

SUTHERLAND'S

Cards, Calendars,
Christmas Cords and Issue Papers, Tags,
Stickers,
Boxes all Sizes,
Sealing Wax and Wrapping Papers

Sutherland

DEALERS AND STATIONERS

CROSS, FEVERISH
CHILD IS BILIOUS OR CONSTIPATED

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Syrup of Figs," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish or breath is had, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless "fruit laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When its little system is full of colds, throat sore, stomach-ache, diarrhoea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleaning" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Syrup of Figs" handy; they know a teaspoonful to-day saves a sick child to-morrow. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages, and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters! Get the genuine, made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

TO THE EDITOR

MR. BROWN REPLIES

Dear Sir,—In reply to Mayor Bowlby's letter of Nov. 24th, I might inform His Worship, the following facts are what transpired at our meeting held on the 22nd inst., as regards to the Chief Constable's costs paid out of the public funds. During the discussion, one delegate remarked that the Mayor had ordered the bill paid. He was corrected in this by myself, informing those present that the Mayor, as far as I could learn, had had nothing to do with the matter, but that it was the chairman of the finance committee. I understood who had apparently acquiesced in the payment being made and, according to the statement of one of the members of the finance committee, had never been before the committee to be considered.

The error lies with the newspaper reporter in misunderstanding in some way.

I am quite sure the "gentleman" who was deputed by the Executive Trades and Labor Council, or any delegate associated therewith, are not desirous of doing any one an injustice, but merely to try and see that the public funds are properly expended.

Yours respectfully,
DELEGATE BROWN.

Hamilton controllers sent eight by-laws to the City Council for consideration as to submission to the ratepayers in January, involving expenditure totalling $1,223,000.

C. Burton, a young farmer of the Ontario Lake district, of Saskatchewan, charged with the murder of a neighbor named Frank Hamilton, a rancher was acquitted.

David King, formerly vice-president of the Market National Bank, in Newark, N. J., was sentenced by Judge Rollstab in the United States District Court, in Trenton, to serve five years in the federal prison in Atlanta for the appropriation of about $21,000 of the funds of the bank.

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

DARING WOMAN FLIER MAKES NO STOP RECORD

Ruth Law, daring young aviator, who made a non-stop flying record, travelling from Chicago to New York, a distance of 832 miles in nine hours and one minute. She made her first stop at Hornell, 590 miles from Chicago.

MORE TRADE FOR CANADA

Government Has Insisted That Allies Get Many Supplies Here

"While there has been a remarkable increase in our exports to Great Britain of agricultural exports, and even greater increase is shown in our exports of manufactures," declared Hon. E. Kemp, chairman of the War Purchasing Commission, in a statement with regard to the method adopted in purchasing supplies for Canadian troops overseas, "when the war broke out our shipments of manufactures to the United Kingdom amounted to less than half a million dollars per month, whereas, in some months during the current year they have amounted to more than one million dollars per day.

"For the twelve months of the war, ending July 31st, 1915, our exports of manufactures to the United Kingdom amounted to $50,373,074, while for the corresponding twelve months of 1916 they amounted to $202,973,346. Our exports, under head of agriculture, during the corresponding two periods, aggregated $97,657,594 and $275,849,781 respectively. The total exports from Canada to the United Kingdom, including the mine, fisheries, forest, animals, and produce, agricultural manufactures, and miscellaneous for the twelve month periods, ending July 31st, 1915 and 1916, were $228,210,669 and $596,817,576 respectively.

"Since Canada," states Hon. Mr. Kemp, "has undertaken the obligation of paying the whole cost of an expeditionary force, and since the Canadian people have cheerfully entered into the sacrifices entailed by their participation in the war, the Government have seen the necessity of providing for the Canadian troops, but further, that in respect of all purchases for the purposes of the war, which the British Government find it necessary to go outside the British Isles, the British dominions should always in preference to other countries, be given the first opportunity of tendering.

