Tom Daly Catches First Game of Season

Cleveland Wins and Loses

Red Sox Are Back in Third Place; Bush Pitches Well For Connie Mack's Aggregation; Alexander Holds Cubs To Three Hits

By defeating Chicago in a double header the Red Sox got sweet revenge and incidentally jumped back into third place. The first six teams in the American League are well bunched.

Cleveland and New York split even and as a result their positions remain unchanged.

Thomas Daly, formerly of this city, caught his first game of the season yesterday for Cleveland. His work behind the bat and his judgment must have been good, as Lowdermilk won his game quite handily. Tom has the goods, but he is only a young man and old players are not anxious to let young men get into the game as they fear they might work them out of a job.

Detroit and Washington keen winning and losing and as a result remain in the second division.

Bush pitched a good game for Philadelphia, allowing St. Louis only three hits and, in addition, shutting them out.

Brooklyn continues to win and thus keeps a good margin ahead of her nearest competitors, the Phillies.

The Braves slipped down a peg by losing to the Pirates. They can hardly be expected to have the necessary punch to put them out ahead when not one of their players can hit above .260. Unless the players get the batting eyes working they will stand a very slim chance of winning the pennant.

Alexander won again yesterday and allowed the Cubs only three hits.

The Giants defeated Cincinnati, but it took an extra inning to accomplish the trick.

Would Public Stand For Dillon Willard Bout?

Apparently soundings are being taken in different parts to determine how the public would view a Dillon-Willard bout; whether it would rise indignantly against a contest which would bring two men so different in size to combat, or be willing to pay to watch the consequences. Dillon, himself, wants to meet Jess, but the Hoosier, be it said in his praises, is moulded in the stern stuff of a fighter who fears no one, and in this case perhaps better judgment should step in.

Here are lines soliquizing a Dillon-Willard match, an event which a few months ago was thought an absurdity:

Would Jack the Giant Killer have a chance with Willard? That question is being asked of nearly everybody who saw Ernest Cutler Price, alias Jack Dillon, pound big Frank Moran to a pulp. If this is any answer—Dillon gave Moran a much worse beating than he received at the hands of Jesse Willard in the early spring. He gave Pittsburg Frank about as sound a thrashing as a man can take without being knocked out. Moreover, Moran was somewhere near the knockout stage during the closing rounds of the fight, whereas he retained his strength to the end when he met the champion. Perhaps better physical condition for the Willard battle caused this and then, again, perhaps not.

One thing seems almost certain. If Dillon and Willard ever meet there will be a much more spectacular encounter that the Willard-Moran affair. The Pittsburg blond, a stolid type, cannot move half as fast as Dillon. His sole method of winning any fight is to plod in slowly until within range, then try to put his entire weight behind a right hand punch that will knock his foe groggy. Outside of the possibility of landing a few crushers, he cannot administer punishment. Dillon is just the reverse. Almost every moment he has his fists flying at his adversary, and every punch carries a sting. With his wonderful accuracy he gets home an average of four out of five blows he starts.

When Willard met Moran the champion was able to lay back, and with his great advantage in reach snap his long left at the Pittsburger's head whenever he wished. He did not have to worry about being on the receiving end of the punches, for the simple reason that Moran could not hit him.

There will be no reminders of a flower garden if Dillon attacks big Jess. The little fellow will be on top of him from the first bell to the last, whaling away with punches that hurt and that don't hiss. Dillon is a master at the art of getting past a long left and boring in where he can batter a bigger opponent at short range. He is one of the wonders of ring history in this particular.

If Dillon can get past Willard's left—an indefinitely more accurate left than Moran's—the champion will take a lot of blows in the face, as well as a fair number of jolts to the mid-section. He will give Willard a lively time at close quarters. He is bound to get by that left often enough to do some of the sort of work that puffed and reddened Moran's face.

Pat Duggan Joins Bridgeport.

(Fredericton Gleaner).

Pat Duggan, former manager of the Fredericton Pets, has been released by the Hartford Club and is now with the Bridgeport team, having been signed on last Saturday by Manager Neal Ball.

While the Bridgeport Club have been tail-enders in the Eastern League race most of the season, Duggan will not be sorry to get away from Hartford. Owner Clarkin is about the cheapest magnate in the game to work for, while a ball player's life under Jasse Burkett, except when things are breaking right for the old St. Louis slugger, is far from being one sweet dream.

