The Political Revolution.

The recent pronunciamentos of the Mail newspaper have created one of the most remarkable changes which have ever taken place in a British community. The French, the Spaniards or the Italians are capable of creating such a revolution on very short notice, but heavy-witted Anglo-Saxons hardly ever. From supporting a close alliance of Ontario Conservatives with the Catholic hierarchy of Quebec the Mail has turned into a pronounced assailant of the French church and advocate of its disestablishment! An adherent of the party which treats moral reforms by legislation as fads of half-witted persons our contemporary has become an advocate of prohibition of the liquor traffic! From opposing trades unions and all their works it has been converted to the pet view of these organizations that no more state aid should be given to emigration! And more wonderful still, we have yet to hear of a Conservative in Toronto who does not heartily respond to the change of policy. There has been a metaphorical throwing up of hats and cries of "Bravo Bunting," which are to say the least remarkable. Nothing like it ever took place in Canada before. Particularly about the liquor. The church change was rapid, very rapid indeed, but not so remarkable coming from pronounced Protestants. But the Conservative's liquor, who could have thought that he would have given up that in a single day? We hardly think he has realized the fact yet, and that there will be a reaction. Imagine John Shields or Gum Swamp Anderson, or King Dodds or Roddy Pringle going off on an election toot without a keg in his buggy—not even a drop in his flask. The idea of cheering for John A. with a dry throat is so extraordinary and unprecedented that it takes time for the mind even to grasp it.

But a change has come and come to stay. For thirty-three years Sir John Macdonald has held close alliance with the French majority. For a considerable part of that time he failed to receive the support of his own province. His chief ally is the press and its numerous and influential body of readers have discovered that the French Canadian is insatiable, that no sacrifice will content him save that which would destroy our Ontario leader in his own province. For the sake of a miserable wretch like Riel the French majority have to all appearance thrown over their friend and benefactor of thirty years. The response is the Mail's declaration of war supported by the Conservatives of the west. Sir John, it is true, has disowned the Mail and declared against the impossible scheme of disestablishment, but whether he is a party to the Mail's outbreak or not, he must be carried on with the torrent of western opinion. French Canadians must be taught that they cannot obtain by rebellion that which the Parliament of Canada refuses, that this is a British and not a French colony, and that they cannot dictate terms to the majority. The Jesuit party in Quebec have forced the present issue, aided by the Rouges who desire office at any price. The moderate churchmen understand the situation better, and will generally support the Government, but so far as Ontario is concerned, the more fanatical the French the more rapid and complete will be their defeat. A united Quebec will encounter a united Ontario, and the contest will not be long doubtful.

The temperance agitation seems to have made great progress among Conservatives of late. The Church of England Temperance Society has had its influence, and the majorities cast for the Scott Act throughout Ontario have shown that the whole body of the people are bent on at least curtailing the liquor traffic. The Mail's conversion may, as the Globe alleges, be prompted by policy, but its import is great nevertheless, and it would be better for the Globe if it now spoke out plainly on the liquor question, as it did in years gone by, instead of playing with it. Disraeli's phrase when Sir Robert Peel became a free trader in 1846 fits the case exactly. "The Whigs," he said, "went in bathing and the Tories stole their clothes." Many Reformers have lately trimmed on the issue between British and French and on prohibition, meaning no doubt to don their old clothes later on, but the Conservatives have appropriated them.

Abraham Lincoln said it was difficult to swap horses crossing a stream, and a change of policy in the midst of a canvass is apt to confuse people's minds. Who shall say what effect the Mail's movement may have on the immediate prospects of the Conservative party? The liquor interest may be rendered doubtful or hostile. The Catholics almost to a man are in the ranks of the opposition. Will Liberals go over to the Conservatives on the new issues or is there a sufficient body of independents who hold the balance between the two great parties to give Sir John a good majority in Ontario? Next summer we shall know. In the meantime the new issues will be warmly discussed, and it is not to be doubted that good will come out of the controversy.

Justice Duffy of New York has just decided an interesting case of mistaken identity. A Mrs. Koehl seized in the street a man giving the name of Hahn, whom she claimed as her husband, by whom she had been deserted in Germany some years ago. As the man refused to acknowledge her she had him arrested. She swore positively to his identity in court, and stated that a scar would be found on his knee. The scar was there sure enough. A number of other witnesses also swore that the man was Koehl, and that they had known him from childhood. On the second day of the trial, however, another batch of witnesses came forward and swore that he was not Koehl, although he strongly resembled the missing husband. The defence made out a pretty conclusive case and the prisoner was discharged. The moral of the case is that it is dangerous to have another fellow look like a fellow, and that although a strawberry mark on the arm may be an unfailing brand of identity on a long lost brother a scar on the knee does not prove a man to be a faithless husband.

