Highlanders' "At Home."

The annual "At Home" of the Newfoundland Highlanders took place in the British Hall, last night, and was an unqualified success. Upwards of two hundred and fifty persons attended. Dancing commenced at nine o'clock in the ball room which presented a pretty scene. The handsome decorations and vari-colored brilliant illuminations that were in evidence at the Grand Ball on Wednesday night being left up for the occasion of last night. At midnight sumptuous teas were served to the gathering by the lady friends of the brigade. After ample justice had been done to the viands dancing was resumed and continued until 2.30 this morning when the gathering dispersed. The music discoursed by the C. L. B. Band was, as usual, exceptional and many of the selections were encored.

Bad colds and running eyes it stops in a few minutes.

Irritable throat and dry bronchial coughs are helped in a jiffy—always cured—if Catarrhozone is used as directed.

"What Catarrhozone did for me in one week was simply a miracle," writes Malcolm R. McIntosh from Sydney. "I had a frightful attack of Catarrh. My ears buzzed and my head was full of noises. The end of my nose was red and itchy—on the inside it was sore and encrusted. I had vile dropping from my throat and was very sick. Relief came quick—so I kept up the treatment and was absolutely cured by Catarrhozone."

Nothing else will so effectively and quickly cure you as Catarrhozone. Get the $1.00 outfit; it always does the trick. Small size 50c.; sample trial size at all dealers.

That Hateful Word "Must."

By RUTH CAMERON.

What passionate lovers of freedom in all its phases we queer creatures known as human beings are.

A little neighbor of mine is just of an age to take an interest in everything her mother does, and wants to "do it too." The other day when she saw her mother dusting she begged for a duster of her own. Her mother, who is a practical Montessorist, at once supplied her with the duster, and the baby spent a happy half hour wiping off whatever came within her reach. The mother saw a great opportunity to kill three birds with one stone, that is to train the baby to be useful, to keep her amused, and to relieve herself of the burden of stooping to dust the lower part of the furniture. So she made up her mind that the baby should repeat that half hour every day or two.

Yesterday I asked her how her scheme was working out. "It isn't working at all, she answered. "It was all right as long as the baby thought she was playing, but when she realized it was something she had to do, she didn't want to do it any more." How instinctive that is with all human children, young and old. We resent compulsion. We long to be absolutely free. Trick us into thinking we are doing a thing for fun, that it is a privilege to do it, and we will delight in the hardest kind of work. Witness, for example, how Tom Sawyer, that clever character student, persuaded his boy friends to paint his fence for him, by making them think it was a privilege. Nay more, as you probably remember, he not only got his fence painted without an effort on his part, but he charged the boys for the privilege and they were glad to pay.

On the other hand, apparently easy and fascinating work becomes a hated task when one has to do it.

"Arizona is a delightful place to live in," I said to a consumptive doctor whom I met on his rounds near Flagstaff," writes Dr. Cabot in his new book. "Oh, yes," he answered, "if you don't have to live there."

A man will toil with tremendous energy at his avocation and think nothing would make him so happy as to do just that kind of work all the time. But let some turn of opportunity's wheel make it his vocation, and lo, he finds that half the flavor is gone.

Perhaps I have explained this feeling wrongly in attributing it to our love of freedom. Perhaps it's simply one more phase of the eternal "a man doesn't run for a car after he gets it" attitude. What we can't have all we want of, be it work, love, pleasure, or anything else in the wide world, is always gilded with a wonderful lustre and this lustre invariably vanishes with full attainment.

"Must this always be so?" you ask. Well, perhaps it may change when the sun starts to revolve about the earth, or to be more poetic—

"When the years grow old
And the stars grow cold
And the leaves of the Judgment
Book unfold."

VIENNA, To-day.

The funeral services of Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his wife were held in the Chapel of the Hafburg. The aged Emperor and the new heir apparent occupied seats in the Oratorium, on the right side of the high altar, while the Ambassadors had places on the left. Twenty members of the corps of Gentlemen-at-Arms in gorgeous uniforms, stood at attention at the sides of the catafalque. The Archbishop of Vienna, assisted by two Bishops, officiated at the service which was very brief. Later in the evening the children of the Archduke and the Duchess accompanied by Countess Chotek, proceeded to the Chapel, and prayed by the side of the coffins of their parents. Their grief was heartrending.

PEKING, To-day.

Manchuria and eleven of the eighteen Provinces, forming the Chinese Power, are declared to be free of opium. The British Government is satisfied this declaration is correct and has agreed according to previous arrangement that no Indian opium hereafter shall be permitted to enter these provinces. The Chinest Government sent instructions to the Governors of the remaining Provinces of the Republic to cut down the use of opium and prohibited the cultivation of the poppy before the end of the year.

Might Have Drowned.

Last evening a man, who gave his name as Herbert Wiltshire, was found lying on Marshall's wharf helplessly drunk. Fearing the worst the police were notified and five minutes afterwards Constable Crocker hove in sight, only to find the inebriate this time right at the very edge of the pier. He was removed by the officer and later given in charge to friends. Had not the man's condition been discovered so soon he might never have been heard of.

Chauffeur Summoned.

As the result of an altercation that took place a few days ago between Superintendent Grimes and an English chauffeur, who drives for a prominent merchant, a summons has been issued against the chauffeur, who, it is alleged, obstructed the street with his motor car and when spoken to by Supt. Grimes stood on his dignity and refused to move. The case will be heard in the Magistrate's Court on Tuesday.

Readers of the Great Harry Thaw Case should further satisfy their curiosity by at once getting Evelyn Thaw's "Story of My Life." The extraordinary advance orders have induced the publishers to offer it at only 30c. GARLAND'S Bookstores. jly4,7,11