"During the Prime Minister's visit to England in the summer of 1915, in interviews with the heads of purchasing branches of the various departments concerned, he took occasion to impress upon them in unambiguous terms that the Canadian Government would insist on this point. As a result it appears that purchases of supplies, equipment, clothing, etc., produced in Canada have reached an amount which is not merely proportionate to the requirements of the Canadian forces abroad, but is very greatly in excess of such requirements, varying, in fact, from a ratio of two to one, to a ratio of thirty to one, in respect to various articles.

"To cite one of the many evidences of the diligence of the Government in bringing to the attention of the British Government, the desirability, as far as possible, to purchase in Canada, a cursory examination of the files during the first eleven months of the war, shows that over 200 cablesgrams had been exchanged between the Prime Minister and Sir George Perley, Acting High Commissioner for Canada in London, on this subject, while since that date there has been a constant exchange of telegrams on the same subject. These cablesgrams, it may be said, have reference not only to the requirements of Great Britain, but also to those of the allied Governments, and general information as to supplies of various kinds obtainable in Canada."

Hamilton controllers sent eight by-laws to the City Council for consideration as to submission to the ratepayers in January, involving expenditure totalling $1,223,000.

C. Burton, a young farmer of the Ontario Lake district, of Saskatchewan, charged with the murder of a neighbor named Frank Hamilton, a rancher was acquitted.

David King, formerly vice-president of the Market National Bank, in Newark, N. J., was sentenced by Judge Rollstab in the United States District Court, in Trenton, to serve five years in the federal prison in Atlanta for the appropriation of about $21,000 of the funds of the bank.

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

SERBIAN SOLDIERS AGAIN ON NATIVE SOIL.

The photo shows a group of Serbian soldiers singing their national song in camp in Macedonia, where they are rapidly driving the enemy back.

DESTRUCTION OF GERMAN WORLD
DOMINATION IS NOW IN SIGHT

Declares Leading English Journal Which Advocates More Composed and Rational View of the Nature of Settlement of War

London, Nov. 27.—(Montreal Gazette)—In its current issue the Liberal weekly The Nation, after scribbling the disastatist both in the country and in parliament with the conduct of the war, says: "Nor are these feelings dissociated from a certain change of tone about the war. Ideas of modification and appeasement grow here, as in Germany, and with them the hope of peace which will usher in a new European society and close the reign of hate that devours the world. They gain strength from the now widely spread views of the army, and from the feeling that, after all, the greater end of the war, the destruction of German world-dominance of Germany is in sight."

The editor of The Nation, W. H. Massingham, has made the following further statement in response to a request:

"I am asked to say whether a peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

"The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

Quebec is prospering. A peace movement exists in this country and what is its direction. In the sense of a desire to conclude the war on terms excluding or delaying the more vital claims of our allies, no such movement exists. I should rather describe the tendency of opinion as toward a more composed and rational view of the nature of settlement. Two extreme ideas are being modified or are disappearing, owing in some degree, I think, to the feelings that Germany's aggressive force has largely been broken.

The first of these is the notion that the war should go on until it has ensured the destruction of German unity or nationality; the second is that the peace should not be a definite one but that it should be succeeded by an economic war aimed at the obliteration or reduction of Germany's foreign trade by high tariffs or a complete boycott of her goods. As the war grows in seriousness and the terrible character of the sacrifices it exacts is realized, the desire for a real peace—a peace of nations—grows, too. Many feel that this is only possible under an adaptation of the American plan, which in its turn implies a reversion to the policy of a concert to which Germany must necessarily be a party. This again in Earl Grey's acceptance of a league of nations, as well as in Mr. Asquith's more general tone. After the German chancellor's endorsement of this method, America has seized upon the general desire of the two belligerents and it is ready to consider how far has been carried the great and beneficent movement, which your president has begun.

