pills, which she immediately did, and in the course of a very short time the effect produced was most astonishing; her appetite was speedily improved, the sores and ulcers in the breast gradually healed, and the nervous excitement of her system was wholly removed.

I remain, Dear Sir, yours faithfully,
T. FORSTER KER.

The Subscriber having been yppointed Agent to the above Company for New-Brunswick, begs to announce that he is prepared to receive Proposals for FIRE AND LIFE ASSURANCE. The large Capital of the Company, and the number and influence of its Proprietors, enable it to rank with the most eligible Offices, either in America or Europe, with respect to the advantages offered to the Public.

FIRE BRANCH.

Persons assured by this Company are not subject to any covenants or calls to make good losses which may happen to themselves or other, nor do they depend upon an uncertain fund or contribution, the Capital Stock of this Company being an unquestionable security to the Assured in case of Loss or Damage by Fire.

LIFE BRANCH.

In addition to the more customary methods of Insurance, the Company likewise Assures Live on any of the following contingencies:—

For the term of One Year, Seven Years, or any other definite period.

For the whole continuance of Life.—The Premiums to cease, after a limited number of Annual Payments,

For Two Joint Lives.—The sum assured to be paid on the death of either.

On the longest of Two or Three Lives,—The sum assured to be payable at the death of the last survivor; or,

The Survivorships.—To secure the payment of the sum assured, if a life A die before another life B.

For a sum to be payable at age 60, or at death.

Premiums on Credit.—A portion of the Premiums may remain on Credit. Assurances may be effected in various ways, not enumerated, to meet the convenience of parties.

The important advantages afforded by the Company in the Life Branch will include the following viz:—

The Guarantee of an ample Capital, and Exemption of the Assured from liability of Partnership.

Moderate Premiums.

Large Participation of Profits by the Assured amounting to Two-thirds of its net amount, which may be applied at the option of the party effecting the Assurance:—1st. By the immediate payment of the sum so apportioned.—2nd. By an equivalent reduction of the future Premiums.—Or, 3rd. By an equivalent increase of the sum assured.

Small Charge for Management.—The expenses of the Office being borne in due proportion by the two Branches.

Prompt Settlement of Claims.

J. RUSSELL SPALDING'S

ROSE MARY

AND CASTOR OIL

IS decidedly the nicest and best toilet article in the world for the Hair. The ablest chemists who have examined it testify that as an agent for preserving the Hair and promoting its growth it surpasses any other article.

After a long series of experiments, Mr. SPALDING succeeded, by an intricate process, in freeing the Castor Oil used in this preparation from its peculiar odor and all greasiness, and in blending it with the ROSEMARY, &c., in such a manner as to form the cheapest and best OIL OR WASH Ever made, for which all who desire to preserve a good head of Hair until late in life, will be grateful.

The Sale of the Article has been Immense!

And its Success Astonishing—Use it if you wish.

1st. To beautify the hair.
2d. To curl the hair elegantly.
3d. To remove dandruff effectually.
4th. To restore the hair to bald heads.
5th. To give the whiskers a beautiful appearance.
