30 YEARS OF SUCCESS

Chas. R. Wasson Offers a Remedy For Catarrh. The Medicine Costs Nothing if it Fails

When a medicine effects a successful treatment in a very large majority of cases, and when I offer that medicine on my own personal guarantee that it will cost the user nothing if it does not completely relieve catarrh, it is only reasonable that people should believe me or at least put my claim to a practical test when I take all the risk. These are facts which I want the people to substantiate. I want them to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, a medicine prepared from a prescription of a physician with whom catarrh was a specialty, and who has a record of thirty years of enviable success to his record.

I receive more good reports about Rexall Mucu-Tone than I do of all other catarrh remedies sold in my store, and if more people only knew what a thoroughly dependable remedy Rexall Mucu-Tone is, it would be the only catarrh remedy I would have to demand for.

Rexall Mucu-Tone is quickly absorbed and by its therapeutic effect tends to disinfect and cleanse the entire mucous membranous tract, to destroy and remove the parasites which infest the membranous tissues, to soothe the irritation and heal the soreness, to lessen the mucous discharge, build up strong, healthy tissue and relieve the blood and system of diseased matter. Its influence is toward stimulating the muco-cells, aiding digestion and improving nutrition until the whole body vibrates with healthy activity. In a comparatively short time it brings about a noticeable gain in weight, strength, good color and feeling of buoyancy.

I urge you to try Rexall Mucu-Tone, beginning a treatment today. At any time you are not satisfied, simply come and tell me and I will quickly return your money without question or quibble. I have Rexall Mucu-Tone in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in St. John only at my store,—The Rexall Store. Charles R. Wasson.

Fashion Hint for Times Readers

AN ATTRACTIVE MOHAIR SUIT IN RUSSIAN STYLE

The English mohairs are ideal for warm weather wear, for they are light, cool and shake the dust readily. This little mohair suit is most simply fashioned, but has great style and smartness. The Russian coat is made in two portions and joined under a leather belt; the lower portion being in gored effect and fitting the hips smoothly. The long moire silk lapels are particularly smart and there is a turnover collar of red silk with a touch of gold to give dash and brightness. The sleeve, with its deep buttoned cuff, is worthy of special attention.

The Stowaway

By LOUIS TRACY

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Message," etc.

"He is what you call a bundle of contradictions, eh!—a rough fellow with the heart of a bull. But he saved my life, and that naturally counts for a god deal with me. And how is your niece after last night's terrible experience?"

"My niece? D'ye mean Iris? " demanded Bulmer, obviously somewhat annoyed.

"Yes."

"She's not my niece; she's——"

"Your grand-daughter, then?"

"No, sir. That young lady 'as done me the honor of promisin' to be my wife."

"Oh!" said Dom Corria, fixing his brilliant eyes on Bulmer's vexed face.

"There's no 'Oh' about it," growled Dickey. "It was all cut an' dried weeks ago, an' she 'asn't rued of 'er bargain yet, as far as I can make out."

"You mean that the marriage was arranged before the Andromeda sailed?" said Dom Corria gently.

"W'y of course. It couldn't very well be fixed after, could it?"

"No—not as between you and her. I can vouch for that. Forgive me, Mr. Bulmer—I have a daughter of marriageable age, you know, and I speak as a parent—do you think that it is a wise thing for a man of your years to marry a girl of twenty?"

"If I didn't, I wouldn't do it."

"But may it not be selfish?"

Then downright Lancashire took hold of the argument.

"Look 'ere, wot are you drivin' at?" demanded Dickey, now in a white heat of anger. He had yet to learn that the President preferred a straight-forward way of talking.

"I want you to forego this marriage," he said.

"Why?"

"Because that charming girl loves another man, but feels that she is bound to you. I understand the position at last. Mr. Bulmer, you cannot wish to break her heart and drive that fine young fellow, Philip Hozier, to despair. Come now! Let you and me reason this thing together. Possibly, when she agreed to marry you she did not know what love is. She is high-minded, an idealist, the soul of honor. What other woman would have consented to be separated from her friends on Fernando Noronha merely because it increased their meagre chances of safety? How few women, loving a man like Philip Hozier, who is assured of splendid reward for his services to this State, would resolutely deny the claims of her own heart in order to keep her word?"

Bulmer had never heard anyone speak with the crystal directness of Dom Corria. Each word chipped away some part of the fence which he had deliberately erected around his own intelligence. Certain facts had found crevices in the barrier already; Dom Corria broke down whole sections. But he was a hard man, and subborn. Throughout his long life he had not been of yielding habit, and his heart was set on Iris.

