—Alex. Johnston, city, has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness to be able to drive out.

—A gas lamp in front of Callard's drug store was struck by a passing wagon on Saturday and badly injured.

—Mr. J. C. Robiston, the well-known artist, writing to a city friend from Armagh, Ireland, says: "I intend returning home to London as soon as I complete the work I have undertaken here. I regret to say that my health will not permit me to follow my profession, and I must ultimately abandon it for a more active life."

EQUAL TREATMENT AND FAIR PLAY TO ALL.

The "Advertiser" Printing and Publishing Company beg respectfully to announce that its canvassing and business representatives have no authority to make any deviations whatever from the tariff of its moderate advertising rates, whether as regards casual announcements or extended contracts.

By this policy any misconception, and also any misrepresentation, often unintentional, as to what other newspapers are or are not willing to do, will be reduced to a minimum; and no person will have the feeling that he is paying more than another person for the same opportunities of publicity in these columns.

Let it be understood, then, that the canvassing and other business representatives of the "Advertiser" Printing and Publishing Company are not authorized to vary rates, but that they will be happy to place their experience, their skill, and their best business suggestions at the service of our patrons in every other respect.

LONDON AND ENVIRONS.

—Seven drunks were in the Police Court dock yesterday morning.

—Mrs. James Burns and daughter, Craig street, the latter of whom is in poor health, will spend the winter in Los Angeles, Cal.

—The charge against Charles Sifton for tying a sign across Dundas street was dismissed by the police magistrate yesterday the sign having been taken down.

—Two young girls followed by a score of young men were taken from the street by policemen Sunday night about 10 o'clock and sent home after a short stay in the Police Station. Giddy girls should not be allowed to be out at so late an hour.

—Sunday between 600 and 1700 members sat down to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper in St. Andrew's Church. A large number of non-communicants were also present, the church being crowded. Rev. J. A. Murray conducted the services, and also preached in the evening to a very large and attentive audience.

—Rev. W. G. Howson, Toronto, preached anniversary sermons Sunday in the Colborne street Methodist Church. He is an eloquent preacher, and his sermons were forceful arguments against the theories of skeptics. "Son, be of good cheer, thy sins are forgiven thee," was the theme of an interesting discourse. The religion of the Bible is a religion that maketh glad the hearts of all who embrace it.

—It has been arranged to hold a union Christmas service on Christmas forenoon under the joint auspices of the five Presbyterian congregations of the city. The meeting will this year be held in Park Avenue Church, and in all probability that of next year in St. Andrew's. The whole service, as to singing and otherwise, will be very bright and attractive. Several Presbyterian ministers of the city will take various parts, and there will be one or two brief addresses appropriate to the occasion. Rev. J. A. Murray, of St. Andrew's Church, as the senior Presbyterian pastor of the city, will preside.

—"Only a Farmer's Daughter" got fair patronage at the Grand Saturday evening. Through the absence of the lady star—Miss Voorhees—and a consequent re-arrangement of the characters the company was rather handicapped. Miss Blanche Howard, a tall, graceful Hamilton girl made her stage debut in her native city the other night. She says her lines with good elocution and the natural stiffness of movement will wear off with experience. Clyde Magnus, who took the part of Jack Hartley, the adventuress' accomplice, claims to be Scott McAllister, the son and heir of the Earl of Sterling. He has a Scotch accent and is not without dramatic ability. Paul Gilmore as Sammy Green was very good.

Another False Alarm.

At 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon some thoughtless, venturesome person opened fire alarm box 31. Consequently the firemen had a sharp run to the corner of Waterloo and Bathurst streets. Four times lately this box has been opened in this way by unknown persons. They will open it once too often and then they will be alarmed more than the firemen.

Methodism in the City.

The annual reports of the Educational Society of the Methodist Church of Canada for 1890-91 have been distributed among the subscribers. London district shows to advantage among other districts and conferences in the Dominion. In this city Queen's Avenue Church contributed $226 42; Dundas Street Center, $214 41; Wellington Street, $60; Askin Street, $67 81; Colborne Street, $32; other city churches, $24 61; London West, $28 90. Other places in the district, St. Johns, Lambeth, Delaware, Siloam, Thorndale and Westminster, make up a total of $759 16.

A New Train From St. Marys.

D. B. Dewar, manager of the Bank of Commerce here, formerly of Berlin, is entitled to the thanks of the business men of Berlin and Stratford and the wholesale firms of this city for the change made, commencing yesterday, in the running of trains to this city. Acting on Mr. Dewar's suggestion a few weeks ago, the Board of Trade interviewed the Grand Trunk about the running of a mixed train from St. Marys every morning after the arrival of the day express west on the main line, and the request was regarded as a reasonable one and was very readily granted. The accommodation thus afforded will be greatly appreciated by the traveling public.

Profit and Loss in Liquor Drinking.