The telegraph wires are enough to drive a newspaper man mad. They now allege that El Coyote of Mexico is not dead, but on the contrary alive and well. We are afraid that he is alive, but we hope that he is not well.

Bishop Gravel is supporting the Conservative candidate in Nicolet. So says the Montreal Star. This is one of several reasons for believing that the Conservatives have not lost their hold upon the Church's influence in Quebec, and that their influence may not only save the Ross-Taillon Government, but also strengthen the hands of the Federal Government. Should such prove the case, a different face would be put upon matters from what they wear now.

As we feared, Miss Chamberlain of Cleveland denies that she is engaged to Prince Albert Victor, heir-prospective to the British throne. We suppress Prince Albert Victor's dental out of respect for his family.

Still more talk of the upward tendency of hops. It is easy for hops to jump up.

It is announced that the Government has fixed upon Nov. 18 as Thanksgiving Day. What is the Government going to give thanks for? The Riel agitation or the Mail's defection?

Instances of men mistaking their wives for burglars and shooting them are becoming rather too frequent in the United States, the divorce laws of which country are certainly liberal enough to render such "mistakes" unnecessary.

What the Governor of South Carolina said to the Governor of North Carolina: "It's a long time between quakes."

Henry George claims that he will be elected mayor of New York by the workingmen. He ought to make a good mayor, as he has ability and a clean reputation, but his candidature will provoke the powerful hostility of the great business concerns, the financial kings, and property holders generally, upon whom labor is more or less dependent. Nor will the old party managers welcome the intruder, and they are tremendous powers in New York. Still with 36,000 pledged votes, two-thirds of which he will probably poll, Mr. George will be formidable.

It is a Revolution.

It was between night and morning—July 14-15, 1879—when the King of France was awakened by the Duke de Liancourt, who, as the historian relates, had taken upon himself the painful duty of acquainting the King with the events which had just occurred (the storming of the Bastile with its accompanying atrocities). "This is a revolt," said the King, after a long silence. "Sire," replied the Duke, "it is a revolution."

Wonder if the present French and Roman Catholic rulers of Canada can get it into their heads that a revolution is just as possible in this Dominion to-day as it was in old France a hundred years ago? We cannot tell; but if they failed to see it they would be no blinder than some of our Toronto politicians, both Grit and Tory, appear to be now. "It is all a fraud," says one; "neither Sir John nor the Mail mean anything, they are only scheming." "Just another of Sir John's clever dodges," says a second, "nothing beyond that; the old man knows what he is doing, and will come out all right." "All wrong," still another says; "you know nothing about business matters, or you would understand that it is merely a scheme by which Christopher Bunting and Charles Riordan hope to compel the Conservative party to buy them out, and take the Mail off their hands.

Still, it is slowly dawning upon the minds of some of our old heads—and party men of the extremest kind at that—that this is something the like of which they have never seen before. They begin to think that the present "sensation," as they called it at first—has a serious aspect and not one of burlesque merely. Every day that passes will convince them more and more that the Mail's pronunciamento against the submission of all Canada to the rule of the Romish Church is neither a political farce nor a business dodge, but the beginning of a Revolution.

Not, however, Revolution on the French plan of last century. The guillotine is not a British institution, though let murderers dread the gallows for all that. It is a Parliamentary Revolution that is coming; and it will be effected, not by means of bullets, of ballots. It is votes that will do it. ARGUS.

A Charming Lullaby.

Editor World: I take the liberty of enclosing you the remaining verses of the charming lullaby that appeared in your issue of the 22d. It was composed by a Mr. J. D. Moir and entitled "To a Dying Infant." F. KINGHAN.

Sleep, little baby! sleep!
Not in thy cradle bed,
Not on thy mother's breast,
Henceforth shall be thy rest,
But with the quiet dead.

Yes, with the quiet dead,
Baby, thy rest shall be—
Oh! many a weary night,
Weary of life and light,
Would fain lie down with thee.

Flee, little tender nursling!
Flee to thy grassy nest—
There the first flowers shall blow,
The first pure flakes of snow
Shall fall upon thy breast.

Peace! peace! the little blossom
Labours with shortening breath;
Peace! peace! that tremulous sigh—
Speaks his departure nigh;
Those are the damps of death.

I've seen thee in thy beauty,
A thing all health and glee;
But never then wert thou
So beautiful as now;
Baby, thou seem'st to me.

Thine upturned eyes glazed over,
Like harebells wet with dew,
Already veiled and hid,
By the convulsed lid,
Their pupils darkly blue.