"You are mighty sure that she is wrapped up in this young spark," he growled.

"Were I not, I would not have interfered. Take my advice. First, ask yourself an honest question. Then ask the girl. She will answer. I promise you that."

"I am a rich man," persisted Dickey.

"Yes."

"Nobody forced 'er, one way or the other."

"Possibly. One wonders, though, why she bid herself on the Andromeda."

"It's true, I tell you. David said——"

"Who's David?"

"Her uncle."

"In England, I take it, if a man wishes to marry a girl he does not woo her uncle. Of, course, these customs vary. Here, in Brazil——"

Then Bulmer said something about Brazil that was not to be expected from one of his staid demeanor. In fact, he regarded Brazil as the cause of the whole trouble, and his opinion concerning that marvelous land coincided with Hozier's. He turned and walked away, looking a trifle older, a trifle more bent, perhaps, then when he came out of the house.

An hour later, Dom Corria and Carmela met in a corridor. They were discussing arrangements for a speedy move to the capital when Iris ran into them. Her face was flushed and she had been crying. Much to Carmela's amazement, the English girl clasped her round the neck and kissed her.

"Tell your father, my dear, that he has been very good to me," she whispered; then her face grew scarlet again, and she hurried away.

"Excellent!" said the President. "That old man is a gentleman. His friend is not. Yet they are very much alike in other respects. Odd thing! Carmela cara, can you spare a few minutes from your invalid?"

"Yes, father."

"Go, then, and find that young Englishman, Philip Hozier. Tell him that the engagement between Miss Yorke and Mr. Bulmer is broken off."

Carmela's eyes sparkled. That wayward blod of hers surged in her veins, but Dom Corirra's calm glance dwelt on her, and the spasm passed.

"Yes, father," she said dutifully.

He stroked his chin as he went out to pronounce a funeral oration on those who had fallen during the fight.

"I think," said he reflectively, "I think that Carmela dislikes that girl. I wonder why?"

Philip had never, to his knowledge, seen the Senhora De Sylva. Watts spoke of her, remarking that she was "a reel pleasant young lady, a bit flighty, p'raps, but, then, 'oo could tell wot any gal would do one minnit from the next?" And that was all.

It was, therefore, something more than a surprise when the sallow-faced, willowy girl, black-haired, black-eyed, and most demure of manner, whom he remembered to have met in the gateway of Las Flores early on the previous day, came to his tent and asked for him.

She introduced herself, and Philip was most polite.

"My father sent me——" she began.

"I ought to have waited on the President," he said, seeing that she hesitated, "but several of my men are wounded, and we have so few doctors."

She smiled, and Carmela could redeem much of her plainness of feature by the singular charm of her smile.

"Dom Corirra is a good doctor himself," she said.

"His skill will be much appreciated in Brazil at the present moment," said he, rather bewildered.

"He mends broken hearts," she persistsisted.

"Ah, a healer, indeed!" but he frowned a little.

"He is in demand today. He asked me to tell you of one most successful operation. The—er—the engagement between Miss Iris Yorke—is that the name?—and Mr.—Mr.—dear me——"

"Bulmer," scowled Philip, a block of ice in the warm air of Brazil.

"Yes, that is it—well—it is ended. She is free—for a little while."

There was a curious bleaching of Philip's weather-tanned face. It touched a chord in Carmela's impulsive nature.

"It is all right," she nodded. "You can go to her."

She left him there, more shaken than he had ever been by thunderous sea or screaming bullet.

"They are cold, these English," she communded, as she passed up the slope to the house. "It takes something to rouse them. What would he have said were he in Salvador's place last night!"

(To be Continued.)

Let a man sit down and size himself up as others see him, and the result is apt to be more or less discouraging.

NEWS OF THE STAGE AND ITS PEOPLE

Edmund Breese's Star Announcement—St. John Favorites Heard From—Price Webber Closes 35th Year—Local Attractions, Present and to Come

Edmund Breese is now a star in the fullest sense of the word, theatrically. The announcements of his play have been changed to "The Spendthrift," with Edmund Breese." Formerly they read that Mr. Breese had the leading male role, which is quite different to the present wording.

Mrs. Cora U. Potter, the American actress, now a resident of Staines Bridge, (Eng.) receives $40,000 under the will of Ida A. Richardson, her aunt, which was filed in Chicago last week. The will disposes of an estate valued at $350,000, $61,000 of which goes to eight public institutions at New Orleans. Mrs. Potter is the divorced wife of James Brown Potter, the New York society man.

