A FATEFUL.... ....DIAMOND

"Do you remember," she continued, growing excited, as she rehearsed the story to him, "that stormy evening when we played euchre at home, how I would not play with you? I played against you, and I told you I was playing against you with all my might. I meant far more than I appeared to at the time, for I was playing a desperate game against you. Then, all at once, I began to cultivate your society. Oh, how it went against me. How I hated myself for my duplicity; but I had a secret to worm out of you."

"Aha, that was your game then," interrupted Arthur, growing white to his lips as he realized how he had been fooled.

"Yes; do you suppose I would have tolerated your company for one moment after what you had said regarding my betrothed husband, if I had not been impelled by a powerful motive?"

"But how, under heavens, did you contrive to get into this building?" questioned Arthur, growing interested in this thrilling account in spite of his own desperate situation.

"Simply by the use of two keys," and she held them up before his astonished eyes; precisely like those he had possessed until compelled to give them up to Louis.

"Where did you get them?" he asked breathlessly.

"I had them made."

"How?"

"I have already remarked that I began to cultivate your society, and that I had a powerful motive in so doing."

"Yes," he interrupted bitterly, "you led me on, you tempted me, making believe you cared for me, only to betray me, when I loved you to idolatry."

She drew herself up haughtily.

"I never gave you the slightest encouragement to speak of love to me. I always repelled you whenever you attempted it," she said coldly. "I confess that for a time I assumed a friendliness which I did not feel, and it was not an easy thing to do, either, simply to accomplish my purpose."

"What purpose?"

"That of getting possession of your keys to this building."

He started to his feet, looking almost wild.

"But you never succeeded; they have never been out of my possession for even one hour," he cried excitedly.

"No, but I took an impression of them."

He staggered back, striking his forehead with his hand as he seemed to recall something.

"Then that was all pretense—your fascination for coins and curious keys?" he said.

"No, not wholly; I have a passion for old coins. It was a hoax about the keys, though. I thought, perhaps, I could entice you to hand over what you had to me, and in that way I could get an impression of the two that I wanted."

"No," she returned, regarding him with a curious expression.

"For heaven's sake, don't sit there and look at me in that way. You have triumphed, it seems, and I should like to know just how you did it."

"Surely, you have not forgotten all that occurred the day of the fete, when I was your guest?"

"No," the young man excitedly cried, light at last beginning to break in upon his mind.

"Well, I went there for a purpose that day, and I accomplished it."

"I see," said Arthur with a crestfallen air," your weariness was all a pretense; you had seen those keys when I showed you the inside of my desk; you pretended that you needed rest and quiet, and while we all thought you sleeping, you improved your time by rummaging and taking an impression of those keys. An honorable return, surely, for one's hospitality," he concluded, satirically.

She faced him with flashing eyes.

"Do you presume to talk about an honorable return for hospitality," she cried indignantly, "you who had the meanness to conceal yourself behind the draperies in a lady's parlor—after having been courteously received as her guest for many months—and listen to a conversation that was purely confidential, almost sacred; and then, taking advantage of what you had thus learned, go forth and commit a crime to ruin the man whom she loved more than her own life. Really, Mr. Aspinwall, you need coaching in the science of discrimination," she concluded, with biting sarcasm.

"Yes, I did rummage, as you express it," she went on after a moment of thought, "and I felt justified in so doing. I believed that the fate of one, dearer to me than all the world besides, depended upon the use of that hour spent in your room. I knew I was upon the right trail, for, before lunch, while you were out, I had been in your closet, and seen, protruding from one of our trunks, a few gray hairs, and knew as well as I did later when I saw the whole, that your disguise was there. But about the keys; I was sure that by using a little strategy, I could take their impression — I could have others made, and then I could come and see for myself what interested you so in this building. Doubtless you wonder why I did not confide in my father and save myself all this trouble and perhaps danger. It was because I wished to do you no wrong in the estimation of others. If my suspicions, regarding your agency in this crime, should prove to be incorrect, no one would be the wiser, you would not be injured in any way, nor be wounded by what I had done. If, on the other hand, they proved to be true, then, I reasoned, it would be a very easy matter to bring you to justice."

"Go on—pray go on; I am deeply interested, and would like to hear the whole of this interesting story," Arthur said, bitterly, as she paused for a moment.

