CHILDREN RIOTING.

Lively Times in a New York East Side School.

New York, May 22.—Eight hundred east side school children, enraged over being swindled out of 5 cents apiece, tore the interior decorations of the new Henry Hall to pieces. They also ripped down the stage in the hall, smashed every window in the place, broke chairs and did other damage, amounting in all to about $500.

Flattering circulars had been distributed announcing a "grand bijou" entertainment, and promising every child a handsome present free. Instead of the elaborate presents mentioned, each child, as he or she entered the hall, received a brass ring of the sort that comes in penny gum packages, and the youngsters were angry. A number of arrests were made as the result of the disturbance.

Miss Sinclair, who yesterday arrived from Central India, Rev. Fraser Campbell and Rev. J. W. Jameson, of the Central India mission staff, appeared before the committee and were given a welcome.

The Scrap Bag.

'Tis the merry month of May, and we took the furnace pipes down too soon. Neither have I got any clothes. A certain thick grey cheviot and fleecy crepon that should be mine by rights are at Miss Shears', who clings to them like a barnacle. I doubt if she will consent to be parted from them, even when the dog days arrive. Nobody is going to ask me to go to Sousa's, that's certain! And oh, I don't know what has become of Teufel. Can he be dead? No, he isn't; I know just what has happened. Some evil-minded person has seen him in his glad youthful beauty (one who knows a thorough-bred), and grasping the truth, that for a dear, vicious, all-round little swash-buckler of a fox terrier his like is not to be found in the countryside around, has stolen him away.

Kitty isn't speaking, either. She says: "I did it on purpose." Never mind what—and cook paid me the delicate attention of coming out on Sunday in a cape like my spring one, only in green velvet, 40 cents a yard. "By my troth, Nerissa, my little body is aweary of this great world," as the big fat Portia on the stage was heard to remark.

But these are trifles. I don't let them worry me much, though they do some. It is for Carinthia Jane that I am concerned this month. I feel quite troubled about her. There she is, poor child, shut up in the pages of the last "Scribner." I left her sitting in the little back parlor of the green grocer's shop. She must remain there all the month, till it is time to go to press once more, when, let us hope, the "Scribner's" people will lift her out of the green grocer's back parlor and carry her a little farther up the road, even if she must be dumped again at no great distance. I never read nicely-brought-up-young-lady-heroine type of stories nowadays. I'd rather nurse the cat. Some authors allow her to sit on the hero's knee. Some don't. Some tie her neck up with blue ribbon, and others prefer pink. But Carinthia Jane is my heart's delight. I took to her at once, and she hasn't done a single improper thing, although a good many unconventional ones, as becomes a daughter of the famous old buccaneer, Kirby, and a mountain-bred girl to boot. But just now she is in a dreadful plight. Ah, Mr. George Meredith! please be kind to Carinthia Jane. Don't make her suffer any more. First that terrible drive on her wedding morn on the box seat of her husband's (the young Earl of Fleetwood) coach, straight from the church door to a prize fighter's ring, desertion by the above-mentioned morose young husband a few hours later, and then the green grocer's! But dear old George Meredith likes girls; I'm sure he does, and tries not to be harder than he can help. Only the difference between a George Meredithian young girl and some other people's young girl heroine is that while the latter is mostly a saw-dust doll, the former is supposed to be a human creature, with individuality, and one can almost imagine Mr. Meredith saying: "Now, my dear, if I take you seriously and treat you like a rational human being, you must allow me to put you through a certain teething process of the soul, just as I do the hero, your brother, and I shall expect you not to cry out or whimper if the cutting of the first tooth comes hard." To me the pages of Scribner's Magazines are now glorified by the presence of a literary master, who at the age of 60, after a life of deep experience, which has been furrowed by awful suffering, can stand with head erect and heart young, proclaiming that there is nothing which the body suffers which the soul may not profit by. If you read this story, "The Amazing Marriage," you will want to read another. Then try "The Ordeal of Richard Feveral." There are two never-to-be-forgotten scenes in it, which burn themselves indelibly on the memory. The final interview between Lucy and Richard Feveral is one of these, and which dear Robert Louis Stevenson held to be the "strongest scene since Shakespeare in the English tongue."

It is understood that girls' feet are to be worn larger this summer.

"Sweet the Pleasure."

"Sweet is pleasure after pain" says Dryden, while Young tells us that "A man of pleasure, is a man of pains." Possibly so, no doubt, a man must sometimes take pains if he would secure pleasure. But when pains take the man there is no pleasure for him. If he wants pleasure let him take pains to get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It is a certain cure for all diseases of the blood and skin. It should be tried by all afflicted with tetter, salt-rheum, scald head, St. Anthony's fire, erysipelas, ring-worms, pimples, blotches, spots, eruptions, boils, carbuncles, sore eyes, rough skin, scrofulous sores, swellings, blood-taints, affection of the skin, throat and bones, ulcers of the liver, stomach, kidneys and lungs. Purify the blood, and health will return.

"How many bells are in this chime?" asked the curious traveler. "Eight, all tolled," said the sexton.
