WESTERN ONTARIO DIARYMEN.

Notes of Interest by the Secretary of the Western Association.

Instructor Millar completed on June 13 the special course of instruction to cheese-makers, in accordance with the programme issued at the beginning of the season. He began this special work on April 9, and visited 27 factories, so situated as to reach the chief dairy centers of Western Ontario, and spending a couple of days at each factory.

Instruction in the best methods of making fine Cheddar cheese and operating the Babcock milk tester was given to 194 cheese-makers, who gathered at the various centers to meet Mr. Millar. Besides these a large number of patrons and farmers took advantage of Mr. Millar's visit to their factory and were present to learn something about the business of cheese-making.

In connection with his regular work as instructor and inspector, Mr. Millar visited Nilestown, Burnside and Muirkirk factories last week. Mr. John K. Knapp, of Orford township, and a patron of the Muirkirk factory, admitted the charge of diluting milk sent to the factory with water before Squire Beattie, of Highgate, and was fined $5.

Factorymen desiring the services of the inspector can secure them by applying to the secretary of the association, London. The charges are $7 50 for the first visit to any factory, and $5 for each additional visit during the season. These amounts to cover all necessary traveling expenses, as well as the regular charge for the visit.

The executive committee of the association have decided to make a grant of $5,000 towards prizes to be given is connection with the Provincial Fat Stock Show at Guelph. It is not definitely decided yet whether the money will be given for dairy products or for the best dairy cows.

There is some difficulty at present in securing sufficient accommodation in connection with the show for a suitable exhibit of dairy cattle. Efforts are, however, being made by those interested to secure the accommodation necessary, and if successful the prizes will probably be given for dairy cattle only.

The Agricultural and Arts Associatios have supplemented the amount by a similar grant, making a total of $100. This sum will likely be augmented by grants from some of the dairy cattle breeders' associations of the Province.

Prices for cheese took a strong upward turn last week. Several lots of first half of June make were sold at 8 1-4 cents, while 8 5-16 cents was offered for others. The shrinkage in the make, owing to the continued dry weather, may have had something to do with this strong upward tendency. However, the good keeping qualities of this year's Junes and the keener demand for new goods in England had a stimulating effect on the market as well.

GRATIFYING INTELLIGENCE.

Word Received of the Complete Recovery of Mrs. John Dowly.

Owen Sound, June 24.—Word has been received here of the complete restoration to health of Mrs. John Dowly, wife of a former well known and esteemed resident of the town. The intelligence has been very gladly received, as Mrs. Dowly has many friends here who are well aware of the lamentable condition of her health during the past six or seven years. Her illness has been found to result from a severe kidney complaint, and she has been restored to health by a judicious use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, a remedy which is now well known to most of the residents in this locality, as having previously effected some very remarkable cures.

The Scrap Bag.

Women are too conscious of each other's clothes. The open and bare-faced manner in which they will glare at one another, particularly in small towns and other places, must be obvious to the most unobservant. London is grown up sufficiently to be visited by a General Assembly, to be going to invest in an electric car system, but there are many women in this city (who should know better) who are yet unable to control their eyes at the approach of a well-dressed stranger, but let them roam up and down and around with the gaucherie and unconcealed interest of the innocent, unsophisticated village maiden. Very simple, touching and natural, possibly, but scarcely dignified! The trouble was just this: I was discoursing somewhat loftily to my little American friend on the somewhat fascinating subject of London—our London. Charming, bowered, leafy London, nestling in the heart of the garden of Ontario. Having explained the superiority of our system of education to anything known in the States, I was passing on to the general high state of civilization in which we of the Forest City moved, lived and had our being, when my companion suddenly came to a standstill on the corner of Queen's avenue and said: "I am going back home."

"Whatever is the matter, now," I demanded, in none too patient a tone, for there is nothing so unbearable as to be jerked up short when one is discoursing.

"Everybody we pass stares at me. I know there is a black smudge on my nose, or my hat is on one side. Please look and see."

"No," I could conscientiously assure. "You are looking very nice, and as sweet as a June rose, only much more stylish. Come along."

Then we started to cross the street, but stood back to escape the dust of a carriage that whirled rapidly around the corner. There were two occupants to that equipage—a stout, important-looking lady, and a corpulent, important-looking coachman, who would not take his eyes off his fat, shining, well-fed cattle long enough to glance at Queen Victoria; but the stout, important lady did not disdain to glance our way. Oh, no. She shifted her parasol, and refreshed herself with a long, slow, comprehensive stare at a little summer suit which the price of her own lace-decked parasol would probably cover.

And so it was that whole afternoon. "My lady in her carriage," and my lady footing it in the street, one and all did not disdain to show their interest in unknown women's dress either by a good slow stare, or the quick fleeting glance, which still betrays curiosity. I can take my affidavit that this is so, and that the number of women who were too engrossed with their own affairs to notice anything on the street was exactly three. Of course, it soon dawned on a bright daughter of Uncle Sam what it was that made all these Canadian women's heads turn sideways with a jerk, as if you had pulled them with a string, and she said with just a suspicion of amusement in her voice: "At home our ladies, when they ride or walk in the streets, are too much taken up with themselves to notice another woman's dress." When a woman allows her eyes to roam with pleasure and curiosity over the details or another's dress, there is always a slight feeling of apprehension that she will presently be fingering what concerns her so mightily. The best way to avoid all appearance of the squaw-like is to be entirely unconscious of what people have on. It's no use to keep your eyes turned resolutely away from your friend's new spring costume if you're thinking about it all the while, for of course she'll know. And neither is it safe to take a little glance out of the corner of your eye, for the other woman usually has corners to her eyes, too; and is just as capable of playing at "puss in the corner."

The real cause of all this childishness and need of dignity in women is utter lack of serious occupation and the want of concentration upon a large idea. A woman who is in earnest about something outside of herself and her own personal affairs will not be able to tell you how many yards Mrs. Jones-Robinson had in her skirt.

An opulent woman, who had got into society, as it were, by climbing over the fence when the policeman's back was turned, once asked Mrs. Stevens in a supercilious way about a young lady she was introducing. "Who is your friend, Miss ——?" she said.

"Miss —— is a charming girl," replied Mrs. Stevens; "well bred, as you see, accomplished, entertaining."

"Yes, I know," persisted the snob; "but, dear Mrs. Stevens, of course you know what I mean—who is she?"

"My dear woman," retorted Mrs. Stevens, "I can no more tell you who Miss —— is than I could have told those who asked me who you were when you first came to Newport."

Uncle Jack returns from a long walk, and, being somewhat thirsty, drinks from a tumbler he finds on the table.

Enter his little niece, Alice, who instantly sets up a cry of despair.

Uncle Jack — What's the matter, Allie?