"I do not object to telling it," Margaret returned, with a slight smile, "it may serve to show you that a woman's cunning and intuition can sometimes outwit a villain's most desperate schemes."

"You are getting complimentary as you proceed, Miss Houghton," he interrupted, angrily.

"I am simply stating facts. But to return to my subject. Left alone in your room, I went directly to your desk, where I found the keys I had been wanting to get possession of for so long, together with wax and tapers, and it was the work of but a few moments to get impressions of them both. I confess that I felt very uncomfortable to be thus playing the part of a spy and prying into your affairs, and nothing but sternest necessity could have tempted me to violate my sense of honor in that way."

"Your apology comes rather late in the day to be of much account," Arthur sneered.

"The next day," she resumed, without heeding his interruption, "I took my impressions to a locksmith, had keys made, and a few evenings later I came hither between eight and nine o'clock to test them, and the truth of my suspicions regarding you."

"You possess courage as well as strategy, Miss Houghton," Arthur again interrupted.

"I would have been willing to encounter even more than I did if I had supposed I was going to save Louis Dunbar from your malignity. I do not think I really expected to find him here; I hoped to find some clue that would lead to his discovery. But I did expect to find some trace of the missing money, and believed that a revelation of everything would follow if I did."

"But when I entered this room, and found him alive and well, even though a prisoner behind those dreadful bars, oh!"—and Margaret heaved a deep sigh at the remembrance of the shock she had sustained—"no one can ever know, and I can never tell, what my sensations were.

"Of course, I could not release him then, for I had no key to that ponderous padlock; but after consulting with him, we arranged that. So yesterday morning I went out to a hardware store——"

"Ha-a-a!"

"Yes," Margaret said, a little smile of triumph flitting over her face; I had just purchased a saw and file suitable for working upon iron, and concealed them about my person, when you met me at the door."

"Oh, what a dolt I have been!" cried her listener, wildly. "I understand it all now—your capriciousness, playing fast and loose with me—your queer remarks, which seemed to imply so much, and yet nothing at all—the sudden change in your dress, and your strange gayety and vivacity yesterday. What a dupe you have made of me from beginning to end!"

NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.

The stomach is the vital center of the body. It is the organ from which all other organs are fed. A weak stomach means a weak man. There never was a strong man with a weak stomach. What is called "weak stomach" is in general a diseased condition of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, which prevents the proper digestion of the food which is taken into the stomach, and so reduces the nutrition of the body. When all food is taken away the body starves. When the food eaten is only digested and assimilated in part it only nourishes the body in part, and so the body is partly starved. And this starvation is felt in every organ of the body dependent on the blood which is made from food.

The great variety of the cures performed by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is due to its remarkable power to heal diseases of the stomach and allied organs. It cures through the stomach diseases seemingly remote, but which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach and the other organs of digestion and nutrition. "Weak" heart, lungs, kidneys and weakness of other organs is cured with the cure of the weak stomach.

Mr. Thomas A. Swarts, Box 103, Sub-Station C., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "I was taken very sick with severe headache, then cramps in the stomach, and food would not digest, then kidney and liver trouble, and my back got weak so I could scarcely get around. The more I doctored the worse I got until six years passed. I had become so poorly I could only walk in the house by the aid of a chair, and I got so thin I had given up to die, thinking that I could not be cured. Then one of my neighbors said, 'Take Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and make a new man out of yourself.' The first bottle helped me so I thought I would get another, and after I had taken eight bottles I was weighed and found I had gained twenty-seven (27) lbs. in about six weeks. I have done more hard work in the past eleven months than I did in two years before, and I am as stout and healthy to-day, I think, as I ever was."

SEATTLE FAKE FABRICATIONS

Little Reliance To Be Placed in the Alaska News From That Quarter.

Ottawa, Sept. 12.—Capt. H. J. Woodside, of the Yukon Sun, Dawson, has written the following letter to the Evening Journal here, warning Canadians to place no credence in the press dispatches from Seattle about affairs in the Yukon and Alaska.

