Baseball Athletics Win 3-2 in 11 Innings — Curling O.C.A. Officers — Bowling League Scores

Note and Comment

Curlers agree that the friendly game's the thing, and the O. C. A. have thoughtfully gone upon record in an endeavor to encourage the game by putting up a cup for the club that does the most of it. Now someone will come along and declare that even the friendly games have been legislated into the business class.

Mathewson is also a newspaper critic, like our own Ty Cobb, but the latter is, during these world series games, sticking to the job that did not make him famous, while Matty is working at both. After the Philadelphia game Big Six pointed out that Marquard made the mistake of his life in handing up a straight, fast one to Baker, that went over the fence and won the game. Now Matty hands up the very same brand and Baker treats it just as he did the Rube's the day before.

CITY BOXING TOURNAMENT TO BE HELD IN REPOSITORY.

The boxers as well as those who patronize the amateur bouts are pleased with the announcement that the 19th city tournament is to be held in The Repository, Simcoe and Nelson streets.

The interior arrangements will be much the same as in old Mutual-street, with the ring pitched in the centre of the building, where there is ample room for a thousand ringside seats. The general admission ticket holders will not have a gallery this time, but, instead, must be content to promenade outside the ringside enclosure. There are balconies on the north and south sides, which can seat three or four hundred. These will be sold as reserved seats. Entries for the tournament close next Monday at the Bell Piano Warerooms, 146 Yonge-street, where entry blanks and information may be secured.

A FINE NEW STORE.

United Cigar Stores, Limited, Open Fifteenth Store at 151 Yonge-Street

A very handsome new store has been opened at 151 Yonge-street, two doors from the corner of Richmond-street, by the United Cigar Stores, Limited. This is one of the finest and most up-to-date cigar and tobacconist stores in America. It is finished in mahogany with the latest fittings and every modern equipment for keeping stock in the best possible condition.

The United Cigar Stores, Limited, commenced business three years ago with four stores. To-day they have fifteen, all splendidly located on or very close to prominent corners of the city. In the fifteen stores forty clerks are employed.

This company are in a position to give their customers exceptional value and the best possible service. Buying goods in large quantities, as they do, they are enabled to buy direct from the makers, save all discounts and all middlemen's profits. The United Cigar Stores, Limited, is one of the good healthy commercial enterprises of the city and is certain to prosper in the future as it has in the past.

TY COBB SAYS ATHLETICS WON DECISIVELY

Coombs Outpitches Mathewson — Latter Not So Much to Blame for Defeat as Erratic Fielding.

BY TY COBB.

Champion batsman of the world and greatest living ball-player. Written exclusively for The World. Copyright, 1911, The Press Company.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—To-day's game, the third of the 1911 world's series, was an eventful one for John Coombs, the Athletic champions and the American League, for they set themselves and went after the New York Giants with absolute confidence, smashing and tearing their way into Christie Mathewson's choicest article of pitching, and when Baker saved the day with a terrific home run drive into the right-field wing of the grand stand it saved the Athletics' life, and when the 11th innings rolled around, they pushed two runs across the plate, making their count three, and as the Giants failed to make more than one run, the game ended, giving the Mack men this very decisive victory by the close score of 3 to 2.

The most important factor in this game was Coombs' wonderful work in the box. Just think, for ten innings the winners of the pennant in the National League failed to garner more little hits off his delivery. In their last they only succeeded in getting one more, making the total three.

Giants at Coombs Mercy.

Of Coombs' work, the most notable thing was his confidence and determination. His good arm shot up curves and fast ones for the eleven innings and he held the Giants completely at his mercy. Of his performance it was not alone headwork that made him so effective, but just natural ability.

To the vanquished the great Matty, I must say, pitched a wonderful game. But he was opposed by a marvelous team. For the first two or three innings he probably was not so effective. Then up until the seventh he held the Mack batsmen at his mercy. This, I mean, in retiring them almost in order. It is true Christy was hit hard all thru these innings, but when he wanted to baffle his man, he would strike him out or cause him to roll easy to the infield.

Matty was the master until Baker hit his home run in the ninth. After that the Athletics were more determined and sort of had him on the run. But he died gamely, and he has no consolation in knowing that the fielders behind him were more responsible for the loss of this battle than he. This game, I consider, is the keynote of the series. The team that would win the game I believed would win the series. I consider now that the Athletics will be victorious in this series of extraordinary pitching.

By winning to-day they have defeated their one and only strong opponent, Mathewson, who has worked two games in four days, and one who is familiar with the exertion he put into his work to-day can safely say that the strength spent in twirling is almost equivalent to an 18-innings' contest.

Matty Had the Curve.

During the last three innings Matty was kept propelling that wonderful curve of his over the plate continuously. And I don't believe that the real Matty would be ready again to do his best against the Athletics outside of four days' rest.