"So far as the precise terms of peace are concerned, the combatants are not much nearer than they were, though if Germany would conduct war on normal lines, and stop her outrages on non-combatants, much of the bitterness of civilians would die out and the many, but restrained feelings of the armies would at once govern and ameliorate the situation. Many of us think we must look to your country as the main instrument of this amelioration and the chief architect of peace, more especially as after Germany's half-abandonment of her western schemes of aggression, the greater difficulty arises in eastern Europe, where Austria's interest is so great and has been so finely used.

"But compromise should not be impossible. Europe will want an honest broker once more, and where is she to find him save in America?"

News Notes of 215th Battalion

It was officially announced in the military orders of the 215th issued this morning that Lieut. Ham had been struck off the strength of the 215th Battalion. Lieut. Ham resigned his commission in order that he might get overseas quicker with the army transport corps with which he enlisted immediately on severing his connection with the 215th.

The discharge of Pte. J. Baker as a medically unfit was also announced in this morning's orders.

The battalion attended divine service at Brant Avenue Methodist church yesterday morning when the sermon was delivered by Capt. the Rev. S. E. McKegney.

Since making their decision to enter a team in the O.H.A., nothing further will be done in the matter until the meeting in Toronto on December the 2nd. A representative of the battalion, probably Capt. Stenham, will attend to look after the interests of the 215th. The schedule will probably be drawn up then and the teams allotted to the various districts in which they will play during the season.

Montreal Women's Canadian Club passed a resolution favoring conscription.

PURE RICH BLOOD PREVENTS DISEASE

Bad blood—that is, blood that is impure or impoverished, thin and pale,—is responsible for more ailments than anything else.

It affects every organ and function. In some cases it causes catarrh; in others, dyspepsia; in others, rheumatism; and in still others, weak, tired, languid feelings and worse troubles.

It is responsible for run-down conditions, and is the most common cause of disease.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is the greatest purifier and enricher of the blood the world has ever known. It has been wonderfully successful in removing scurfiness and other humors, increasing the red-blood corpuscles, and building up the whole system. Get it today.

You may be deceived

some day by an imitation of
"SALADA"
and possibly you will not detect this imitation until the tea-pot reveals it. Demand always the genuine "Salada" in the sealed aluminum packet, and see that you get it, if you want that unique flavour of fresh, clean leaves properly prepared and packed.

J. S. Hamilton & Co.
Canadian Wine Manufacturers. Brantford

Our Wine Sales Show a Big Increase Since Sept. 16

Many persons think that we cannot sell them direct from our Wine House here, but that order must come through some Montreal firm. This is not correct. We can sell you direct, but in not less than one case, or five gallon lots.

We have a good Port Wine at $4.00 a case, while our "St. Augustine," an excellent Wine, 8 years old, only $5.50 for one dozen reputed quarts, or $1.80 per Imperial gallon. War tax stamps are included in these prices. We have a score of other brands, all excellent value.

Buy a dozen and entertain your friends with pure juice of the grape.

J. S. Hamilton & Co.
CANADIAN WINE MANUFACTURERS.
44 - 46 DALHOUSIE ST., BRANTFORD

"The Flavor Lasts—It Shortens the Road!"

It's something for our boys to march on. It reminds them of home in a pleasant and lasting way. Tens of thousands are enjoying in camp or in the trench—on the hike or on watch. When lights are out and even smoking is prohibited, then WRIGLEY'S gives sure solace—refreshing, sustaining, beneficial.

WRIGLEY'S

Send a few packages or a box to your soldier lad—his appetite, digestion and spirits will be the better for it. Sold everywhere.

WM. WRIGLEY, JR. CO., Ltd.
Wrigley Bldg., Toronto.

The Flavor Lasts!

National Service,
Bert Borden said:

solemn truth instituted of are those as ay and those great respon-neirs of the future. But there has r still, the g ourselves ay that this

MARK H. IRISH,
Director of Munitions Labor,
National Service Board,
Canada.