SHANTS' BANK GET BUILDING AND BEGIN REMODELLING AT ONCE

Merchants Bank of Canada took possession at noon today, of the building on the corner of Prince William and Church streets, which they purchased last year. The foreman for the British America Construction Company was on hand with men and materials to make an immediate start on their contract for remodelling the building to fit it for the bank's use. The Canadian Bank of Commerce today began the work of renovating the Reicker building at the head of Rodney slip in Carleton, which they will occupy in the near future as a branch office. It will probably take about two or three weeks before it will be opened.

The work of excavating and preparing the site of the new building for the Bank of British North America in Market Square has been begun by P. Mooney & Son. The firm has men at work making ready for the more active construction to start.

THE FIRST RHUBARB

A STRIKE FOR $4 PER DAY.

Chatham World:—The S. S. Newlands building at O'Brien's mill wharf, Nelson, is trying to take on a cargo of deals, but shipping laborers have struck for an advance from $3 to $4 a day, and there is nothing doing. Mr. O'Brien declines to pay the wages asked for, and, as yet, has not brought in men from other places to do the work. The $4 rate, we learn, is likely to be demanded from all the Synopsis shippers.

EXCELLENT BILL AT STAR TONIGHT.

The Star tonight has three brand new pictures, never before shown in this city. They made a very favorable impression last evening. The leading feature is a Lubin drama entitled "The Lost Five-Dollar Note" and the other subjects are: Selig's screamingly funny western story, "Oh! You Suffragette" and a strong Kalem mountaineering yarn "Mountain Dew," an adventure among moonshiners. The programme is concluded with a most entertaining travel photo dealing with old Japan. The Star is purveying a fine quality of entertainment these days and the fact seems to be much appreciated by North End and Fairville folks.

In Chatham on Wednesday Mrs. F. L. Winslow died leaving husband and child to mourn her loss. She is also survived by one sister, Miss Conway. Mrs. Winslow was a daughter of the late William Conway.

HOW TO DESTROY THE DANDRUFF GERM

BY A SPECIALIST.

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well known fact, but when we realize that it is also indirectly responsible for many of the worst cases of catarrh and consumption, we appreciate the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. We are, therefore, particularly pleased to give herewith the prescription which an eminent scientist states he has found, after repeated tests, to completely destroy the dandruff germ in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hairgrowth after years of baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you: 6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composee, one-half drachm Menthol Crystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing half an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger-tips. If you wish it perfumed, add half a teaspoonful of To-Kalon Perfume, which unites perfectly with the other ingredients. While this preparation is not a dye, it is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

GYMNASIUM EXHIBITION

A very fine exhibition was given in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last evening by the members of the "Boys' Department." The boys presented a very neat appearance in their white suits with blue emblems. A very pleasing feature was the marked respect and courtesy shown by the boys to their class-mates, who were acting as leaders and officers of the squads. The work throughout showed careful training received from the director in manliness as well as gymnastic and athletic sports. The following programme was well executed:—Dumb bell drill, figure marching, pyramid building, elephant, high diving, Indian club drill, pyramid statuary; Miss Edna Leonard was pianist. A match game of basket ball was played between High School first and second teams; the score was 29-20 in favor of first team.

The Best Quality at a Reasonable Price

A NEW BRACELET WATCH

The popularity of the bracelet watch is largely due to its convenience, yet there are many occasions when a different style of watch is more desirable.

We have just received a new bracelet watch put on the market by the Waltham Co., which is designed to meet these diverse conditions.

The bracelet and case are gold filled of good quality, the movement a P. S. Bartlett, 16 jewel grade.

The bracelet has the usual expansion device, and the watch is attached so it in such a way that it may be removed when it is desired to use the watch as a chatelaine or in the ordinary way with a fob or lorgnette.

We recommend these as reliable time-keepers at a moderate price, $25.