On the other hand, the Athletics have Bender, who will have had four full days before going in to-morrow against whomever McGraw might select, and Plank for the next day. Now, Manager Mack has two pitchers that will be well rested, while McGraw will have to call upon some unknown quantity to perform the duties on the slab. The pitching selection is the great question that is probably bothering the crafty McGraw to-night.

"Whom must I try to checkmate these Athletics?" is his worry. "My one strong card beaten, now where must I turn?" is probably whirling thru his brain.

The feature of to-day's game was Baker's sensational home run. Greater was the crisis that faced him to-day because it was to produce something then or lose for the Athletics. But, like yesterday, he rose majestically to the occasion, refusing to bite at the tantalizing and quick-breaking low curve ball delivered by Mathewson, and waited patiently like the stalking tiger. When his victim paused for a breathing spell, which was when Matty, in the hole with two balls, had to lay one over, then Baker stepped into this "cripple," as ball players call it, and literally smashed the ball on a dead line over the right field wall into the dense crowd in the grand stand.

Victory Dawns.

Baker trotted slowly around with the roar of applause of his admirers in his ears. This blow seemed to take the Giants off their feet, for no sooner than it happened the Athletics, intoxicated with the possibilities of victory dawning upon them, were buoyed up to the highest notch. Every man was determined and for the remainder of the game the American Leaguers had the Nationals on the go, for the Giants' leader Mathewson was losing his grip.

The batting features, of course, were first of all, Baker's drive, then Davis' two circles and a pair made by Collins. Barry followed closely behind. For the Giants, I must say that they appear weak against the Athletic pitchers, and don't seem to hit with any class. They just simply cannot meet the ball. The twirling is too good for them.

The fielding features for the Giants were Doyle's smooth work, the handling of every chance faultlessly by the outfielders, who covered much ground on the hard drives which left the Athletics' bats, and the spectacular play made by Herzog on Murphy's drive.

My impression of the Giants' fielding is that under the extreme fire they have shown a tendency to be erratic.

For the Athletics, the outfielders handled every chance with great judgment and precision. Barry made the real feature play of the entire series in going back of second and retiring Fletcher at first by a wonderful stop and throw. The infield play was good with the exception of Collins' very disappointing work.

Clever Backstops.

Lapp's throwing was truly wonderful. He handled Coombs' shoots in wonderful style in addition to heaving true to bases. His rival, Meyers, put up a smooth exhibition in taking care of Matty's delivery.

Brennan, of the National League staff, gave the decisions behind the plate, with Connolly, of the American League, on the bases. Both had several very close decisions to give, and from the extreme closeness of the game, some of their decisions did not please the fans. That is easily explained, of course, by the tension under which they were laboring. Brennan seemed to be weak on balls and strikes, especially the low ones, and his judgment was not as good as the umpires who preceded him behind the plate. Connolly's decisions on the bases were very close and only he was in the position to correctly judge them. It is hard to umpire from the stands.

Play in to-day's game was for the first time called on the minute. Matty, for the Giants, stepped gingerly into the centre of the diamond and majestically hurled, with that easy movement of his, several balls over the heart of the plate and the game was on.

British United Athletic Club.

The British United Club held a general meeting Sunday, and seeing that their boxing tournament was a big success, have decided to have another one at an early date. If McLean, who was runner up in the 125 lb. class at the Labor Temple will come down to the club he will receive his prize.

ATHLETICS IN ELEVENTH WIN RIGHT IN NEW YORK

Giants Ahead Until Ninth, When Baker Slams Out a Home Run.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.—By the score of 3 to 2 in eleven innings of baseball as sensational as a world's series ever furnished, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the New York Giants here to-day and jumped into a lead of two games to one in the series for the world's championship.

The White Elephants achieved this feat on their rivals' own grounds, facing the great Mathewson, who had puzzled them into the loss of one world's series, and who had started bravely in an attempt to make history repeat itself. Three times in 1905 and once this year the Athletics had fallen victims to Mathewson's skill. To-day they finally broke thru his guard and fell upon him so heavily in the latter part of the tense struggle that the great boxman and his mates were swept off their feet.

Backed up by the splendid work of Jack Coombs, the Kennebunk Iron Man, who pitched one of the greatest games of his career and held New York runless from the third inning almost to the game's very end, the American Leaguers pounded their way to victory. They tied the score when Baker, their brilliant third baseman, who won yesterday's game with a home-run hit, picked out one of Mathewson's wonders and drove it with tremendous force right into the far reaches of the right field stand for a homer in the ninth. They won out in the eleventh on three safe hits, helped out by two Giant errors.

