ONTARIO LICENSE BOARD TERMINATES MARA LEASE

Judgment on Application is Announced—Decision in Other Cases Reserved.

Liquor men are taking advantage largely of the quasi-judicial functions given to the Ontario License Board by Section 145 of the Ontario Temperance Act, which empowers them to act as arbitrators for the termination of leases to formerly licensed property after the advent of prohibition. Two cases were heard yesterday and judgment was given in the case of the application of the William Mara Company, Ltd., for termination of the lease to the premises at 94 Yonge street, where there was a shop license. The application was granted. Anna Celesta Crowthru was named as the lessor.

The cases heard yesterday were those of Messrs. Hanna and Hassard, lessor, and James Fawcett, lessee, with regard to the licensed premises at 250 Queen street west, where there was a shop license, and John Powell, regarding the Board of Trade Hotel premises, 59 Yonge street. In the latter case a clause in the lease provided for the cancellation of the lease in the case of prohibition. The lease was made in 1907. This would release the tenant on May 1. He is applying for release in the three months granted by the act.

Judgment in these cases was reserved.

Judge Declares Reasonable Precautions Were Taken to Prevent Loss of Life.

On the ground that they had taken reasonable precautions to prevent loss of life while fumigating the Beverley Apartments, Judge Winchester in the criminal sessions yesterday dismissed the case against the Uneeda Exterminating Company without hearing any evidence for the defence. It was alleged by the crown that G. H. Webb and Mrs. Margaret McBain, the proprietors of the company, did not take enough care in warning tenants of the apartments to keep out of their rooms while the fumigation was being conducted. John English, who was an occupant was overcome by the fumes and died almost immediately. The evidence showed that the young man had received sufficient warning.
