Will 99-Year Lease Signed Now Expire in Wonder Science Era?

LONDON, Oct. 27.—Every day new people are concluding agreements and arranging leases that will extend well beyond the year 2000, says the Daily Mail. When a man puts his signature at the foot of a legal document that will produced 99 years hence, does he think of the wonderful changes that must be worked in our social and industrial life during the next three generations?

While the Victorian era saw social, scientific and mechanical progress to an extent that made the nineteenth century an age of miraculous invention, every schoolboy realizes that the coming years will see discoveries and inventions that will make a yet newer world out of the new world of today.

We are now fumbling with great problems which our children and grandchildren will certainly solve, and the citizen of the year 2000 who inherits the property settled on him today will probably regard less formal documents giving a house here and acres there as interesting curios, and present them to some museum built in a wonder city wherein the inhabitants will discuss steam power as a clumsy expedient, and marvel at our limitations in exploiting wireless telegraphy, flying and and submarine navigation.

They will, we may suppose, live in an age when the problem of unchaining and harnessing the power of the atom will have been solved, when the vast stores of power which are latent in every clod of earth will be available, when coal mining will be a forgotten industry and the petrol engine will be obsolete, owing in part to the exhaustion of the world's stock of petrol and in part to the evolution of engines to which the radioactive principle will be employed.

And many now living will see these things. The man who signs a lease today for the benefit of his little son born this year knows that even now seven in every thousand of our people live to the age of 80. And in that saner, cleaner, healthier world for which we of today are preparing life will be longer than it is at present. The baby of today may well be the hale old man of 2000 A.D.

There is romance and the matter for dreams in every line of a 99-year lease.

White Trails To the Klondike Still As Stages Cease To Run

EDMONTON, Oct. 27.—Down from Dawson comes the story that no longer will the famous royal mail stages of the White Pass and Yukon route, drawn by fleet-footed horses, steered by picturesque drivers who knew no fear, go flying over the white trail north from Dawson into the Klondike. The frozen hills of the north country no more will echo back and forth the weird, stirring malamute call of the stage drivers as they brought their vehicles through the canyons and passes, or the beating of hoofs that heralded the sleds of the royal mail—the king's mail—for they have gone.

News of the passing of a great work is contained in the announcement of the White Pass and Yukon route that it will no longer be able to operate the stages because of increasing costs, and must therefore shut down.

And so, when snow flies over the Klondike there will be no stages to take up the work. After 20 years' service, service as regular as morning and night, the stages have stopped. Unless some other company takes up the work there will be no communication with the "inside," and the Klondike will drop back again into the primeval isolation, which was hers before the white man came in the great rush for gold.

But many who knew the royal mail stages have gone. The Klondike kings, whose pleasure it was to ride on the stages, elbow to elbow, with the incoming prospectors, have, for the most part, gone their way. "Swiftwater Bill" Gates, "Big Alek" McDonald, famous Skookum Jim, the Indian, Jack Boyle and Thomas S. Lippy, great men of great times, were some of them.

And "Swiftwater Bill" is somewhere south in a South American mining camp; Tom Lippy is a Seattle banker and president of the port commission. "Big Alek" sleeps on the endless trail in the Dawson Cemetery. Skookum Jim is also dead. Jack Boyle was one of the Klondike heroes of the great war, and is now regarded as the friend and benefactor of the Rumanian royal family.

Declares Greenwich Village Mosquitoes Are Aesthetic

NEW YORK, Oct. 27.—Greenwich Village is being investigated again, this time by the sanitary bureau. The village has been invaded by mosquitoes that have all the earmarks of having been bred no further away than the village's own rainbarrels. Quite recently the sanitary bureau received numerous complaints from persons who were bitten by fleas while wandering through the village. The fleas have disappeared, and it is now believed they merely moved out on Oct. 1 to give the mosquitoes a chance to operate in a real Bohemian field.

Joseph M. Lonergan, chief supervising inspector of the health department, described yesterday how his men raided various back alleys and a mews or two and caught quite a few mosquitoes and a lot of larvae. These have been put in an aquarium and are being studied. All who attend the health exposition in Grand Central Palace, starting Nov. 14, will have an opportunity to view them.

It is costing Mr. Lonergan and his assistants no end of trouble to keep the Greenwich Village mosquitoes alive and in good biting form. For instance, a special kind of cheesecloth has to be stretched over the aquarium to prevent their escape. One would think a mosquito or even a larvae from Greenwich Village would eat almost anything, but those from the rain barrels around Sheridan Square are fastidious. They must be fed just so.