The Giants did not give up without a struggle, and a hard one. A double, followed by an error gave them a run in the last half of the eleventh. But there were two out when the run came over and it was the Athletics' game when the next moment the only occupant of the bases was out in an attempt to steal second.

An Exciting Game.

No game played here within memory, in regular season or world series, has provided so much excitement for the fans. There were again nearly 40,000 of them on hand—the National Commission gave out the official attendance as 37,216—and inning after inning this great throng was brought to its feet by sensational fielding plays, exciting batting rallies, or remarkable feats of the rival boxmen.

Enthusiastic outbursts seemed almost evenly divided between the supporters of the two wonderful baseball machines. When New York forged ahead in the third the echoes were awakened by a big uproar. But when Baker in the ninth prevented what until then had looked like sure defeat for his team by lacing out his second home run in two days, the din was deafening, and it seemed as if the Athletics had as many staunch supporters in the stands as the Giants.

The enthusiasm was repeated when the Philadelphians took their winning lead in the eleventh. The New York fans stood loyally by their team up to the last, however, and never gave up hope until Lapp's true throw to Collins got Becker for the last out of the game.

Jack Coombs, hero of last year's world's series, earned further laurels to-day by letting down the Giants with only three hits in the prolonged contest. Two of these hits came in the third inning, resulting in a run, and then the durable Coombs was unsolvable until the eleventh inning when Herzog sent a rattling double to the left field fence. The Philadelphia pitcher employed a fast drop which swept up to the plate and then broke suddenly downward before the bats of the helpless Giants. Occasionally he delivered fast inshoots and most of the time the Giants hit with the handle of their bats.

Coombs Had Them Tied Up.

In seven of the innings the home team went out in order. Coombs struck out seven men, Snodgrass fanning twice, Devore, Doyle, Meyers, Mathewson and Herzog once. The Philadelphia hurler passed four men, but none of these figured in the scoring. Coombs was strong thruout, perfectly cool at critical stages, and sent the last ball he pitched up to the plate with terrific speed, showing that he had not weakened under the strain of eleven innings.

Manager McGraw pinned his hope for to-day's game on Mathewson and until the fatal ninth inning "Christy" held the Athletics runless, letting them down with five hits. He was favored by the "breaks" of the game, which enabled him to pull out of holes in the third and fifth innings. In the third inning, with Barry anchored on second after a single and steal, Lapp picked out a fadeaway and shot a liner directly into Doyle's hands and Barry was quickly snuffed out at the second bag. Had Lapp's drive been a yard either way a run would have followed.

Mathewson was further favored by fortune in the fifth when with Murphy on first, Davis singled thru the box, the ball striking Umpire Connolly on the leg. Unchecked by the umpire the ball would have gone to centre field and Murphy would have made third at least.

Mathewson was a broken reed when Frank Baker smashed his solid home run drive into the far right field seats in the ninth inning, tieing the score. He escaped the tenth without difficulty, but in the next and last spasm, the Philadelphians unlimbered their heavy artillery and before the cannonading of timely drives was over two runs had been made. In six of the innings the New York pitcher retired the Athletics in order. Three Athletics struck out. Oldring, who hit Mathewson for two doubles last Saturday, fanning twice and Davis once. Matty pitched a steady game, giving no bases on balls.

Philadelphia had six men left on bases and New York only one. Only three Giants reached second base, and two of these scored.

Barry the Fielding Star.

Jack Barry was the particularly brilliant fielding star of to-day's game, which was replete with scintillating stops and throws. Barry's most spectacular play occurred in the eighth inning when Fletcher hammered a hard twisting grounder thru the box. Barry came over with lightning speed, scooped the ball after it had taken a wicked bound and snapped it on a line to Davis a couple of feet ahead of the flying Fletcher. All of Barry's plays were cleanly and cleverly executed. He also starred in the Athletics' offence, knocking a double and a single in three times at bat and laying down a pretty sacrifice. He stole second in the third inning, beating Meyers' throw.

Captain Larry Doyle executed some fine fielding plays around second base, accepting ten chances without an error.

Eddie Collins was also busy around second base for the Athletics, having eleven chances and falling down on two of them. One of his misplays, a fumble of Becker's grounder in the eleventh inning, was responsible for the Giants' second run. Had he handled the ball cleanly it would have been the third out and the game would have been over with the score 3 to 1. Collins made two hits and stole a base.

Third baseman Herzog and shortstop Fletcher were alternately good and bad in fielding, their misplays in the eleventh inning paving the way for the Athletics' runs.

Giants Failed to Show Speed.

The much-vaunted speed of the Giants on the base paths was not in evidence to-day. Catcher Lapp of the Athletics turned back five of the Giant runners who attempted to steal. His throwing was above criticism and the ball was always on the runner as he slid into the bag. The Philadelphians were again successful in stealing on Meyers, who was able to check only one of their three attempts. Lapp caught a perfect game, handling Coombs' swift shoots in fine style.