Tom B. Clifford

The Times prints herewith an excellent likeness of Tom B. Clifford, the well-known New England baritone, who will commence an engagement at the Nickel next Monday afternoon. Mr. Clifford has for some years been one of the most attractive singing performers in several vaudeville circuits as well as a church chorister and concert vocalist. He is a man of excellent musical training, fine stage presence nad of sweet voice, and will be a fitting successor to some of the Nickel's fine performers.

An American paper of recent date contains a few interesting items relative to Norbete E. Dorrante, who played leads with the Chicago Stock Co. here last week. In part, the article says that Mr. Dorrente has been offered a chance to star on different occasions in New York, but each time has refused. He comes of a theatrical family, and has been with the Chicago Stock Company for ten years. His mother was Sarah Hezlep, for many years leading lady with John McCullough, the famous tragedian, with whom she won fame in Shakesperian roles.

High class drama is the rule at the Opera House. The plays presented this week by the Kirk Brown Co., are of a high standard, and being staged beyond criticism and acted in good style there is no reason for wondering at the hearty welcome accorded the company, which is very popular in St. John. The houses this week have been especially encouraging, and the audiences have been greatly pleased with the performances and with Mr. Brown, his leading lady, Miss Seymoure, and all his company. Mr. Macaulay and Mr. Miller of the business staff have been heartily greeted by St. John friends of many seasons.

Among the early productions to be made this coming season by Henry B. Harris will be Edgar Selwyn's new play, "The Country Boy." It will have its premier in New York early in September.

The Bandmann Opera Co are still in the far east, and when last heard from were in China, where, according to the Billboard, they were playing to poor business, which condition seemed to be quite general in the Orient.

Mrs. Nat Goodwin formerly Edna Goodrich, is in a private hospital in Rochester (Minn) where she is undergoing medical treatment. Mrs. Goodwin said that she and her husband expect to appear next season in a new play by George Broadhurst.

Paul R. Benjamin, last year press manager for Maxine Elliott has opened a stock venture at the Academy of Music in Richmond, (Va) Mr. Benjamin presented the Benjamin players in "Because She Loved Him So," last week as his opening attraction and this week is entertaining the Southerners with "Before and "After." His company is headed by Miss Carol McComas and Franklin Ritchie who was here with Harkins.

May Robson is still "rejuvenating" an old friend "Aunt Mary" She was in San Francisco last week. Miss Robson will open her season it is expected next year in this city, in a comedy called "Ma."

"Baby" Davis, Francis Wilson's leading lady in "The Bachelor's Baby," has now become Stephen Atwell Davis. The news has come out that he is a boy. He will, however, continue to be Frohman Star's "leading lady."

Robert Mantell is playing this week in Livingstone, Ohio, to good business.

Price Webber and his company closed this week their 35th consecutive year before the footlights. In all that time Mr. Webber and his leading lady, Edwina Grey, have seldom gone outside New England and the maritime provinces.

At a special matinee of "Lulu's Husbands," with Mabel Barrison and Harry Conor, at Maxine Elliott's Theatre, New York, on Wednesday, June 1, all the real Lulu's husbands in New York city will be invited on that date. Any gentleman who presents himself at the theatre on that afternoon in the company of his wife with a birth certificate or other trustworthy document to prove that her Christian name is really Lulu will be allotted two seats in the orchestra free of charge.

St. John theatre goers missed a treat when George P. Huntley's musical comedy "Kitty Grey" did not come here this spring as was expected. Mr. Huntley is now making a great success in New York in Chas Frohman's production of "Caste" Among other noted artists who are with Mr. Huntley are Marie Tempest, Maud Milton, Graham Browne, Elsie Ferguson, Edwin Arden and Julian Royce.

A fine picture of Forrest Cummings, of the Chicago Stock Company, has been hung in the lobby of the St. John Opera House. Mr. Cummings was here about ten years ago with W. S. Harkins.

Work on the new vaudeville theatre to be erected in Ottawa will be begun next week. It is being built by the Mark & Brock Co., who have theatres through the states.

The Myrkle-Harder Co. will close their engagement in Sydney, C. B., this week, after which they will disband. Mr. Harder and his wife will take up farming near Philadelphia.

The members of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company, their four weeks' season in Chicago finished, left on Sunday for Atlanta, Ga., where they will be heard in five operas. The advance sale there, it is reported, has reached $50,000, and a prosperous engagement there is assured. From Atlanta the company will go to New York, ready to take ship for Paris, where a month's engagement has been arranged.

The Chicago Stock Company opened on Monday in Halifax to one of the largest audiences seen in that city for some time, and one which was thoroughly pleased with the play, "Clothes."