The larvae like sliced bananas and cake. But the adults, especially the hen mosquitoes, refuse to live unless they can bite some one occasionally. Thus far the sanitary bureau has been supplying the victims.

FALL FROM MOW IS FATAL TO AGED FARMER

OWEN SOUND, Oct. 27.—Ralph Noble, a retired farmer residing in Shallow Lake, missed his footing while preparing to leave a mow in his son's barn yesterday and fell to the floor, a distance of about twelve feet. He alighted on his feet, but appeared to be seriously injured. He was taken to the house and a doctor called, but a few hours later he died as a result of the shock. He was 80 years of age and had been married over 50 years. His widow and a large family survive.

EXPECT PRICE OF EGGS TO DESCEND

Demand For Apples Light On Local Market.

It is expected that there will be a large attendance on the local market on Saturday. Although some farmers were asking as high as 75c a dozen for eggs, it is believed that the ruling price will be 60c a dozen retail and 52@55c a dozen wholesale.

The demand for apples is slow. The mild weather is preventting the citizens from storing apples for winter use.

Straw is scarce. There is a demand for a few loads.

Hay is selling at $18@22 a ton. The demand is fair.

It is expected there will be a good demand for butter on Saturday's market.

Opening quotations, which varied from unchanged to 1¼c higher, were followed by numerous changes within the initial range.

Corn and oats paralleled the action of wheat. Corn opened ¼c to ½c up, and later eased off somewhat.

NEW YORK CURB.

New York, Oct. 28.—Wall Street, 10:30 a.m.—Shares of the railroad and equipment companies were especially active and strong at the opening of today's stock market. Settlement of the threatened rail strike impelled heavy short covering and some speculative buying. Great Northern and Northern Pacific made early gains of two points. Chicago and Northwestern rose 2¼ and New York Central, Reading, Chesapeake and Ohio, Baltimore and Ohio and St. Paul advanced 1 to 1½. Gains of 1 to 2 points were made by American and Baldwin Locomotives, General Electric and Crucible and Bethlehem Steel. Oils extended their gains of the past few days, with further heavy trading in domestic issues of the Pacific group.

PILLOW LACE.

Bobbin or pillow laces are tissues produced by intercrossing and plaiting several threads which are rolled at one end around bobbins and fastened at the other upon a cushion or pillow by means of pins. Bobbins, also called bones, are small elongated spindles or reels tapering and swelling at one end into little handles for convenience of manipulation. Their size varies with the thread used, and with the usage of different districts. In Belgium, for filmy laces like Mechlin or torchon laces, they are much larger. Lacemakers sometimes use bobbins of different sizes in the same piece of work to help them distinguish the different threads they are using. Cushions or pillows also vary in size and shape. Small flat cushions for single devices and flowers for applique, are used in Belgium; long ones are used at Barcelona, where the lace scarfs are made; big cushions, on which as many as as six hundred bobbins may be used can be seen at Bayeux; while the bulkiest cushions are used in Portugal on baskets high enough to bring the work level with the workers' heads.

The pattern is traced and pricked on very smooth paper or parchment, so that the threads, as thrown over one another, may not catch. The pricked holes show the worker where she is to stick her pins as "points d'arret," or stopping points for the forming of several stitches. Sometimes for a repeating pattern the cushion is fitted with a rotating cylinder, around which a complete repeat is fastened. Upon this the lace must always go in one direction, while on the flat cushion the threads may go out in all directions. Whether or not pillow lace comes from Belgium originally, she has certainly made herself pre-eminently mistress of this lovely art.

MENTAL MEDICINE.

Every household should have pets and flowers, music and games, as a matter of wholesome mental condition. Many and many a nerve tension has been laxed when the dog poked his friendly nose against a knee, demanding attention, or when the kittens fell over each other in their play. The sick particularly need this diversion as mental medicine, and a pet, a pot of flowers, music—anything pleasing to the taste of the individual—is of great therapeutic value. Healing the nerves, it helps the whole body. "Laugh and grow fat" is a wise old saw, and most of us have far too little wholesome laughter in our lives. In every home young life of some sort is as necessary as sunshine, and for all young life other young life is a right. The best housekeeper has failed to make a home if hers is a house where children are unwelcome or ill at ease. Many a delicate only child whose mother frets herself half sick over his feeding and training lacks only the companionship of other children to become normal. A dog would do more for him than costly toys and careful nursing can do. These things are psychological, easily ignored and overlooked; but they have a positive physical effect. The interaction of mind and body is continuous, inescapable and of hourly importance. Mothers are often so absorbed by their children's bodies that they quite forget their minds, not to mention their souls.

The largest watercress farm in the world is at Enghion, near Paris.
