WHAT ARE INDICATIONS OF OIL?—We have received letters from time to time asking for information concerning indications of oil, the writers supposing that there was something of the kind on their respective properties. These letters we could not answer in any satisfactory way, seeing that the most experienced men often sink wells that prove complete failures. We have, however, asked an intelligent friend from the oil region the question above indicated, and his reply was.—"The only indication of any value is a gum-bed, and that is a sure one." We asked what a gum-bed is, and learned, that in a dry locality it is a cake or layer of hardened petroleum on the surface of the ground, and in a swampy soil it is a marshy spot, strongly saturated with oil. The way in which oil may be distinguished from iron ore in a marsh is by the smell. These surface signs show that oil has been oozing upwards below for a long while, and, consequently, there is every probability of reaching the deposit by sinking a well.—Witness.

In a Fenian book found in Tyrone, besides a list of names, was the following toast:—

Here's to ———: Long may he live; may he live till he sets chapels built 110 miles long, and 7 miles broad—built with Protestant bones, thatched with ministers's skins, whitewashed with their blood, and their back bones for rafters at the door.

☞ William Wilson, who was dismissed at London the other day on a charge of larceny, is still in custody, a true bill having been found against him at the Middlesex assizes for manslaughter, in connection with Patrick Edmond, an old Irishman, with a new Christian name, mentioned in the same indictment.

GRATIFYING INDEED.—The Kingston News mentions as a fact indicative of the returning prosperity of the country, that nearly a sum then $180,000 had been paid during the past month, into one Canadian financial institution, for the release of mortages.

☞ Archbishop Cullen has addressed a letter to his clergy, which he attributes the cholera to the scepticism of the age.