The Colonial Stock Company have received a flattering offer to play a summer engagement in Newfoundland, but have not definitely decided regarding it. They closed in Charlottetown last week, and after playing in a few smaller towns through the provinces will probably return to P. E. Island to rehearse for the fall opening.

A play called "The Girl of the Mountains," is booked for the Opera House in July.

From Memphis, Tenn., comes the announcement that Miss Florence Kahan, who was the late Richard Mansfield's leading woman when he produced "Henry V.", will be married soon to Max Beerbohm, of London, a dramatic critic. She is a native of Memphis, and her family lives there now, but she has been in London for two years.

Joe Webber's production of the "The Climax" will be the attraction at the Opera House on May 24. This play is now being presented at Webber's Theatre New York, having returned there this week.

"Seven Days" reached its two hundredth time at the Astor Theatre, New York, on Monday night, with no indication of waning popularity. The cast was the same as at the opening. Carl Eckstrom, a local favorite, is one of the company.

Liebler & Co. have disposed of the producing rights of "Alias Jimmy Valentine" for Sweden and Norway. This will probably be the first play of entirely American authorship to receive a hearing there.

Dorothy Russell Dunsmuir, daughter of Lillian Russell, the actress, who recently married Robert W. Dunsmuir, son of a former lieutenant-governor of British Columbia, now faces a declaration from the former wife of her husband that he has never been divorced although separated from her for years, and that, therefore, his marriage with the daughter of the actress is illegal.

The next performances in the series of international dramas which Julius Hopp is arranging will take place on Sunday evening, May 22, and Tuesday afternoon, May 24, at the Hackett Theatre, New York. The play selected for the production is "Mary Magdalen," by Friederich Hebbel.

Mrs. Sol Smith, of the New Theatre Company, and the oldest actress on the American stage, has been selected by the managers of the Actors' Fund Fair to welcome President Taft when he attends the fair next Monday afternoon. Mrs. Smith is chairman of the Professional Women's League booth, and it is likely she will make a little speech to the president. William H. Crane, the oldest actor actively engaged on the American stage, has been selected to present a medal to the president. Mrs. Smith was eighty years old on March 19, or, as she expresses it, eighty years young.

More than $3,500 was realized by a performance for the benefit for Mrs. John Faust, mother of the late Miss Lottie Faust, given in the Broadway Theatre, New York, this week. The house was crowded and the big bill arranged by Lew Fields was carried through almost without a hitch. The programme consisted of numbers contributed by the musical stars of New York.

Of Florence Roberts, who will appear in Wm. A. Brady's revival of "Jim the Penman" next Monday at the Lyric Theatre, New York, the New York Review says:—"Florence Roberts will play the forger's wife, a character which was originated by Agnes Booth, and which won for her lasting fame as an emotional actress. No actress in the country is better fitted by temperament and power than Miss Roberts for the part. Many St. John people are familiar with this play, it having been well received here, when presented by the Valentine Stock Co. Miss Roberts is the widow of Lewis Morrison.

The Tenderfoot Farmer

It was one of these experimental farmers, who put green spectacles on his cow and fed her shavings. His theory was that it didn't matter what the cow ate so long as she was fed. The questions of digestion and nourishment had not entered into his calculations.

It's only a "tenderfoot" farmer that would try such an experiment with a cow. But many a farmer feeds himself regardless of digestion and nutrition. He might almost as well eat shavings for all the good he gets out of his food. The result is that the stomach grows "weak" the action of the organs of digestion and nutrition are impaired and the man suffers the miseries of dyspepsia and the agonies of nervousness.

To strengthen the stomach, restore the activity of the organs of digestion and nutrition and brace up the nerves, use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is an unfailing remedy, and has the confidence of physicians as well as the praise of thousands healed by its use.

In the strictest sense "Golden Medical Discovery" is a temperance medicine. It contains neither intoxicants nor narcotics, and is as free from alcohol as from opium, cocaine and other dangerous drugs. All ingredients printed on its outside wrapper.

Don't let a dealer delude you for his own profit. There is no medicine for stomach, liver and blood "just as good" as "Golden Medical Discovery."

Alderman J. B. M. Baxter, K. C., and G. Earle Logan are rejoicing in the possession of thoroughly renovated and remodelled offices in the Ritchie Building. For some weeks they have been occupying temporary offices on the second floor of the building while the changes were being made, but they are now in possession of their own again. New paint, wall-paper and varnish, etc., as well as the installation of an up-to-date vault make the quarters a great improvement over the old conditions.
