Daily Hints For the Cook

FISH LOAF.

Drain the liquor from a can of salmon, remove bones and skim and flake with a fork; add 5 crackers rolled fine, 1 tablespoonful of butter, 1 egg beaten light, a little dried celery or celery salt, a little mince parsley salt and pepper and just enough hot water to moisten; form into a loaf; put in pan, sprinkle with chopped bacon and crumbs and bake in a hot oven 20 or 30 minutes.

TIMBALES OF HAM.

Butter deep cup pans, place a layer of fine chopped boiled ham alternately until cups are filled; season with salt, pepper and small bits of butter; beat an egg into a cupful of milk and pour over the bread and meat until the cups are full; bake until they are firm. These are delicious for breakfast.

CHERRY PIE.

Line a pie dish with paste, sprinkle over it a tablespoonful of flour, and add little bits of butter. Pour into it the cherries stoned, and sprinkle over them ¼ cupful of sugar. When baked take from the oven and cover with a meringue made of the white of 1 egg beaten to a stiff froth, with 1 large spoonful of powdered sugar. Return to oven a few minutes.

Shredded Wheat

A Boon to the Housekeeper—

Kitchen worries and cooking problems vanish from the home where is known. It is ready-cooked and ready-to-serve. It contains all the rich body-building material in the whole wheat made digestible by steam-cooking, shredding and baking. You can prepare a warm, nourishing meal in a few moments by heating the biscuit in oven to restore crispness and then pouring hot milk over it. Also wholesome and delicious with stewed or canned fruits.

SHREDDED WHEAT

ABOUT HIS MARK.

Half-past one, and he hadn't yet received the food he ordered before the hour. The customer got tired.

Ringing the bell violently, he eyed the slow-moving waiter balefully.

"I say, waiter," he exclaimed, "have you ever been in the country?"

"No, sir," replied the waiter, in surprise. "But why do you ask?"

"Oh, no reason in particular," remarked the customer airily. "I was just thinking how thrilling you would find it to sit on a fence and watch the snails whiz by!"

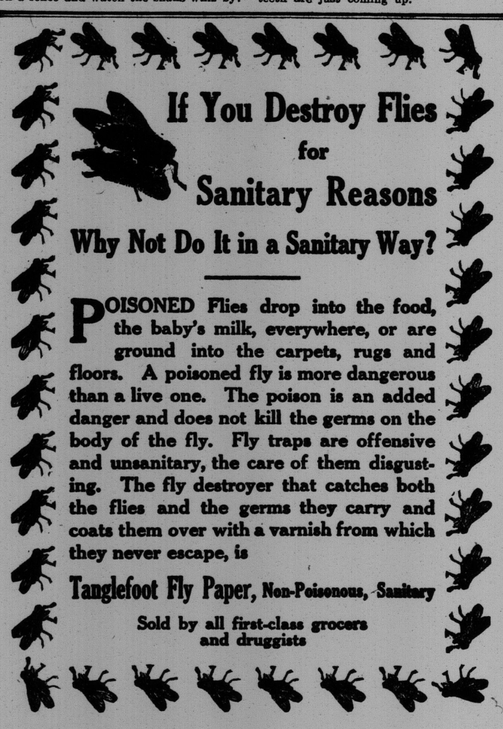
IN TECHNICAL TERMS.

Little Winnifred had been very keenly interested in gardening work all the spring. What specially appealed to her had been the sowing of seed, and then the coming of the little plants.

One day mother took her to see a neighbor's baby, who was just ten months old.

"Baby show the little girl his toothies," cooed the fond mother, as she opened the little rosebud mouth.

"O-o-oh, mummy," squealed Winnifred gleefully, as she saw the two little teeth just peeping through the gums, "look! His teeth are just coming up."



If You Destroy Flies for Sanitary Reasons

Why Not Do It in a Sanitary Way?

