LADY FLORRY'S GEMS.

CHAPTER III.

The months glided on, and, after a great deal of anxiety, I could honestly feel that I was getting Gurtleigh's little kingdom into a fair state, when one night we had a shock. I was in the little library, poring over some papers sent down by his lordship's solicitor, about which a reply was needed. I had been speaking to Dick about it over our coffee, and he had replied, 'Well, you know best. Don't bother me! Go and get it done, and then we'll have a quiet cigar. I'll join you in an hour.'

He joined me in half that time, dashing into the library, excitedly.

'Charley, old man!' he cried. 'Quick there's something wrong!'

'What?' I cried as excitedly, 'Lady Florry—'

'Yes,' he panted, 'went up to her dressing-room. The door was locked. There must be—'

'Burglars!' I cried. 'Quick, call the servants! Go up and guard that door, and send someone round to me!'

'Where are you going?'

'Under your windows,' I cried, throwing open the one at the end of the room; and, springing out, I ran round to the front of the house, full expecting to see one of the farm ladders reared up against the broad stone balcony which ran along the first floor. There it was, in the dim light, which was sufficiently strong for me to see that the window was open.

I did not hesitate a moment. 'Burglars are always cowards,' I reasoned, and I ran up the ladder and dashed to the window, thinking, though, that I should be awkwardly situated if our visitors had revolvers.

'But no shot welcomed me as I stepped in, took a little match-box from my pocket, struck a light and held it above my head. Nothing to be seen, so I stepped forward, lit the candles on the toilette-table, and peered about.

'Hullo!' cried a voice behind me, and Lord Gurtleigh sprang into the room. 'Anyone there?'

'No,' I said, 'we are too late.'

A minute search proved that I was right, and then we turned to the door, which was carefully bolted on the inside; and, as we threw it open, there stood Brayson, the footman, and a couple of grooms, while voices behind us told that help was ready below, the gardeners and stablemen having been called up.

'Mind!' I shouted, running to the window, 'keep back on the grass; there may be footprints there—I shall want to examine.'

Then I stood thinking for a moment before issuing my orders as promptly as I could, sending grooms off mounted to summon the police, and then ride on to the railway station and ask for help to detain any suspicious-looking people; while the gardeners went to scour the grounds, and rouse the keepers, watchers, and people at the nearest farms.

It all proved labor in vain, and toward morning I sat fagged out—after dispatching a telegram to the county town and another to London—talking to Lord and Lady Gurtleigh.

'I wouldn't care twopence,' said the former, 'but they've got jewels that are priceless. All poor Florry's pearls, which came from the Guicowar of Badjar Aman, and the old family diamonds.'

'Don't fret Dick, dear,' said Lady Gurtleigh, quietly, 'it's a great pity, but I will not mind. I daresay Charles Lester will get them back for me.'

'Bless your faith,' I cried, unable to repress a smile, in spite of my chagrin; what a wonderful man you think I am!'

'Well,' said my old college chum, giving the table a rap with his fist, 'wonderful or no, I do say this, if any one can get them back it's dear old Charley here.'

'Indeed!' I said, 'then my dear Lady Florry, try and be resigned, for your jewels are gone forever, unless the detectives can run the scoundrels down.'

'What, have you sent for the detectives?' cried Gurtleigh.

'Of course.'

'How delightful,' cried Lady Gurtleigh, clapping her hands, 'it will be like reading a romance.'

'Humph!' ejaculated Gurtleigh, 'she's not going to break her heart about the jewels.'

'I should think not indeed, dear,' she cried, merrily, 'they haven't killed us to get the nasty things. There now, you two poor, tired creatures are to smoke a cigar each, and I'll bring some coffee.'

She rang, and Brayson appeared, looking sadly troubled, and bearing a tray.

'I took the liberty, my lady,' he began.

'Oh, Brayson, how good of you!'

'Yes,' said Lord Gurtleigh; 'but I say, Brayson, you should have brought the brandy, too.'

'I did, my lord. I have it outside here on a tray.'

'All your doing, Charley,' said Gurtleigh, as soon as we were alone, 'that chap's getting quite a moral, as they say down here. Here's to you dear boy, and I hope Florry is right.'

The police were soon on the spot, and at once created a revolution among the servants, who threatened to leave in a body on finding that they were suspected, the upper housemaid being particularly demonstrative, and full of angry demands that the police-sergeant should have searched her box.

But they did not trace the thieves, neither did they make any discoveries through the pawnbrokers or diamond merchants, and the months rolled on, and it was summer once again.

'It isn't your fault, old man,' Gurtleigh said to me one day when they were down at the castle again, after spending the winter in Italy, 'and, look here, I taboo the topic. Whenever we meet you begin going on about those confounded jewels, I don't mind now, and Florry doesn't mind, so let them rest. Anyone would think they were yours, you made such a fuss.'