Mr. Samuel Grigg was one of the speakers in the South London Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, when a Gospel temperance meeting was held under the auspices of the Royal Templars. Rev. Mr. McIntyre, pastor, presided, and there was a large attendance of members of the various denominations. Mr. Grigg spoke in his usual frank, friendly, earnest manner. He told how a change of heart had resulted in his getting out of the business of liquor-dealing after an experience of 32 years. He could speak with some authority on the profit and loss of liquor drinking. Some thought they profited by the treating habit because it conduced to friendliness and good fellowship, but he asserted that friendship struck up over liquor drinking was but evanescent. It rarely lasted, and the habit of drinking which followed very often brought a man so low that even his boon companions would disown him. He could assure the young men, from his experience, that there was no safety except in total abstinence, and that the sober, industrious young Canadian was welcomed and employed everywhere, whereas nobody wanted the drinking man; he could not be relied on. Some people were inclined to blame the liquor dealers; he had no hard words to say of them. They were engaged in a legalized business; they paid the people for their licenses, and just so long as they were authorized to sell liquor, just so long were the people responsible. The temperance sentiment was undoubtedly increasing, and he had hopes that a better day was coming. He favored the giving of votes in Parliamentary elections to women. They had shown what they could do in this city, and when they had full powers he was convinced they would exercise them for the public good. It was sad to find some wives in London toiling hard to put down the traffic, while their husbands were voting to elect men interested in maintaining the traffic. In conclusion, Mr. Grigg assured his hearers that with the Bible as the guide of their conduct they would never lack friends or happiness. The address was listened to with the closest attention by the large audience. Rev. M. P. Talling followed with an eminently practical address on the temperance question. He said the liquor traffic must be judged by its fruit, which was bad. The public sentiment against it was getting stronger every day and would eventually overthrow it. The choir led in appropriate music.

BARK-WELL'S.
Thedi stinguishing trait about this store is:
What Is It? Can You Tell?
Improvement; extension. It isn't merely the immense size of the store, nor of the business, nor of the improved facilities, because we had often all we could do when the store was a third its present size and not nearly so comfortable or attractive to shop in. It is the effective progressiveness of the management which distinguishes this establishment from all competitors. The fact is, a permanent success must have merit. That is true of anything and everything. It applies here, inasmuch as progress marks every transaction. But you expect that. If we didn't improve with each year something would happen. Most likely somebody else would crowd ahead of us in your estimation; and that will never do. The tendency is decidedly the other way. We buy strictly for cash and import from European manufacturers direct. Our customers reap the benefit.

A WONDERFUL WOMAN.

A Conversation With Mrs. Baeyertz, the Converted Jewess.

Sketch of the Life and Career of the Gifted Evangelist.

Circumstances Leading Up to Her Conversion—Her Subsequent Labors—Her Opinion of the Jews—A Successful Worker and a Brilliant Speaker.

A charming little woman is Mrs. Baeyertz, who is drawing such crowds and making such an impression on the Christian, and, it is to be hoped, the indifferent people of London. The "Converted Jewess," as she is generally called, is of prepossessing appearance. She is not tall, but has a fine physique; her face is a pleasant and striking one, and discovers, though not to a marked degree, her Hebraic extraction, the principal indications being her dark, expressive eyes and a characteristic nose.

An ADVERTISER reporter noted this when he called at the residence of Dr. Eccles Saturday morning for the purpose of having a chat with Mrs. Baeyertz, who is staying there during her London engagement. She received her visitor courteously, and graciously consented to give him any information desired. Her refinement of manner and conversation stamp her as a highly-cultivated and well-bred lady.

"It is about a year," she said, "since I and my daughter left Melbourne, Australia. We landed at San Francisco and came through the American cities. When we got to Hamilton, Canada, I almost cried with joy to be on British soil and under the British flag again. You are English here, just as we are. Indeed, Canada is more like Australia than I could have thought, considering the climatic difference.

"Apropos," she continued, with enthusiastic vivacity, "do you know that for the first time in my life when I woke up here the other morning I saw the ground covered with snow and I was like a child with delight. I thought I had never seen anything so beautiful! To be sure, our winters in Australia are cold and frosty but we have no snow. What a merry season it must be with you Canadians. I went for a sleigh ride and it was deliciously novel and exhilarating."

Questioned about the city and her work here, Mrs. Baeyertz said: "I am delighted with London. Mr. Sayer, the secretary of the Y. M. C. A., and his noble young assistants have done everything well, and I always believe that if we do our best, God will bless the effort. Yes, I have been gratified with the results of our meetings. The Christian hospitality and love and kindness and generosity of the Canadians is far ahead of anything in the States," added Mrs. Baeyertz.

The reporter her asked for some facts about her life.

