8. He must live no longer to himself, but to his Master, and to his brethren.

9. He must remember the sacred duty of so living as to help others to live to God; and therefore he must watch over his personal habits and his use of time.

10. Recreation in this place is right, but only so far as it refreshes for work, and does not come between the soul and Christ.—From Mementos for Members of Ridley Hall, Cambridge.