"I cannot understand why Canadian newspapers will use dispatches from Seattle, Wash., relating to Yukon or the Klondike. From over two years' experience in the Yukon (fifteen months as mining editor of the Yukon Sun, Dawson) I can certify that a Seattle newspaper or correspondent is almost incapable of telling the truth. Their lying capabilities are a well-known fact in Dawson and the mines. Seattle journalism is the most shamelessly abandoned type of yellow journalism on this continent. No lie is too great for its writers to manufacture or its papers to reproduce. I say this as a simple fact that is well-known to Yukoners. The taste of Seattle readers has been perverted to such an extent that nothing commonplace is acceptable to them. It is like offering a drink of water to a man who craves brandy. It is not necessary that there should be any basis of truth in an item about the Klondike printed in a Seattle paper. The most silly and ridiculous rumors are worked up into 'a full account of the affair.' If the rumor is anything that will hurt the Yukon, so much the better, for now that Seattle is losing the Dawson and Yukon trade, its newspapers are anxious to damn our country and boom that fraud of theirs—Nome—just as they boomed the terrible Copper River-Valdiz Glacier rush, which cost so many lives and terrible suffering, and was a pure transportation and mercantile fraud, originated to help Seattle interests."

LYONS.

Lyons, Sept. 11.—Eva, age 2 years, daughter of J. J. Mitchell, was taken ill on Sunday night.

A cow valued at $50, belonging to Mr. Samuel Legg, fell into a well Friday evening and died before she could be taken out by the fifteen men and team of horses engaged in the work of rescue.

Miss Lottie Noble leaves for Buffalo, N. Y., to resume her vocation there.

Misses Eva Noble and Flossie Legg met with an accident Friday that might have resulted seriously. They were driving from Aylmer High School, and when opposite the premises of Mr. E. Thompson met a man with a team attached to the separator of a threshing machine. Their horse took fright and plunged into the deep ditch, capsizing the vehicle and wrenching its top off. Miss Mary Legg conveyed to their homes the pupils, who had been badly shaken up.

GLADSTONE.

Gladstone, Sept. 13.—Mrs. Frances Ward, relict of the late Peter Ward, died on Saturday, Sept. 8, after an illness of twelve weeks, borne with fortitude and Christian resignation. Deceased was born in Whitby, July 7, 1822. In 1840 she married Peter Ward, and of their eight children two are living. Coming west in 1842, Mr. and Mrs. Ward settled on the north half of lot 17, con. 4, North Dorchester, south of the Thames. Contemporaneous with the deceased were James Monger and James McMurray. Mr. Ward died in 1895. Messrs. John and Jefferson Ward comprise the family who occupy the homestead. The funeral took place to the Union cemetery, Dorchester, on Monday. Rev. Mr. Bunt conducted the services. Messrs. A. A. McCallum, Duncan McCallum, Henry Jackson, Levi McMurray, Morris McMurray and Drape Stirton were pall-bearers.

ARKONA.

Arkona, Sept. 13.—Miss Sarah McKay returned home on Monday, after spending a week with relatives in Sarnia.

George N. Brown is attending high school in Watford.

Quite a number of Arkona people took in the baseball match in Forest on Tuesday. The Bloomers were all right, but they are not in it with Forest.

Miss Long, of Michigan, is visiting her cousin, Miss Lettie Ott.

Mr. F. H. Dunn, of Morrisburg, is visiting his parents here at present.

Mrs. A. Bartram returned home on Monday, after spending a week in Toronto.

A. W. Brown took in the London fair on Wednesday.

Rev. Mr. Brown will preach in the Methodist Church, Forest, on Sunday next.

A pleasant evening was spent at the home of Rev. Mr. Baldwin on Tuesday evening by the members of the B. Y. P. U. and members of the church.

Mr. Alex. Bartram was in London on Wednesday, attending the fair.

Mr. Pace, of Forest, will occupy the Methodist pulpit next Sunday.

SPRINGFIELD.

Springfield, Sept. 11.—Rev. Mr. Bethune, of Aylmer and Springfield parishes, preached anniversary sermons on Sunday to large and appreciative gatherings. The church was tastefully decorated.