In the outer garden Lord starred for the Athletics, capturing five long drives, several of which he had to back up against the fence to spear. A beautiful line throw by Murray, the Giants' right-fielder, to third, nipping Murphy, who was trying to reach third from first base on Davis' single, followed by an error, gave them a run in the last half of the eleventh. But there were two out when the run came over and it was the Athletics' game when the next moment the only occupant of the bases was out in an attempt to steal second.

Captain Larry Doyle executed some fine fielding plays around second base, threw to Fletcher for a double. Fletcher dropped the ball, both runners being safe, but Doyle picked it up, shot it to Meyers and Lapp was run down between third and home, Herzog getting the put-out. Oldring fanned for the third out.

Tied Up in Ninth.

In the ninth innings came the stroke that resulted in ultimate victory for the Athletics. After Collins had been thrown out by Herzog, Baker hit for his great home-run drive. The score was tied, and it looked like more runs when Murphy got as far as third on Herzog's fumble and wild throw, and Davis out, Meyers to Merkle, but Barry went out, Herzog to Merkle.

Snodgrass got a pass in the ninth, whereat he jumped gleefully, as Brennan, a moment before, had refused to allow his claim that one of Coombs' shoots had grazed him. Murray sacrificed and went out, Snodgrass taking second. When Lapp had a short passed ball Snodgrass broke for third. Baker had the ball waiting for him, as Lapp recovered quickly, but Snodgrass slid in viciously, spiking Baker on the arm and leg. A stream of hisses, mingled with some cheers, greeted Snodgrass as he walked to the bench. With two out Merkle got a pass to first, but Lapp's good throw to Collins got him a moment later trying to steal second.

With Oldring down in the eleventh Collins hit solidly to left and took third when Herzog threw Baker's safe bunt wild to Merkle. Merkle slipped on recovering the ball and did not make a play for Collins at third. Collins scored and put Philadelphia ahead when Fletcher fumbled Murphy's grounder, the batter being safe. Davis hit safely to right and Baker scored, altho Murphy was out on a fine throw by Murray to Herzog, trying to make third. Davis ended the rally when he tried to steal and was out, Meyers to Doyle.

Herzog started the last chance for New York by hanging one to left for a double. He held the bag while Lord squeezed Fletcher's fly. Meyers sent a long foul fly into the right-field stand and then grounded to Collins, who fumbled slightly, but got the Indian at first. Collins erred damaging Becker's rap, Herzog scoring and the latter being safe at first. But it was all over and Philadelphia's game a moment afterward when Becker was out, stealing.

St. Louis Americans Win.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 17.—By defeating the local National League team in the first game of a double-header to-day, it to 7, the Americans won the championship, five games to one. The losing team tried out two pitchers. The clubs played a second game to complete the scheduled series advertised, this one going to the Nationals, 6 to 1. In the spring ante-season series the Nationals won seven straight games.

Boston Hockeyists Will See Local Teams Perform

Boston likes the brand of hockey that the Toronto senior teams play, and E. M. Sabin, manager of the Victoria Hockey Club of Boston was in town yesterday to get some of the senior teams to agree to journey to the Bean Town for exhibition games this winter. It seems that there is war waging in Boston hockey circles, and that the Boston Hockey Club and the Victoria aggregation are at outs. The Victoria Club has good backing in Boston and is after the Toronto teams to fill in open dates.

Three or four of the local Senior O. H. A. teams were approached yesterday, and arrangements were made to make the trip to Boston during the season. No dates were agreed upon, as both the Boston and Toronto teams will not know for some time when they will have an open date. It looks as if Boston is to be treated to at least three exhibition games with Toronto teams.

Rough Riders Coming Strong.

OTTAWA, Oct. 17.—Ottawa will make a great many changes for their struggle with the Argonauts next Saturday at Toronto. The team played their positions very badly against the Tigers, and the management have decided that to hope for success against the oarsmen some radical changes must be made in the line-up. Elliott, the big Queen's wing man, will be moved in to middle from outside, and Parnell, Hickey, a fast intermediate, will go on in his place. Vaughan will go to inside, and Eddie Phillips will go into the scrimmage, replacing Wilkinson. Rufus Ryan will very likely get back into the game by Saturday, and will hold down the same position. The back division will be changed around. Eddie Gerrard will be put at centre half, and Robertson, the R.M.C. boy, will go to full-back, with Johnstone playing at left half. Ottawa are confident that with these changes and a week's hard practice they will be in condition to take a fall out of the Argos right on the Rosedale field, and they will come down to Toronto full of confidence.

Parkdale Junior O.R.F.U. team will practice to-night, Thursday afternoon and Friday night at Exhibition Park.