In his first game with the new club on Sunday in a double-header at Bridgeport, Duggan had one of the two hits which won the opening contest, and also stole a base.

Chase May Manage Reds.

New York, July 10—The New York Evening Sun prints the following:—"Hal Chase, according to baseball insiders, will assume the management of the Cincinnati Reds in the near future. Buck Herzog, who has filled this position since the beginning of the 1914 campaign, is slated for a trade to the Chicago Cubs, as Joe Tinker is eager to have him fill the gap at short field. Herzog privately announced a week ago that he had reached the end of his rope. He declared when the Reds dropped into last place that he wanted to quit then and there. Herzog explained that the directors of the Cincinnati Club had not been in accord with his managerial policy; that they had interfered with him in many ways and that he could never succeed under such conditions."

AQUATIC.

Proposed Scull Race.

Jimmy Rice, coach at Columbia, who is summering with Jim Riley, at Lonely Lake, Saratoga, has mapped out a triangular race among Fred Plaisted, Riley and Jim Ten Eyck. Ten Eyck and Riley have raced for several years, the Syracuse man just nosing out the Lonely Lake sculler, but the advent of Plaisted will give the contest added interest. Riley is seventy-one.

Plaisted and Ten Eyck say they are sixty-seven.

Rice is also trying to bring Frank Hagney, of Australia, who is now a resident of Springfield, and Eddie Durnan, of Toronto, together in a match race.

White Better Than Wells.

Boston, July 11—Charles White, of Chicago, defeated Matt Wells, of England tonight in the fifth round of what was scheduled to be a 12-round bout, the Englishman's manager stepping into the ring and stopping the contest to save his man further punishment. Wells had the better of the first round, but after that White was plainly his superior and in the fourth round knocked his opponent to the floor three times.

CRIME GREATLY REDUCED UNDER PROHIBITION ACT

Winnipeg Merchants Testify That Money Formerly Spent in Drink Goes To Stores

Manitoba has now experienced one month of prohibitin, and the eyes of the dominion are turned toward this province watching the operation of the Manitoba Temperance Act. Out of the many beneficial results consequent upon this new law and which are apparent on every side there stands out the following facts with perhaps greater emphasis than any of the others:

The commercialized end of immorality has been reduced to such an extent that if such conditions continue in the province they will be reduced to a minimum within three months.

Only 24 drunks were arrested in June as compared with 261 in the preceding month of May.

There have been only one half as many convictions in the Winnipeg police court as there were during May.

Just half as many vagrants were convicted in June as May.

The wholesale houses report that collections during June have been far better and this very desired condition is directly attributable to prohibition.

The hotelmen have surrendered themselves to the new conditions, have fallen into line and are helping to their best endeavors in the administering of the Act.

No weaknesses in the Manitoba Temperance Act have as yet been discovered and in all the cases taken to court by the license department convictions have been obtained.

The leading retail merchants in the city declare that money which formerly went in drink is now directed over the counters of the stores, and more domestic commodities are being purchased—Winnipeg Free Press, July 1st.

Jemseg Notes.

Jemseg, July 8—The steamer "May Queen" had a fair sized passenger list for here on Saturday. Many of the city people take advantage of this delightful trip, to spend the week-end at "Jemseg Beautiful." Among the passengers were Rev. Mr. Camp and Mrs. Camp, formerly of Leinster church, but now of Campbellton, N. B. Mr. Camp is on his vacation and is spending a week with his sister, Mrs. Tilley Dykeman. He preached in the Baptist church of Jemseg on Sunday evening to a large congregation. The service was of a beautiful form. The singing added much to its value.

The crops are looking fine and all fruits and vegetables seem to promise abundance.

A Balaklava Veteran

At his home in Broxburn, Eng, George Gibson Pilner, one of the few remaining survivors of the Balaclava charge died recently. Pilner, whose regimental name was Gibson was a trooper in the 13th Light Dragoons and had reached his 87th year. He was born in Clackmanan, but spent his early years in Edinburgh. He went through the whole of the campaign almost without a scratch. For many years Pilner was employed in the Broxburn Oil Works.
