PROCLAMATION,

By the Right Worshipful the Grand Master of British North America, JOHN FLANNIGAN, Esq., to his companions and brethren, Greeting:

AFTER mature deliberation and after consultation with his official brethren with whom he has taken a calm survey of events as they are now presented to the public, and in consideration of the proceedings had in high places, the Right Worshipful the Grand Master to take this step is the conviction that every effort should be made to effect a union of the Brethren, and that all minor consideration should be laid aside to effect that great object. Inasmuch as the Brethren unhappily now in connection with the adverse Grand Lodge will hold their annual meeting at a distance from the place at which the Grand Lodge will assemble, and as on that account all negotiations must meet more or less interruption and embarrassment it is deemed advisable that an emergency meeting should be held to devise means by which all such difficulties may be obviated and the great object so much desired by all true Orangemen honorably accomplished.

In the opinion of the R .W., the Grand Master no one can doubt the necessity that this double administration of affairs should cease. It has already been attended with serious evils, and, if continued, will render the institution itself perfectly inactive and inefficient. It is no period now for discussing who is right or who is wrong, but the welfare of the whole demands mutual and immediate concessions, such concessions as will convince the world that as a brotherhood Orangemen have means by which to settle their unhappy differences. He who was for years the acknowleged head of your order retired from the high position to which his Brethren had elected him, hoping thereby to bring us the blessings of peace and union; and the R. W., the Grand Master, hopes that the example so honorably set will be followed by the Brethren generally. For himself, the R. W., the Grand Master declares he never had any desires to be placed where the too favourable opinion of his Brethren placed him. His only object was to serve and be useful to the order, and while now ready as ever to maintain the integrity and rights of the Order in prosperity and its existence. He will cheerfully join with his Brethren in making any sacrifice consistent with the dignity of the assocsation which its general interests may demand

Movements are afloat, which, more, or less, must affect the Protestant constitution of the Association, and therefore in the opinion of the R. W. the Grand Master it is necessary that the origional postion of the order should be restored and maintained in an energetice condition. If, after mature deliberation and consultaion the order is of opinion that the movements of the day are adverse to those great protestant principles, to maintain which the Brethren are bound together, then, in the opinion of the R. W. the Grand Master, that order should place itself in front of battle and stoutly and resolutely oppose the same.

But if the convictions of the Brethren are such that they recognize in the movements of the day and in the questions propounded support for those principles of civil and religious liberty which they are bound to maintain, and which, impared must produce their ruin and overthrow, then, in the opinion of the R. W. the Grand Master, the brethren should endeavour by all constitutional means to carry out those undertakings by again placing themselves at the head of the movement.

It signifies nothing that a temporary cessation of aggressive movements be brought about—if there be cause for action on the part of the order—if it be conceived that attempts are made or making to betray the interests and principles of the order to its opponents, then the emergency arises which must unite Orangemen to seek to obtain a voice where opinions tell and where principle must ultimately triumph. But distracted as the order now is before the public, although its members are perfectly convinced of each others private sentiments, opinions, and feelings, they are incapable of effecting any good, and cannot resist the phalanx of their opponents. This disorder, this sad disorganization, requires speedy attention, unless it be desired that the gangrene of desired should effect the permanent division of the order.

Dissimulation should never be employed by the order, nor does the R. W. the Grand Master mean to intimate that it has been, but he puts forward these statements that all may know that when Orangemen avow their undertakings they will stand by them, and whether affirming or opposing a principle the resolution to succeed will be equally evident and clear, and be really and sincerely believes that on the reunion, remodelling and re-organization under one head, the entire prosperity of the order depends.

Straightforward and lofty principles will conduce to this desirable end, while selfishness and unworthy ambition must lead to ruin and defeat.

The R. W. the Grand Masters begs to call the attention of the Brethren to the fact that the Grand Lodge has, ever since these deplorable differences arose, used its best endeavours to reconcile them, and has been always ready to lay aside any minor considerations of its own position to effect this object.

While thus expressing his convictions more immediately to those who, as in duty bound, have faithfully adhered to what they believe to be the legitimate authority of the institution, the R. W. the Grand Masters also earnestly appeals to that high sense of duty and honor which has always been characteristic of all true Orangemen, whether they have for the time being been in connection with the proper authorities of institution or not, and he is confident that all who are sincerely desirous of maintaining intact the integrity and purity of the order, will, in the present emergency, heartily join with him in lying aside all minor defferences and meeting any concession that the Grand Lodge may be willing to make in their spirit in which they are offered, and will on their part have no hesitation in making such concessions as the mutual intrests of all parties may require.

Wherefore in the opinion of the R. W. the Grand Masters, much consultation is required to remove obstacles and embarrassments which stand in the way, and no better method can be devised to deal with them than such means as may be suggested at a special convocation of R. W. the grand Lodge; and it is that these matters may be all duly cosidered with moderation and caution, that the opinion of the R. W. the Grand Master an early convocation of the R. W. the Grand Lodge shoule be held, an in order that the convenience of all may be consulted an emergency meeting of the R. W. the GRAND LODGE OF BRITISH NORTH AMERICA will be held on the 5th June, 1856, in the City of Kingston, at the hour of 12o'clock, noon.

By order of the R. W. the Grand Master.

Mary's Departure.

I've seen the tear of sorrow start
And dim a loving fair one's eye—
And mark'd the sadness of the heart
Express'd by the deep heaving sigh,
But never felt I sorrow's pang
Till from my Mary I did part,—
How could that sad farewell but bring
To me a sorrow stricken heart.

The tears fast down her cheek did steal,
Her trembling hand was placed in mine,
Which spoke more love than words reveal—
A love outliving space and time.
'Twas my first love! but now that beam
That cheered my path of toil and care,
Has vanished like a thrilling dream,
And left my path all flowerless—bare.

My Mary dear when shall we meet,
When shall we tread yon flowery groves
When oft at e'en in converse sweet
We gave the hours to hope and love,
The sweet remembrance of these hours,
Those sunny hours of life's young day,
Will cheer my heart when sorrow's lour,
And glad my heart with love's sweet ray.

Be Content.

Nor murmer at your lot in life;
Look upward! be a man;
Away with discontent and strife,
And do the best you can;
What though you have no broad green land,
No coffers filled with gold,
You've health and strength and honest hands,
Containing wealth untold.

Tho' cares are on life's pathway set,
And sorrows reign around,
Remember oft where rank weeds grow,
A flow'ret fair is found;
And if 'tis cherished, watch with care,
The weeds all cleared away;
The one may bud, and others spring.
Beneath the sun's warm ray.

Far better have the joys that fills
The honest workman's breast;
The sleep that o'er his senses steals,
When nature asks for rest,
Than live a life of idleness,
Though riches may surround it:
Then be content and leave the world
Better than you found it.

Food of London.

This is a curious and interesting subject, handled by a man skilled in tursing all sorts of intricacies inside out, and laying bare the heart of their mystery. The food of between two and three million people congregated in a single city! How is it supplied? Whence does it come? By what elaborate official machinery is it regulated, so that this enormous number of human beings may have enough to satisfy their tastes and necessities, and not enough to ruin the caterers by leaving on their hands an unsaleable balance? These are some of the pregnant questions discussed in this volume; but with regard to the last, even Mr. Dodd can do little more than smile at the idea of official interference in commercial business. The reason why London suffers from neither famine nor repletion, is simply that government is kind enough to take no concern about the matter, but to allow demand and supply to be adjusted according to the private interests of the buyers and sellers.

The transit of food to London affords an interesting chapter; and the next contains various calculations of the total quantity consumed in the met