POISONED Flies drop into the food, the baby's milk, everywhere, or are ground into the carpets, rugs and floors. A poisoned fly is more dangerous than a live one. The poison is an added danger and does not kill the germs on the body of the fly. Fly traps are offensive and unsanitary, the care of them disgusting. The fly destroyer that catches both the flies and the germs they carry and coats them over with a varnish from which they never escape, is

Prussian Count Arrives in America —Young Lord Vernon Visits Canada to Invest in Land— $18,000,000 With Compound Interest for 600 Years Due Italian Family

(Copyright, 1912, by the Brentwood Company)

Arriving in New York today from Europe, on board the America, is Count Helie de Talleyrand-Perigord, who must not be confounded with that other Helie de Talleyrand-Perigord who is the Duke of Talleyrand and of Perigord, as well as the husband of Boni de Castellane's divorced wife, Anna Gould. Count Helie, due here on the America, is not a Frenchman but a Prussian, and is the elder of the two sons of Count Archambault de Talleyrand Perigord, who fought on the German side in the war of 1870-71, as a colonel of Prussian cavalry, much to the disgust of his elder brother, the Marquis Maurice de Talleyrand-Perigord, Duc de Dino.

The latter, who fought on the French side, was gazetted to a knighthood of the Legion of Honor for conspicuous gallantry under fire, but he declined to accept the distinction, on the ground that his only brother was in the ranks of the enemy, and that he would be perfectly satisfied if his own record could be held to obliterate the disgrace brought upon the family in France by Count Archambault's conduct.

As the Duc de Dino has no son, either by his first and divorced American wife, Miss Bessie Curtis of Boston, now known as the Marquise de Talleyrand-Perigord, nor yet by his second and equally divorced American consort who died two weeks ago as Mrs. Adele Livingston Sampson, in Paris, both his Marquisate and his Dukedom of Dino will go on his death to his Prussian brother Archambault, and afterwards to young Count Helie, just thirty years of age, arriving in this country today.

If Count Archambault became a Prussian, instead of remaining French like his elder brother, it was because he inherited a large portion of the German property of his grandmother, the first Duchesse de Dino, by birth a Princess of Courland and of Sagan. The Duchess's elder son Louis inherited her Sagan property, which is now held by German trustees for the three-year old son of Anna Gould and the Duc de Sagan and of Talleyrand and Perigord. The little boy is by the Kaiser's consent fourth Duc de Sagan, and a Serene Highness, the latter a title which neither of his parents enjoy.

The first Duchesse de Dino's other German estates went to her younger son Alexander Duc de Dino, who, on dying, left his German property to his younger son Archambault, and his French estates to his elder son Maurice. Both Archambault and Maurice are grandsons of Edmond de Talleyrand-Perigord, nephew of the great statesman.

Edmond's wife, the first Duchesse de Dino above mentioned, did the honors at the house of her husband's uncle, the statesman, throughout the last twenty-five years of his life and was his most devoted confidante, friend and counsellor. She brought about his reconciliation during his last illness to the Roman Catholic church, which he had quitted at the time of the Revolution, as Bishop of Autun, and her singularly interesting memoirs and correspondence have recently been published on both sides of the Atlantic.

Young Count Helie has a younger brother, Count Alexander, a lieutenant of Prussian Hussars, who was over here a couple of years ago, and was falsely reported married to a German vaudeville divette. Count Helie himself holds no military rank, but he makes his home in Berlin. His mother is a daughter of the French house of Gontaut-Biron.

Young Lord Vernon, who has left England for a stay at Ottawa, as a guest at Rideau Hall, proposes to devote some of the money obtained by the disposal of his Derbyshire estates, to the acquisition of land in Canada, following the example in this respect of the Duke of Sutherland, and of many other members of the British peerage, who resent the fiscal burdens placed on large land owners in England by the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Lloyd George, and the present Liberal administration. Lord Vernon, head of his house, is half an American, his mother being a daughter of the late Francis C. Lawrence of New York. The widowed Lady Vernon has long been an invalid, and her two boys, Lord Vernon and his younger brother, as well as his sister, were brought up to a great extent under the guardianship of their uncle, the Hon. William Vernon, married to the daughter of General Daniel M. Frost, of St. Louis, Mo.