Thy little mouth half open,
The soft lips quivering,
As if like summer air
Ruffling the rose leaves there,
Thy soul were fluttering.

Mount up, immortal essence!
Young spirit, hence depart!
And is this death, dread thing?
If such thy visiting,
How beautiful thou art!

God took thee in his mercy,
A lamb untainted, untried;
He fought the fight for thee;
He won the victory—
And thou art sanctified.

I look around and see
The evil ways of men;
And oh, beloved child!
I'm more than reconciled
To thy departure then.

The little arms that clasped me,
The innocent lips that prest,
Would they have been as pure
Till now as when of yore.
I full did thee on my breast.

Now, like a dewdrop shrined
Within a crystal stone,
Thou'rt safe in Heaven, my dove,
Safe with the source of love,
The everlasting one!

And when the hour arrives,
From flesh that sets me free,
Thy spirit may await,
The first at Heaven's gate,
To meet and welcome me.

The Trunk Sewer Scheme.

Editor World: We are asked to vote $1,300,000 for the construction of a trunk sewer. It is therefore in order to ask: Is it necessary at present? Is it the system best adapted to our requirements? Can it be done for the money? The health statistics as published in this morning's papers give the death rate per thousand during August as follows: Quebec 4.20, Montreal 3.47, Toronto 1.90, Hamilton 2.65, Ottawa 2.95. This shows Toronto to be the healthiest of the five principal cities of the Dominion. If we take the smaller towns the comparison is equally favorable. The Don improvements will give a stronger current to the Bay, and carrying out the mouths of the present sewers clear of the docks will probably answer all requirements for years.

As to its being the best system, I would simply point to the fact that the corporation are publicly discrediting the engineer whose plans they ask us to endorse by advertising for another engineer in his place; and how do we know that the new man will not condemn everything that has been done and propose some new scheme altogether. The probabilities are that he will. Anyhow it is bad policy to swap horses when crossing a stream.

As to the cost, we may safely assume that as usual it will cost at least double the first estimate and possibly four times more. The waterworks at first estimated to cost half a million have cost nearly two millions, and we know the muddle the court house is in owing to the difference between estimate and cost. We know about the Garrison Creek sewer job, the waterworks mismanagement, etc., and when these facts before us is it prudent to vote for this or any bylaw until a change is made in the management of city affairs. One thing only is certain whether the sewer is a success or failure it will add considerably to our present taxes. Let the ratepayers examine their tax bills, now disagreeably conspicuous, and say if they will vote to increase them for a doubtful purpose. J. E. THOMPSON.

Wall-Street Gossip.

NEW YORK, Sept. 23.—[Special to Cox & Co.] It was generally admitted among brokers last night that there had been almost unlimited liquidation for European account and that taking of profits had been the feature of the late afternoon trading. Nevertheless the feeling was quite bullish and predictions were freely made that the market would eventually sell considerably higher. Reactions were looked for but points were distributed freely on all cheap stocks, particularly those which, as yet, have not responded proportionately to the late advances.

The buying of Hocking Valley was said to have been by Mr. White and parties who started to bull this stock some months ago. Reports were current that the soft coals were about organizing and would form a similar pool to that of anthracite producers. S. V. White was said to have moved New York, Susquehanna and Western and to have been an open buyer of the preferred stock. His selling of Pacific Mail led to revival of rumor that Panama Company will sue Pacific Mail people for moneys due under the old contract.

Among the sensational reports was one to the effect that Mr. Gould had parted with 20,000 Missouri Pacific around 112, and had invested proceeds in Western Union and Missouri, Kansas and Texas. This little romance was ridiculed at the Western Union building, where it was emphatically stated Mr. Gould had not sold any of his Missouri Pacific, nor had he increased his holdings of Telegraph.

Messrs. Drexel, Morgan & Co. were believed to have bought large line of Reading. The report that this stock will sell at 40, and perhaps higher, was current yesterday evening and found many believers. Vanderbilt brokers were said to have started upward movement in Lake Shore. Recent buyers predict very speedy settlement of Nickle Plate matters. Insiders do not look for any dividend on Lake Shore until February next.

The remarkable increases in Pennsylvania, Chicago, Burlington and Quincy and other roads' earnings were made the bull cards. Erie was purchased on the belief that this company is doing larger business than any of the trunk lines. Referring to report that cost of carrying new construction material will amount to as much money as will be required to pay dividend on St. Paul Company's stock, Vice-President Dumont says this is sheerest nonsense. "We could carry all materials needed to build 600 miles of road for less than $20,000."
