Hon. Mr. Haggart said that the whole complaint, so far, was as to the redistribution in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. No reference was made to the other provinces. He did not think that section 51 was the full limitation of the British North America act; it was the 40th section that made it complete. It might be done in such a way and at such a time as the parliament of Canada may determine. There was not the slightest reason to doubt that parliament had full authority to deal with this question. The power was not only given, but was mandatory on them to do so. This was the first occasion on which any such question was raised. The government proceeded to redistribute the seats in the fairest manner possible. (Ironical hear, hear, from the opposition.) Ontario was divided by a line running between Peel and York to Georgian Bay, giving 46 members for western Ontario and 46 members for the east part of the province. That was a fair way of dividing the representation in regard to the population which was about equal in divisions. If we adopted the amendment of the member for Simcoe it would be a gerrymander in the worst way. (Hear, hear.) Why all the counties would have to be changed except eighteen in the province. Give him the county lines and he would give such a gerrymander as would even bring the blush of shame to the member for North Simcoe. (Hear, Hear.) Anybody could do the same thing. He would ask again what effect would such a redistribution as was proposed by the amendment have? Would it be satisfactory to either side of the house? Certainly not. As for the bill of 1882 no one was more responsible than was the member for Simcoe. At that time Mr. McCarthy occupied a position in the house and had a influence with the government as strong as any one member could have. It was strange for him now to move a want of confidence motion in the government without giving any warning of it. (Cheers.)

After a few remarks from Mr. Casey, Mr. O'Brien, who seconded Mr. McCarthy's amendment, spoke strongly against the bill. He refuted the charge of treachery which was hurled against Mr. McCarthy and which might be applied to himself as seconder. (Hear, hear,) He knew what 'hear, hear,' meant, but he was only elected to support the government on their trade policy which he always did.

Mr. Masson followed in support of the bill. He saw nothing in the measure which called for his opposition.

Mr. Patterson (Brant) supported the amendment.

Mr. Bennet followed, speaking in favor of the bill, pointing out the manner in which Sir Oliver Mowat gerrymandered Ontario.

Dr. Weldon held that section 50 of the B. N. A. act applied the readjustment as between province and province, but did not refer to redistribution as far as the electoral boundaries were concerned. What he meant by readjustment was that the province of Nova Scotia or New Brunswick would have so many members in accordance to what they were entitled in ratio to the members in Quebec. He applied redistribution to the dividing up of that province into electoral districts, to which section 51 did not refer. He was free to confess that the redistribution of 1882 did very little credit to the parliament that passed it. But whether it was fair or not the result was that the liberal voters got their full representation in the house. The bill therefore did not do the work that it was expected. The wrong doers, if they were wrong doers, did not succeed on that occasion. It might be better to repeal the act of 1882, and go back to the old basis, but how could we do it. It might be heroic to pursue such a course as the amendment proposed, but it was not practical politics. By adhering to these constituencies as they exist today and providing some general way for the future redistribution, we put it out of the power of the evils which he referred to being again done. He resented the rebuke which had been given to Mr. McCarthy from the minister of railways and others. McCarthy was not deserving of the attack which had been made against him by the member for Cumberland and the minister of railways.

Mr. Davin followed in favor of the bill.

Mr. Flint moved the adjournment of debate, and the house adjourned at 12.45.

OTTAWA, June 8.—Mr. Flint resumed the debate on the Redistribution bill. He admitted that the proposed bill was a gerrymander as far as Nova Scotia was concerned. It was the principle of the bill which he objected to.

Mr. Hughes followed dealing at length with the manner in which Oliver Mowat gerrymandered Ontario, yet the reformers never condemned him for doing so. He showed that Mowat through his gerrymander bill had power in Ontario today, notwithstanding that he had a minority of over 5,000 in the province. The repentance speeches of Messrs. McCarthy and O'Brien reminded him of the utterances of reformed renegades in religion.

Mr. McMillan followed against the bill.

Dr. Sproule followed Mr. McMillan, showing that the latter was all out in his figures in regard to the standing of parties after the last general election. The unfairness of Mr. McMillan was manifest when he took the returns of the last general election and compared them with the present standing of the house without ever considering the by-elections.

Dr. McDonald supported the bill. He accused Hughes of being a reformer at one time and his having left the party because he was a disappointed office seeker. Hughes said that he left the reform party because they sold themselves to the Irish Catholics.

Mr. Coatesworth supported the bill, and Mr. Semple opposed it. Mr. Boyle moved the adjournment of the debate and the house adjourned at 12.20.

NOTES.—Sir John Thompson was presented this afternoon by the liberal conservative members of the house with a magnificent group picture of the ministerial party in the commons, at the close of his first year as leader of the house. Dr. Chas. Ferguson, the oldest liberal conservative member made the presentation. He highly eulogized Sir John for his ability, integrity and services to his country. Sir John made an eloquent reply. He said the present was totally unexpected, but he accepted it in the spirit in which it was offered, and would value it as containing the faces of men with whom he had stood shoulder to shoulder in the dark hours of adversity. He expressed himself as willing to accept any position which the liberal conservatives desired him to assume, whether in the ranks or elsewhere, and could promise them faithful service. Sir John's remarks were loudly applauded. The significance of the presentation is commented on, seeing that Ontario members constitute the majority of the subscribers.

