MR. LAROCQUE, proprietor of the PLANTAGENET MINERAL SPRINGS, has handed to us the following certificate from the Hon. A. N. MORIN, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. The numerous highly respectable signatures from medical men, as well as the attestation of a gentleman so highly respected and so well known as MR. MORIN, is a sufficient testimony of the valuable properties of these Waters:—

MONTREAL, (Canada,) Nov. 12, 1849.

I, Augustin Norbert Morin, of the City of Montreal, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of Canada, do hereby certify that I am acquainted with Mr. LaRocque, proprietor of the Plantagenet Springs; that the Plantagenet Waters have been widely used in this city and district, and with marked advantage, as far as I can judge by universal report. I have looked to the printed paper hereto annexed, the original certificates not having been shown to me. I have no doubt of its genuineness, from the well known position of the medical gentlemen and of others who have signed, and from the publicity which these certificates have had in the newspapers. The physicians whose name they bear are among the most respectable of the Faculty. Mr. Hunt, the Chemist, is also well known to me. He has been, I believe, an occasional correspondent of Silliman's Journal, and his character and capacity are well established.

A. N. MORIN.

QUEBEC, October 10, 1849.

SIR,—At the request of Dr. Morin, my medical adviser, I was induced to take some of your really valuable Plantagenet Mineral Waters; and, for the benefit of my suffering fellow-creatures, and mankind in general, I cannot but bear my humble testimony to their beneficial effects. Having suffered, for some time back, from severe attacks of optical delusion, and derangement of the lower intestines, I was induced to try the Plantagenet Water, from the use of which I have derived incalculable benefit. If my testimony should appear to you likely to induce others to try the Water, you have my full consent to use it in such manner as may seem most advisable to yourself.

I subscribe myself, dear Sir, with gratitude, your obliged servant,

(Signed) HENRY DYER.

That Rochester "Knocking."

"EXPLANATION AND HISTORY OF THE MYSTERIOUS COMMUNION WITH SPIRITS," &c.

(Concluded.)

The next chapter discusses the question, "Are they Good or Evil Spirits?" who make these demonstrations—a question hardly in order as yet with those who have not decided that they are disembodied spirits at all. The writer contends that they are good, because they always do good—that is, their interposition in human affairs uniformly tends to the avoidance of evil or the securing of good. This is an excellent touchstone, and we have no disposition to cavil at the conclusions thence attained. The following is one of the cases cited in evidence, (p. 64:)—

"On one occasion a gentleman of Rochester was indebted to a woman who was in great need of the money. The spirit directed her little sister to go to such a place in the street at a certain hour in the day, and she would meet the man who would pay her three dollars for her sister. The little girl did not know the man who owed the money but went as directed. At the appointed time she met a man who said to her, 'Are you the girl that lives with Mrs. ——?' She replied in the affirmative. 'There are three dollars! I wish you would take to her,' said the man, handing her a bill, and passed on."

The pamphlet admits, what the reports of investigating Committees given in our columns have already set forth, that the directions given by these 'knockings' are not reliable, but often erroneous. As this is rather important, let us hear what the writer has to offer upon it, (p. 66:)—

"We see no reason for supposing that, because a man has passed from this stage of existence, he has become at once the most perfect of prophets, without regard to his condition here. . . . There are, undoubtedly, spirits who desire to be noticed and to answer questions, who are too ignorant to give any instruction, and who would be as likely to tell right as wrong. We do not believe these to be wilfully vicious; these errors arise from their ignorance, and we are answered that they will ultimately progress to a state of intelligence, purity, and happiness, equal to those who pass from here under more favorable circumstances. Swedenborg says there are some spirits so ignorant that they do not know but they are the ones called for, when another is meant. This may be so. We are inclined to think it is, for we have known attempts to be made to imitate the signal which we always get when we call for a friend. Nearly every person who has called frequently for some particular spirit gets a signal whereby that particular spirit is known. This signal is different for different spirits, and although it is frequently attempted we have never known these signals imitated. We do not think there is danger of being deceived by ignorant spirits when a person becomes acquainted with these communications. The sound made by an ignorant spirit is quite different from the others. While the sound made by intelligent spirits is clear and ringing, the sound made by the ignorant one is low and muffled, like the striking of the hand on a carpet. We are confident that, with due caution and care, intelligent and upright individuals will get correct answers. Much depends upon the mind and disposition of persons at the time of asking the questions, for, as all the Universe goes by affinities, it needs a pure mind, calm thinker and deliberate questioner to get communications from spirits of a high order."