The Vernons can boast of being one of the very oldest families in England, being descended of that Richard de Vernon who accompanied the Conqueror from Normandy and was one of the seven Barons created by Hugh Lupus, the great Earl of Chester. They settled at Haddon Hall, in Derbyshire, over 800 years ago, and one of them, Sir Henry Vernon, Lord of Haddon, was governor and treasurer to Prince Arthur, elder brother of Henry VII. Arthur spent much of his time at Haddon Hall with his governor, who was the grandfather of that Dorothy Vernon whose elopement with Sir John Manners furnished so picturesque a romance, and carried Haddon Hall into the family of its present owner, the Duke of Rutland. The name of Venables prefixed to the patronymic of Vernon by means of a hyphen, comes to Lord Vernon by the marriage of one of his ancestors, Sir Henry Vernon, member of parliament for Staffordshire, with the granddaughter and heiress of Sir Peter Venables, the last of the Venables lords of Kinderton. The son of this marriage was elevated to the peerage as Lord Vernon by George II. and the Barony of Kinderton was likewise revived in his favor, in view of the fact that he had inherited all the extensive Venables estates. This first Lord Vernon married the granddaughter of Lord High Chancellor Viscount Harcourt, and sister of Simon, Earl Harcourt, who dying without issue, the Earldom became extinct, but the family estates devolved upon the second of his sisters' sons, Edward Vernon, Archbishop of York, who assumed in obedience to his uncle's will the name of Harcourt, in lieu of that of Vernon. Louis Harcourt, secretary of state for the colonies in the Asquith cabinet, and married to J. Pierpont Morgan's niece, Mary Ethel Burns, is the great-grandson of this Archbishop, and the possessor of his estates, including Stanton Harcourt and Nunham Park, in Oxfordshire, on the Thames.

The birth of a daughter to the Marchese Peruzzi di Medici at Florence last week, serves to recall the fact that he is a son of the widowed Marchesa Peruzzi, who was Edith Story, daughter of W. W. Story the sculptor, of Boston and Florence. The infant received the name of Simonetta, after her paternal grandfather, the late Marchese Simone Peruzzi, and Mira after her aunt, Mrs. Edward Eldridge of Boston, sister of the present Marquis. On the ground floor of the celebrated Palazzo Peruzzi in the Via Maggio, the Marquis has one of the finest collections in existence of medieval iron-work. He is the head of a now somewhat impoverished house, but one which in the year 1300 loaned sums amounting to $12,000,000 to King Edward I. of England, and half as much again to his grandson, Edward III. One of the original bills of exchange of the loan to Edward I. is still preserved in the British Museum in London. These loans have never been repaid, and were there no statute of limitations, the Peruzzis would be creditors of the English crown for the original $18,000,000, plus compound interest for 600 years, a total that staggers the imagination.

Thought Selfishness

By RUTH CAMERON

WHEN we speak of selfishness, we are apt to think first of selfishness about material things, but the more I study human nature, the more I become convinced that this is the least common and the least harmful kind of selfishness. There are so many other kinds of selfishness that spoil more happiness than this variety! For instance, there is the selfishness of the person who is never amiable unless he holds the centre of the stage; the selfishness of the person who is generous enough about material things, but inordinately greedy about having his own way; the selfishness of the person who allows a tendency, such as a habit of worrying, to spoil half the family happiness; and then there is thought-selfishness.

It was that last variety thatstarted me philosophizing on this subject. By thought-selfishness, I mean the habit of being ungenerous with one's thoughts.

I know a man who has very interesting thoughts. He has a keen sense of humor, an unusual fund of information and a habit of observation. When he sees fit to talk—really talk, I mean, not just say the absolutely necessary things—he almost always has something interesting to say. But unless he is in a very gracious mood, he will often sit perfectly silent, ignoring the conversation, and thinking his own interesting thoughts to himself.

Now I believe that that man is selfish when he does this. He owes the world the benefit of his intelligence, and he is just as stingy and miserly when he sits there hoarding his thoughts as the miser counting his gold.

This man is an exaggerated example of this type, but I know a great many men and women who are thought-selfish in one way or another. There is the man who eats his breakfast in stolid silence broken only by occasional requests for more food. His wife tries to draw him out but he is absorbed in his own thoughts. There are many things which he might say that would give her something to think about during the day, but he is simply too lazy to put his thoughts into words.

Then there is the son or daughter who comes home at night from an interesting day at school or work, with half a dozen things in his or her mind that would interest or divert the house-bound mother, and yet does not take the trouble to tell them to her.