Hon. Mr. Costigan entertained sixty of his friends to dinner in the house of commons restaurant this evening. The gathering was a most pleasant one. Hon. Mr. Costigan proposed the toast of the House of Commons, and called on Mr. Gilmor to respond. The latter made a witty reply. Hon. Mr. Bowell proposed the health of the host and referred to the pleasant intercourse between Hon. Mr. Costigan and himself in parliament for the last twenty-five years. Hon. Mr. Costigan made a feeling reply, and said that while not posing as the representative of the Irish Catholics in parliament, it could never be said of him that he had ever failed to assist a country-man when it was possible for him to do so.

OTTAWA, June 9.—In the house this afternoon a division was taken on the motion of Mr. Beausoleil to refer back to the committee on banking and commerce a bill which was thrown out for purpose of incorporating the National Mutual Loan and Banking society.

Hon. Mr. Foster and Sir John Thompson said that the bill was duly considered in committee and there would be no good in sending it back. The motion was lost by 53 for and 93 against

Sir John Thompson put his motion taking Mondays for government.

In reply to Mr. Laurier, Sir John said all measures were brought down except the supplementaries and railway subsidies. The motion was carried.

Mr. Boyle of Monck, resumed the debate on the redistribution bill. He agreed with the views of those who would give full representation to cities. He supported the bill and showed that the amendment was wholly impracticable. The bill wiped out his own constituency.

Mr. Bain of Wentworth, whose constituency also disappears by the bill, followed, speaking against it.

After recess the debate was continued by Messrs. Cockburn, McMillan (Huron), McNeill, Lister, Montague, Mackintosh and Edward Christie.

The house then divided on the motion. The amendment was lost by 62 for and 109 against. The only liberal conservatives who voted for the amendment were Col. O'Brien and Dalton McCarthy.

The house adjourned at 1.05 a. m.

OTTAWA, June 10.—The house devoted the whole day to the Criminal Law bill. They passed from section 407 to section 510, which was very good progress, adjourning at 10.50 p. m.

For the better protection of salmon and trout in P. E. I. killed by persons under a pretence of spearing eels from boats carrying torches, eel fishing from boats with torches is prohibited in any waters of the province frequented by salmon and trout during the months of October, November and December.

The regulations under which spirits, tobacco and cigars may be ex-warehoused free of excise duty for ships' stores on regular lines of oceanic steamers have just been approved.

Sir Leonard Tilley was warmly greeted by his old parliamentary friends. He had a long talk with Sir John Abbott to-night.

A report current to-day that Sir John Thompson would leave for England immediately in connection with the Behring Sea arbitration, turns out, on investigation, to be totally without foundation.

Sir Richard Cartwright gives notice to-night of thirty-one questions arising out of the Globe's trial by newspaper publication. He wants to know whether the government proposes to lay them before his excellency, whether Sir A. P. Caron has denied the accuracy of the documents, and whether an investigation will be granted.

NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE.

A large fish-drying house is being erected at Annapolis by Mr. Thomas Whitman, who has invented a novel and efficient process of drying fish artificially under cover, quite independent of the weather. Mr. Whitman expects to have his dryer in operation in July. This should give employment and encouragement to our fishermen.—'Weymouth Free Press.'

LAREDO, Texas, June 8—The drought on the lower Rio Grande border continues unbroken. The usually green range is as barren as Sahara and seed planted in the spring has not sprouted. In this particular region the losses of live stock will be ninety per cent. Great destitution exists among the Mexican population, which comprises three-fourths of the inhabitants of this region and but for the contributions forwarded from various points in Texas, and by the Red Cross Society, hundreds would have starved to death.

The number of Nova Scotia fishing vessels this year is greater than ever before. There are not so many on the Grand Banks, but many more in the Labrador and North Bay fisheries. Thirty-five vessels have been fitted out from Halifax for the Labrador coast Over forty sail have been added to the North Bay and Labrador fleet. The outlook is better.

Shediac harbor is to be restocked with oysters, and two English experts, Messrs. Kemp, are at Shediac looking about the place with a view of planting oysters there. These gentlemen who have had much experience in this business, seemed perfectly satisfied with the place and the chances of success. The oysters will be got at Buctouche and Bedeque, P. E. I. They will be planted under the supervision of Inspector Chipman and work will be begun at once.

A Moncton despatch says:—'Detective Skeffington of the Intercolonial is in trouble, and figures as the defendant in an assault case at the police court on Monday. It appears that he met on the street two boys named Beatty and Geo. McDowell, and stopping stared at them. McDowell said to Beatty: 'I wonder who he is after now.' This caused Skeffington to lose his temper and he knocked the boy down and severely maltreated him. The boy's father had Skeffington charged with assault before Stipendiary Wortman. The case naturally excites much interest in Intercolonial circles.