"I was born in North Wales, and spent my childhood there. My parents were strict Jews, and I was brought up in the Judaic faith. My girlhood I spent at home. I was a delicate child, and my mother kept me by her, instead of sending me on the continent for my training, as had been the case with my sister. So things went on until 25 years ago, when I went out to Australia to join a married sister in Victoria. Then followed a gay time. I went to theaters, balls and operas almost every night. In fact I lived the life of a careless "society" girl, fond of gaiety. It was during this time that I first met Mr. Baeyertz, who was a bank manager at Colac. There was reciprocated affection, but I could not entertain a thought of marriage, for at that time, you must remember, I was heart and soul a Jewess, and such a thing seemed quite impossible. It was a long time before I consented, but at last I did. I made him promise, however, that he would never try and change my views. Then after a time came the dreadful blow. He died and all the world seemed dead to me.

"I have had two children—a son and a daughter. It was the first great trouble when I realized I must bring them up to a faith I did not believe in. For I loved my husband, so that I determined they should be brought up in his religion."

"Had this anything to do with your becoming a Christian?"

"Yes; after the birth of my second child I was earnestly impressed with a desire to become a believer; but it was not until after I had lost my husband that that desire became so intense as to become part of my life. The struggle was a long and bitter one and few can appreciate all I suffered while it lasted; but one day when I was reading the 'Old, Old Story' the truth seemed to flash upon me and from that moment I found peace and comfort and joy."

"Did you take to mission work immediately upon your conversion?"

"Oh! no. There was a considerable interval, and the devotion of myself to God in that way was a long process. I began with a class of six girls, and the number gradually increased to 400. But it was a long time before I could summon sufficient courage to address a public meeting. I was invited by several ministers to do so, but I invariably refused. I can't tell you how I shrank from appearing in public. The idea of giving up my privacy and subjecting myself to criticism, as I knew I must do if I stepped on to a public platform, grated on my feelings, and I felt that I could not face the ordeal. And yet it seemed to me to be a duty, and to shirk a duty was equally painful. At last I wrote to a valued friend and asked his advice. In reply he sent me a little book called 'Our Coffee Rooms,' by Lady Hope, who it appeared had gone through a precisely similar experience to mine. I read a few chapters and they decided me. From that day (sixteen years ago) I offered myself heart and soul to the Lord's service. I have addressed crowded meetings in every one of the Australian colonies and in large number in the south of New Zealand previous to my American visit."

"Your sympathies are still strong with the Jews in many ways, I suppose?"

"Yes; excepting my own children all my relatives adhere to the old faith. There is much to admire in the Jews. They are so good in their domestic life. The Jews make splendid fathers and husbands, as they are so thoroughly fond of their wives and children. It is a veritable lesson to compare them with some so-called Christian husbands."

The converted Jewess said she felt sure that the accumulation of wealth by the Israelities was the first step to that ultimate restoration to power and the Holy Land, which is such a strong tenet of the Jewish faith. The crucifixion of Christ she declared to be a terrible case of too much religious zeal, and not willful malice on their part.

Asked to what she attributes her power of diction and beauty of expression, the evangelist was too modest to allow that she possessed any great oratorical gifts. "My mother," she said, "was an exceedingly clever woman, a wonderful linguist and a beautiful reader. She was passionately fond of Shakespeare and of Macaulay's Essays, not only for the thoughts they contain, but because she believed them to be written in the purest English to be found in any published book. As I said before, I was too delicate as a child to leave home, and she used to read to me by the hour from those two books, and would then put them in my hands and make me read to her. That is the only way I can account for the development of any gift or power I may possess in this particular direction. I have never in my life had a lesson in elocution, and I certainly never trouble about it when I speak."

Regarding her future plans Mrs. Baeyertz said: "Mr. McCullough, the Y. M. C. A. secretary at Toronto, has asked me to go back to Toronto and hold a second mission there. I said I would if he would open up Canada to me. He has promised to do so, and now I have more work ahead than I can do until I go to England. My daughter travels with me, but takes no active part in the mission. She is my private secretary. My correspondence is a large one."

"How do you manage as regards your expenses?"

"I trust to the Lord entirely. I have no guarantee, and make no charges. I have never failed yet. If it doesn't turn up one way it does in another. I get sums of money, I often don't know who from."

Mrs. Baeyertz remains another week in the city, during which she will deliver her famous addresses on "The Passover" and "The Great White Throne."

The peculiar enervating effect of summer weather is driven off by Hood's Sarsaparilla, which "makes the weak strong."

Every mother, wife and daughter should use Strong's Baking Powder; 25 cents per pound, guaranteed strictly pure, made fresh daily and sold only at STRONG'S Drug Store, 184 Dundas street. 47-tf

Affections once firmly set are generally conscious, no matter what the object may be. To this fact the success of H. McKay & Co., of this city, is largely due. Those who have tried their Norma cigars never forsake them, and thus the firm retains all their old customers, and by the reputation only of the goods add new ones to the roll. For excellence the Norma at 10 cents is superlative.

When a boy and a dog become friends it is hard to determine which is most in need of commiseration.

No one need fear cholera or any summer complaint if they have a bottle of Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial ready for use. It corrects all looseness of the bowels, promptly and cause a healthy and natural action. This is a medicine adapted for the young and old, rich and poor, and is rapidly becoming the most popular medicine for cholera, dysentery, etc., in the market.