The man who does not credit other people with a sense of humor, and so smiles to himself when anything amuses him, is another member of this species. No one has a right to keep anything cleanly amusing to himself. Pass it on. "The poor old earth must borrow its mirth," you know. If you have any to lend, do not be miserly with it.

The man who reads the morning paper and does not pass on the bits of news that he thinks would be interesting to his family, certainly is thought-selfish, and also the person who gets a letter and does not communicate those parts of it which are communicable and of general interest.

Uncommunicative people are often praised and admired. To be sure, the person who chatters continually about nothing, is a bore; but the person who has something to chatter about and doesn't chatter is also a bore; and what is more than that he is selfish. Don't you think so?

TONIC TREATMENT FOR THE STOMACH

The Modern Method Most Successful in Treating Indigestion.

The old-fashioned methods of treating indigestion and stomach troubles are being discarded. The trouble with the old fashioned methods was that when the treatment was stopped the trouble returned in an aggravated form.

The modern method of curing indigestion and other stomach troubles is to tone up the stomach to do its normal work. Every step toward recovery is a step gained, not to be lost again. The recovery of the appetite, the disappearance of pain, the absence of gas—all are steps on the road to health that those who have tried the tonic treatment remember distinctly. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic medicine, every constituent of which is helpful in building up the digestive organs, and is therefore the very best remedy for chronic cases of stomach trouble. The success of the treatment is proved by thousands of cases like the following. Mr. W. W. Swain, Grand Valley, Ont., says: "For several years my mother had stomach trouble from which she got no relief whatever until she began the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She was treated at different times by three doctors, but their efforts did not avail. Then she was advised to try an eleteric belt, but it proved worthless. She suffered much during this time and food became distasteful. The trouble also affected her nerves and her general health was on the verge of a breakdown. One day a friend who was in asked her to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Without very much hope that the Pills would prove successful when other medicine had failed, we nevertheless got her a supply. In a few weeks we could see a decided change, and got six more boxes, by the time these were used mother was almost well, and she kept on taking the Pills for a short time longer and was completely cured. She is now a healthy and strong woman and is never bothered with her stomach in any way. I hope this statement will bring relief to other sufferers."

Why experiment with medicines of doubtful value, when you have such positive evidence of the benefit following the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills? Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Dead birds are constantly found at the foot of lighthouses where, it has been supposed, they fall after dashing themselves against the lanterns. Some Dutch students of the matter became convinced that the birds do not dash themselves against the lighthouses, but, becoming confused by the brilliant light, fly round until they are exhausted, and finally perish for want of a foothold. The plan of attaching short ladders to the lighthouses to serve as perches has apparently proved this latest theory to be correct; for it has so greatly reduced the bird mortality that Germany has decided to adopt the plan.

What is said to be the largest and most elaborate hospital for animals in the world is in Bombay, India. It has both its in-patients and its out-patients, and it ministers to animals of all kinds as carefully as human beings are administered to in the hospitals of the west. More than 2,000 animals are taken into the hospital each year, and well on to 1,000 are treated as out-patients. In all there are some forty buildings, large and small, connected with the hospital.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE SOLVES THE PROBLEM OF GOOD HAIR

After Prof. Sabouraud confirmed the germ origin of dandruff, science was confronted by a new problem which was not solved until the discovery of Newbro's Herpicide. Herpicide being the first successful preparation compounded in harmony with this new theory, becomes the original remedy to kill the dandruff germ.

Since then, numerous preparations said to be "just as good" as Herpicide have been thrown upon the market; others have adopted Herpicide claims, and without making any change in their remedies, but none have ever reached the same degree of popularity. Everywhere this remedy is recognized as the one genuine dandruff germ destroyer. As a result Herpicide has more satisfied users than all other hair preparations combined.

Being the original remedy, users expect more astonishing results from Herpicide than they would look for from any other preparation and they usually get them. So wonderful has been the success of this germicide that it is now recognized as the standard hair remedy of the world.

Herpicide kills the dandruff germ, checks falling hair. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Applications obtainable at the good barber shops. Insist on having real Herpicide. Send 10c. in postage for sample and book to The Herpicide Co., Dept. R., Detroit, Mich.

Newbro's Herpicide in 50c. and $1.00 sizes is sold by all dealers who guarantee it to do all that is claimed. If you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.