These spirits, or whatever they may be, it seems have a theology, if such it may be called, as it is manifestly proper that spirits should have. If it should seem rather a scant pattern, the reader will please lay the fault at their door or their expositors', at all events not at ours. Whether the sounds whereby the following answers were communicated were "clear and lively" or "low and muffled," this deponent saith not. We only quote from the book, which says:—

"Their general theology is that of Davis, Swedenborg, and others, who have claimed to receive their impressions from spirits. They generally use the terms higher and lower spheres instead of heaven and hell. They say that all persons pass to a condition superior to that which they occupied here, on their leaving the body. Thousands of questions have been asked on these points, and have been answered by spirits who purported to be Emanuel Swedenborg, the 'Seeress of Prevorst,' George Fox, Lorenzo Dow, Galen, William E. Channing, Nathaniel P. Rogers, John Wesley, Samuel Wesley, and many others.

"It is easy to well to name the spirit with which called for, and some manifestations are of a character, and perhaps some others, spelled as the one who wishes to communicate. Often it is a name which the company had not thought of. They generally deliver some useful and interesting message, when such is the case. The following are questions which are frequently asked, and we give the answers as they were spelled out. We might fill a volume with questions and answers:—

"Question.—What is your mission to the world?

"Answer.—To do good. The time will come when we will communicate universally.

"Q.—Of what benefit will it be to mankind?

"A.—We can reveal truths to the world—and men will become more harmonious and better prepared for the higher spheres.

"Q.—Some persons imagine that the spirits are evil, and that Satan is transformed into an Angel of Light to deceive us. What shall we say to them?

"A.—Tell them some of their bigotry will have to be dispensed with before they can believe we are good spirits. Ask them why they refuse to investigate. They are not as wise as they suppose themselves to be.

"Q.—Can ignorance and error exist?

"A.—Yes. (An ignorant spirit rapped, and the difference was very plain between that and the other.)

"Q.—Are those sounds made by rapping?

"A.—No. They are made by the will of the spirits causing a condension of the atmosphere, and making the sounds appear in whatever place they please.

"Q.—Can they make the sounds to all persons?

"A.—No. The time will come when they can.

"Q.—Is there some other state of the body that makes it easier to communicate with some persons than others?

"A.—Yes.

"On one occasion a spirit, purporting to be Lorenzo Dow, gave the following definition of Hell:—

"'The Universalists say that Hell is the grave. This is not so. The Presbyterians say it is a place of fire and brimstone that burns the soul forever. This is bad enough. The Hell is where bad folks, and when he escapes from that he escapes from bondage.'"

According to this, a man wishing to get out of Hell has only to cut his throat, which most people would consider a far more likely way to get into that interesting predicament. If it be not deemed an exceptionable intermeddling with forbidden topics, we would like to say that we can't advise any one to try the experiment. It might not be safe.

The next and last chapter ("The Conclusion," excepted) treats of the "Display of Physical Power," by the invisible agencies treated of, and is rather calculated to make people open their eyes. Passing over averments that the persons testifying have witnessed the moving of a table by some unseen impulse, while a man tried to hold it down, (we should have preferred that he stood away from it,)—that "a table-cloth was taken from the table and very compactly stowed away under it, near one corner,"—(the lights having previously been removed from the room—why?)—that "a hat on the table was turned over the table-cloth," so as nearly to hide it, &c.—that the persons testifying "have frequently had a hand laid on their own shoulders or head, when no person could or would do it, having all their hands held by each other, (but all in the dark, we understand,)—that said hand has a perfectly natural feeling, that "at our request it will change both its temperature and texture, it will in one instant feel as cold as ice and as warm as a common hand of flesh,"—that the invisible something played several tunes on a guitar most exquisitely, though no person in the room knew how to play on the instrument at all—that this was done on several occasions, (but always, we understand, in a dark room,—we make room for the following, from p. 72—5:—

"Saturday evening, Oct. 20th.—This evening we had asked for some different demonstration, and our request was complied with. We heard the sounds on the wall, upon which, now, there is no paper, as best we can describe them, and on the floor, as if a person was walking back and forth across the room, with measured step and regular tread. There was in the room a heavy table, with a large chair down, which, at their request, I quietly moved it, and, with my hand on it, I felt the table strongly, but the chair could not be held firmly enough. As we sat by the table, the chair was moved up to a different one part of the room. The sounds of several persons were taken from their hands and put into the hands of other persons, in the dark, but lighted when they came into the room. There were also some of the same persons present who were present before, by some of the persons in question. There was also a person present who had never been in the room before, who was entirely a stranger to all the parties, who spelled out a name, which I, and C. knew of the person. There was then the name of their parents was told the same thing, although they had never spoken of it in our presence. Also, at their request, I put my hand on the table, and felt the table move under my hand. During one of these sounds, a person was present who was so far off that we saw she had not moved in her chair. On request, we found the window, (the room is on the second story, and the window, one sash of which was raised, is just by the side of the table,) gave three distinct raps on a form. There were also some other sounds, which, to us, were very distinct, and which, we understand, were heard by persons in other parts of the house. There were also some other sounds, which, we understand, were heard by persons in other parts of the house. There were also some other sounds, which, we understand, were heard by persons in other parts of the house. There were also some other sounds,