Princess Victoria Louise Takes Arrangements Under Her Own Supervision—News of Canadians in England and on Continent

(Times' Special Correspondence)

London, April 19—Weddings are the sole topic of conversation wherever you go this week. That of Lady Beatrice Cecil, eldest daughter of Lord and Lady Salisbury over—she married Lord Harlech's son and heir in Westminster Abbey last week—the details of the nuptials of the Hon. Diana Lister, youngest daughter of Lord Ribblesdale and of Princess Victoria Louise, the Kaiser's daughter, are occupying everybody's attention.

At the Hon. Diana's most picturesque wedding, to which she drove in the old family coach drawn by six grey postilion horses, that took her own mother and later her sister, now Lady Lovat, to their weddings, the bride's father, Lord Ribblesdale, put every one into the shade. He is one of the most picturesque old gentlemen in society, and was most aptly named "The Ancestor" by the late King Edward.

"Ribblesdale looks exactly as if he had just stepped out of one of his ancient family portraits with the utmost dignity," the late king once said of him.

He is very good-looking, and has the kind of looks that go admirably with the early Victorian costumes which he always wears. Even if you did not know him, you could not fail to spot him at any fashionable gathering. Besides being one of the most strikingly aristocratic looking men, he wears the old high collars that used to be known commonly as "chokers"—they have high points in front that embrace the checks on either side, and have wide soft ties wound several times round and tied in a bow in front. His coats and overcoats are ample as to skirt, and often of the old bottle-green color one reads of in stories of a past age, while his head is almost invariably crowned by a low "topper" with a rather curly brim.

In spite of his "ancestral" looks, however, Lord Ribblesdale is one of the most up-to-date men of the day and no one knows more about women's dress than he does. Many a dowager and debutante have consulted him as to what they should wear, and his advice has always produced the happiest results. He is a prime favorite with all young people, and is the centre of the fun at any gathering he attends.

Superb Gifts

He will miss his favorite daughter terribly and most of all next summer when the hunting begins. They have been devoted companions ever since the Hon. Diana was a little girl, and were never so happy as when following the hounds. Her father has given her six hunters as part of his magnificent wedding present, and Percy Wyndham, her husband, yet another, so it is evident she still intends to hunt after her marriage.

A perfect shower of jewels has descended on her from her friends and relations. Besides the hunters and a nice fat check, her father has given her a set of diamond and sapphire ornaments, including a necklace, a spray that can be worn in several ways, earrings and rings, all of large matched stones. Her husband, among other things, has given her a diamond tiara and diamond and emerald rings: Lord and Lady Essex a diamond bow; Mr. and Mrs. Harcourt, silver dishes. The number of the presents, the vast majority of which were either jewellery or plate, runs into some hundred and a corps of detectives guarded the valuable contents of the house day and night until after the wedding, when the presents were packed up and lodged in a vault until the return of the bride and bridegroom to their own house.

The Royal Nuptials

Quite different, of course, in every way, will be the wedding of Princess Victoria Louise of Prussia. It will be much more gorgeous but there will be nothing very picturesque about it. A friend writes me that the "little princess," as all loyal Germans call her, has already put her substantial German foot down where a difference of opinion has arisen between her and mother on the all-important question as to what she shall wear. The Kaiserin thought that her daughter ought to wear the old lace veil that she had worn at her wedding, that had been worn by her mother before her, and that had been laid by in camphor and tissue paper against the great event of her daughter's nuptials. But pretty Victoria Louise thought otherwise. The old lace veil was very nice and all that, she said, but, in point of fact, it was not becoming and she was going to look her best on her wedding-day in spite of every hoary old tradition in the German kingdom.

So her veil has been especially woven for her by a lacemaker in Silesia, and the result is lovely, and justified its wearer's decision. It is of the finest net, and the pattern, consisting of rosebuds and trailing foliage, forms a deep border all round it. The princess, wise little maid, has been to several weddings in her time and observed that no matter what the beauty of the veil itself, its intrinsic or historical value, a rosebud hanging over one side of your eyes, or blocking up one eye does not add to your beauty, whereas the soft, plain net is eminently becoming to a fresh young face.