A harvest home was held on Monday evening by the Ladies' Aid of the Presbyterian Church, which proved to be a pleasant affair. Mr. George Stewart, principal of the public school presided. Miss Tissa McCallum, elocutionist; Master George McCallum, the boy tenor, both of Galt, were much appreciated. Mrs. George Stewart acted as accompanist. The menu, which was excellent, was served in the vegetable department of the horticultural hall, where a good programme was given. Mr. Bruce Smith, of Aylmer, sang a solo which won an encore, Miss Bingham, of Aylmer, being the accompanist. Good addresses were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Orton and Bethune. Proceeds, $76. The horticultural hall was beautifully decorated.

HARRIETSVILLE.

Harrietsville, Sept. 11.—The houses of Messrs. J. H. O'Neil and A. E. Jackson are quarantined on account of diphtheria. Dennis Jackson, who was a sufferer from the disease, is improving. Caroline O'Neil, another victim, is almost well, while Annie, age 6 years, eldest daughter of J. H. O'Neil, is in a critical condition.

Mrs. H. Finch is improving rapidly.

Drs. Doan, of this place, and Arkell, of Belmont, met for consultation at the home of W. S. York, to readjust his shoulder, which was injured about eight weeks since.

The public school has been closed down on account of diphtheria prevailing.

Messrs. Henry Finch, S. Secord, J. H. Barr have filled their silos.

Dr. Doan was in Tilsonburg assisting Dr. Bennett with a critical case on Tuesday.

Edward Abbott, who was suffering from blood poisoning, is better.

DORCHESTER STATION.

Dorchester Station, Sept. 13.—Mr. Charles Hyde has bought the fine 100-acre farm of James Cartwright, on Hamilton road, near Nilestown, for $4,500.

Reeve Neely shipped a carload of hogs on Monday for the London Packing Company. Price paid, $5 50 per cwt.

A young damsel made her advent in the home of John Ruddick on Monday.

Miss McLoud, of Melbourne, is visiting at the home of Mrs. D. Ross.

Reeve Neely shipped a herd of hogs for the Hamilton Packing Company. Price, $5 50 and $5 60.

LAMBETH.

Lambeth, Sept. 13.—Miss Magee, of Fordwich, is spending the week with Mrs. J. S. Fisher.

Mrs. Stuart, of Clinton, and Miss Erwin, of Bayfield, are the guests of their sister, Mrs. Charlie Mill.

Mrs. L. M. Vandermade is entertaining Mrs. P. Root, of Kansas, this week.

Mr. Will Sadler returned from the Northwest last week, and is at present in the London hospital, threatened, it is feared, with typhoid fever.

Mrs. W. B. Woodhull is on the sick list.

The Epworth League have decided to purchase a new organ, to be placed in the new Methodist Church, which is rapidly nearing completion.

Arrangements are being made for the dedication of the new church, to be held on October 21.

Rev. J. E. Hunter spent last week at his home in Blyth.

Summer Complaint Is Serious

It Should Be Treated Without Delay by Administering Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

There is not a summer passes without thousands of people being attacked by Summer Complaint. The prostration—often verging on collapse—which sometimes accompanies this disease makes it one of the most serious and dangerous we have to contend with during the hot months. As there is no home in Canada this year that is likely to be exempt from this all-prevalent malady, everyone should have on hand a bottle of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry, so that this disease may be promptly checked and cured before it has time to weaken and debilitate the system and endanger life.

Mr. John R. Burton, Brockville, Ont., says: "Last summer I was very sick with a severe attack of Summer Complaint, and could get nothing to help me until I started taking Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. The action of this remedy was wonderful, and soon it had me perfectly well."

Remember that for fifty years Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry has been the great specific for Diarrhea, Dysentery, Cramps, Colic and Summer Complaint. You may endanger your life if you accept a substitute.

The Icelander eats iced fish and butter just as we eat bread and butter.

CHOLERA MORBUS, CRAMPS and kindred complaints annually make their appearance at the same time as the hot weather, green fruits, cucumbers, melons, etc., and many persons are debarred from eating these tempting fruits, but they need not abstain if they have Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial, and take a few drops in water. It cures the cramps and cholera in a remarkable manner, and is sure to check every disturbance of the bowels.

Missionaries in China have canceled orders for 100,000 religious books since the trouble began.

A SHORT ROAD to health was opened to those suffering from chronic coughs, asthma, bronchitis, catarrh, lumbago, rheumatism, excoriated nipples or inflamed breast, and kidney complaints, by the introduction of the inexpensive and effective remedy, Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil.
