"PEACE HATH HER VICTORIES."

WRITTEN AT PARIS.

The following lines from the pen of the late Mr McGee have just appeared—apparently for the first time—in "The Broadway," an Anglo-American magazine of great merit, published simultaneously by the Routledge's in London and New York:—

I.

To people wastes, to supplement the sun,
To plant the olive where the wild-briar grew;
To bid rich rivers in safe channels run,
The youth of aged cities to renew;—
To shut the temple of the two-faced god—
Grand triumphs these, worthy a conqueror's car;
They need no herald's horn—no lictor's rod—
Peace hath her victories, no less than War.

II.

To raise the drooping artist's head, to breathe
The word despairing genius thirsts to hear,
To crown all service with its earned wealth,
To be of lawless force the foe, austere:
This is to stretch a sceptre over Time,
This is to give our darling earth a star,
And belt it with the emerald scroll sublime—
Peace hath her victories, no less than War.

III.

To stand amidst the passions of the hour
Storm-lash'd, resounding fierce from shore to shore;
To watch the human whirlwind waste its power,
Till drowned Reason lifts her head once more;
To build on hatred nothing, to be just,
Judging of men and nations as they are,
Too strong to share the councils of mistrust—
Peace hath her victories, no less than War.

IV.

To draw the nations in a silken zone—
On to their highest exercise of good
To show the better land above, beyond
The sea of Egypt, all whose waves are blood;
These, leader of the age! these arts be thine,
All religious victories surpassing far
On faces all Heaven's benignant planets shine—
Peace hath her victories, no less than War.

T. D'ARCY McGEE.

Paris, 1867.

Get an Early Breakfast.

A bad custom is prevalent in many families, especially among farmers, of working an hour or two before breakfast, attending to "chores," hoeing in the garden, cutting wood, mowing, &c. This is convenient on many accounts, but it is not conducive to health. The prevalent opinion is, that the morning air is the purest and most healthful and bracing; but the contrary is the fact. At no hour of the day is the air more filled with dampness, fogs and miasmas, than about sunrise. The heat of the sun gradually dissipates these miasmatic influences as the day advances. An early meal braces up the system against these external influences. Every one knows the langor and faintness often experienced for the first hour in the morning, and that this is increased by exercise and want of food. We do not agree with the boarding school regime which prescribes a long walk before breakfast as a means of promoting health.

Probably the best custom would be, to furnish every member of the family, especially those who labor out of doors, with a single cup of warm coffee, well milked, immediately after rising from bed. Then let them attend to chores, or mowing, hoeing, &c., for an hour or two, while the teams are feeding, and the breakfast preparing. They will feel better and do more work.—Am. Agriculturist.

Dairy Items.

Salt for Cows.—Some persons contend that feeding salt to stock is not necessary to their health or comfort, consequently a useless expense. This conclusion is in opposition to the opinions of many eminent dairymen and stockgrowers, and ignored by the cattle themselves when salt is supplied them—especially during the season of green feed. Other animals, in the wild state, evince an appetite for salt showing that it is a natural and not acquired habit. It is believed that salting cattle occasionally during the summer months is beneficial to them, and we know it is grateful to their palates, by the regularity with which they will seek it at the stated places of feeding, and the avidity with which it is devoured.

The Daily Average of Cheese in a Dairy.—H. Murray, Aurora, Kane Co., Illinois, informs the Utica Herald, that during the week preceding the 15th of June, he experimented with the milk from his dairy stock for the purpose of determining how many pounds of milk it required to make a pound of cheese. Unexpectedly he found that 5¼ pounds of milk made a pound of cheese, as an average for a week. The Herald is of the opinion that a pound of cheese from 5¼ lbs. of milk is doing very well if the cheese is made solid and firm by expelling any extra moisture from it. Examples from several factories are given, showing a somewhat higher rate than this.

Curing Rennets.—Orrin Johnson writes the New Hampshire Farmers' Record, about curing rennets. He says they ought never to be dried inside out. He adds:—"When taken from the calf put a handful of fine salt into it, lay it aside for a week or six months—they will not hurt—then stretch them on sticks, not turned inside out. When taken off the stick, see that both ends are tied or closed up tight. Keep a year's stock beforehand. I think one cured in this way worth two dried inside out.

Cheese Statistics.—B. W. Runstead, Kenosha, Wisconsin, supplies the Telegraph of that place with the cheese factory statistics for Kenosha county. The number of cows supplying milk to the several factories in the county, last year, was 2,431, and the number of pounds of cheese made 1,035,321. The amount of cheese and butter made in the same county at private dairies is quite large, and is not included in the preceding figures.

What Four Cows Did.—J. W. Chase, Bridgewater, informs the Utica Herald that four cows in one year supplied a family of three persons with milk and butter, and furnished for market besides cheese amounting to $230.40; butter, $222.78; calves, $29.31; total, $532.49. This season he milks three cows, whose daily yield of milk in the early part of June was 154 pounds.

The Milk Fever—Cold Water.—It is said that cows suffering from febrile attacks may often be relieved by dashing cold water freely over them. If the animal is in a state so critical as to render the chances of recovery by ordinary means doubtful, a resort to this assumed remedy can scarcely make matters worse, if it should fail of doing any good.

Timely Hints.

RULES FOR THE MANAGEMENT OF INFANTS DURING THE SUMMER MONTHS.

1. Preserve cleanliness of room, clothes and person of child, and secure fresh air by open windows, resort to parks, carries, &c.

2. Use light flannel covering for chest and bowels at all times, and other clothing to suit the changes of the weather.

3. Infants under one year old should, if possible, have a wet nurse. Until six months old they may nurse not oftener than every two or three hours; over six months five times in twenty-four hours.

4. If the child do not nurse it must still take milk, which should be prepared as follows:—Boil a teaspoonful of barley (ground in a coffee mill, or take prepared barley) with a gill of water for fifteen minutes, to which add a little salt; to this add half the amount of boiled milk and a lump of loaf sugar; give it to the child lukewarm from a nursing bottle. This bottle and mouthpiece should be always kept in water when not in use.

5. If the child is over six months old the boiled milk and barley water should be in equal quantities, with salt and loaf sugar. If the child is sickly, costive, use farina instead of barley and flour; if very costive, use oatmeal gruel strained before it is mixed with the milk.

6. If the child is partly nursed it should be fed sufficiently with food prepared as above directed—the child being nursed and fed alternately.

7. Beef tea or beef soup may be added to the food for infants of five months or older when teething or bowels sluggish, or when they show symptoms of scurvy.

8. No child more than one year of age should be allowed the miscellaneous diet of the table.

9. On the first appearance of the symptoms of serious complaint, vomiting and purging, place the child under the care of a physician.