Old lace, however, will play its proper part in Victoria's frocks. You know, I expect, that the German wedding, like the French, takes up two days, the first day the civil, and the second, the religious ceremony. In Germany, the first is called "polter-abend," and after the papers have been duly signed, the rest of the evening is given up to gaiety. The bride has, therefore, two wedding frocks; that for the "polter-abend" is a colored one, usually pink. Princess Victoria will wear on her "polter-abend" frock, some beautiful lace presented to her by Queen Mary, that was made specially for the occasion in Honiton. Their Majesties' combined present is a magnificent parure of diamonds, for which Queen Mary herself chose the design.

The lace that the princess will have on her wedding-gown—the white wedding gown—has a curious little story attached to it. Years ago, when the Kaiser and Kaiserin were in Rome, they went shopping one morning, and, being attracted by some smart costumes in a tailor's window, went in to order one. After the orders were given the tailor produced some lovely antique lace which the Kaiserin was very anxious to buy, but the practical Kaiser would not let her, saying that lace was a useless article of dress for the mother of a large family of youngsters. The Kaiserin, like Brer Rabbit, said nuffin', but not long after, that beautiful lace lay among her treasures and was carefully put away for Victoria's wedding.

The little princess has also had some of her frocks made in Paris, in spite of the protests of some of the ultra-German Germans who were of opinion that her trousseau should be wholly "made in Germany." Her evening frocks and those for state or smart occasions are very gorgeous, but for ordinary "home life" wear, they are of the very simplest description. The same applies to her lingerie; it is of the very best and finest material procurable, and trimmed with real lace, but plainly made and without superfluous frills.

Vivid Coloring the Fad

The vivid coloring which is the fashion in all articles of our apparel nowadays from our hats to our shoes and stockings is being extended to the exteriors of our houses, too. Many London houses are painted white—a stupid custom which requires renewing sometimes more than once in the year—but the owner's taste, or distaste for bright colors, as the case may be, finds its vent in the painting of the doors, the window sashes and the window boxes. Dark green for many years was the favorite color for this, but nowadays a walk round the fashionable area known as Mayfair, displays the most brilliant shades of the futurists' palette. Bright green and scarlet are the predominant colors, perhaps, but a vivid orange, a bright yellow, and purple may also be seen. One very striking looking house shows a large white exterior, a bright yellow hall door and window boxes of orange colored tiles filled just now with huge yellow daffodils that look particularly effective. Near it is a house painted a pale mauve from cellar to garret, boasting a purple hall door, and purple window boxes, filled with masses of white flowers.

Lord Winterton, who will sail today for a month or six weeks stay in the dominion, has relatives who have resided in western Canada for some years. Cecil Turnour and Noel Charles Turnour of Regina and Washkada respectively. The purpose of Lord Winterton's visit to Canada is in connection with his many interests there, which I understand he proposes to extend. His mother, Countess Winterton, who recently died, was a Hamilton, one of the daughters of the famous Duke of Abercorn, who are supposed to be the originals of characters in Disraeli's celebrated volume "Lothair."

News of Canadians

At the Athenaeum Club tonight Lord Strathcona entertained at dinner several distinguished Canadians. Among those present were Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, R. B. Angus, C. B. Gordon, Sir Frederick Williams-Taylor, James Redmond, James Ross, John Galy and Charles Meredith. The advancing years deal lightly with the venerable high commissioner, and he was the recipient of many congratulations from his guests who carry on those important Canadian undertakings with the foundation of which he was so closely connected.

Gore Langton of Victoria.

Miss Helen McNicholl of Montreal, daughter of D. McNicholl, vice-president of the C. P. R., who is returning to Canada this week, has been elected a member of the Royal Society of British artists. Three of her pictures which have been exhibited in London this year have earned high praise.