But I could only think about those lost stones, and Lady Gurtleigh's words that if they were found it would be by me. How I pondered over their loss, and suspected different people, but only to feel guilty afterwards of misjudging them. For again and again I had felt convinced that the theft had been committed by some one who knew the place and our habits; hence, I argued that it must have been one of the out-door servants—groom, gardener, farm-laborer, or, perhaps, even a keeper. I grew more convinced of this as time glided by, for it seemed to me that those jewels must be buried or hidden somewhere, with the thief waiting his time till he could find an opportunity for disposing of them safely. I don't know how it was, but the gardener excited most of my suspicion and I used to go about the grounds at all hours pondering upon likely places where they could have been buried—under newly-planted trees, in vineries, under forcing frames, in pots or tubs in the conservatories. Then the laborers, the men who could be handy with ladders, had their turn in my suspicions, and, with my monomania increasing, I wandered about haystacks and farm buildings, peered under thatches and eaves, and pondered over the tiles and stones of floors.

'Those jewels never reached London,' I used to declare to myself as I wandered about with my walking stick (one made of steel, heavily varnished, and so sharp at the point that I could use it as a probe to thrust into the ground among trees, or into stacks or thatches, in the hope of discovering the hidden gems.) There were times when I told myself it was all imagination, especially when I was wearied out and felt that I had searched everywhere, and one night I thought that I would follow Lord Gurtleigh's advice, and give the matter up.

Result: I woke the next morning, and went down to the sea for my plunge in the deep hole beneath the cliffs, determined to proceed, and with a peculiar belief that sooner or later I should find those gems.

General News and Notes.

Dunnville Doings.

GENTLEMEN,—I had a headache for a long time, and seeing Burdock Blood Bitters advertised, I got a bottle, and it not only relieved me at the time but I have not been bothered since with headache and think I have seen the last of it.

A Wonderful flesh Producer.

This is the title given to Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil by many thousands who have taken it. It not only gives flesh and strength by virtue of its own nutritious properties, but creates an appetite for food. Use it and try your weight. Scott's Emulsion is perfectly palatable. Sold by all Druggists, at 50c. and $1.00

Impure blood is the cause of innumerable maladies. Hence, one of the greatest benefactions to humanity was the discovery of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which, more than any other medicine, has saved America from becoming a nation of invalids.

The Island Reporter reports that scarlet fever is raging at Gabarus. The schools and churches are closed; several families are quarantined. Two deaths have already resulted from the disease.

The Best Known.

DEAR SIRS,—I can recommend Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for summer complaint and diarrhœa. I have used it in my family for two years for children and adults with the greatest satisfaction.

Facts About Dyspepsia.

WRONG action of the stomach and liver occasions dyspepsia. Dyspepsia in turn gives rise to bad blood. Both these complaints are curable by B. B. B., which acts on the stomach, liver, bowels and blood, and tones and strengthens the entire system, thus positively curing dyspepsia, constipation, bad blood and similar troubles.

The little judgment with which some men apply their learning, makes one wonder they had sense enough to get any.

In all Cases.

DEAR SIRS,—I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry for summer complaints, and after a fair trial have proved it a sure cure both in my own case and others of the family.

Guelph Gossip.

DEAR SIRS,—I have been troubled for over a year with sick headache and sick stomach. Nothing did me any good until I tried B. B. B., which made a perfect cure before I had finished the first bottle. I recommend it as a safe cure for headache to all my friends.

Cæsar's famous "Veni, vidi, vici,"—I came, I saw, I conquered—might be an appropriate motto for Ayer's Sarsaparilla. We charge nothing for the suggestion. This great blood-purifier conquers wherever it comes, and is now absolutely without equal in the world.

Miramichi Advance.
—o—
Beginning with the issue of November 6th, 1890, when the ADVANCE entered upon its Seventeenth Year of Publication!
The publisher made an important change in the terms on which the paper is furnished to Subscribers. These include
1st. Strict adherence to the system of cash in advance for all subscriptions.
2nd. The reduction of the price of the paper to
One Dollar a Year!
It is to be particularly understood that all outstanding subscription accounts due after November 6th, 1890, are to be settled on the old terms, viz., $2 per year, the advertised credit rate.
—o—
I have made special arrangements with the
WEEKLY TELEGRAPH OF ST JOHN —AND THE—
FAMILY HERALD AND WEEKLY STAR
of Montreal by which I will furnish either of those papers and the "ADVANCE"
TOGETHER AT
One Dollar and Sixty Cents a Year!
—o—
I have made the foregoing changes in the business of the ADVANCE for two reasons.
The first is because many patrons who have been given credit, have abused the privilege to such an extent as to make the business of publishing the paper a non-paying one, and it is necessary, in my own interest and that of those who do pay, that I should no longer continue to furnish the ADVANCE to those non-paying subscribers.
The second reason is, that I wish to meet the competition of the city weeklies, which are made up from the type of the dailies and, therefore, cost little for production in comparison with a local paper like the ADVANCE, the type of which must be set up especially for it.
—o—
Having published the ADVANCE for sixteen years, and endeavored to make it a creditable representative of Miramichi and North Shore enterprise—a paper which may be taken into any household without fear that it has catered to sensationalism at the sacrifice of that cleanliness of matter, which is too often neglected by the press of the day—I have reason to hope the foregoing announcement will meet with general approval and be the means of largely increasing the circulation and influence of the paper.
