COAL MINE DISASTER IN WEST VIRGINIA

Number of Victims Expected to Reach 70—Dust Explosion the Cause

Charlestown, W. Va., Jan. 29.—There are at least fifty or sixty known dead as a result of an explosion in the Stewart mine, near Fayetteville, Fayette county, tonight, according to the last reports received, and it is expected the number will reach sixty-five. The explosion was caused by dust in the mine. Every effort is being made to get to the mine workings and rescue the entombed men, but there is little hope that any of them are alive.

At the time of the explosion there were about 200 men in the shaft, and there is grave apprehension that a great many of them were in the mine when the explosion occurred. Organized effort is being made to get to the men, and volunteers are plentiful. The scene about the mine is a pathetic one, men, women and children crying for their dear ones, and imploring those on the ground to go to their rescue.

The Stewart is a shaft 568 feet deep. The development is in the Sewall seam, which ranges in thickness from four to five feet. The mine is located on the White Oak Fuel company's private land, connecting with the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad at Cardife. It is located about four miles from Fayetteville and seven miles from Thurmon. The mine has been in operation for about three years or more, but has not been fully developed, the work of development having been done on the double entry system.

The permanent structure, such as head houses and tipples, have been completed within the last year. The mine is owned by the Stewart Colliery Co.

SWETTENHAM'S APOLOGY

Letter to Admiral Davis Withdrawn and Regret Expressed

London, Jan. 29.—The Associated Press learns that the international phase of the Kingston incident has been finally closed by Governor Swettenham formally withdrawing his letter to Rear Admiral Davis and expressing his regret for having written it.

Swettenham's withdrawal of his letter and his apology followed voluminous telegraphic communications to him from the Colonial office. The despatch which has just now closed the incident was sent by the governor to the Colonial office, whence it reached the United States department through the foreign office.
