A MEDICAL REVOLUTION!

THE WORLD UNANIMOUS!

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT.

THE GREAT COUNTER IRRITANT!

The virus of disease often makes its way to the internal organs through the pores of the skin. This penetrating Ointment, melting under the hand as it is rubbed in, is absorbed through the same channels, and, reaching the seat of inflammation, promptly and invariably subdues it, whether located in the kidneys, the liver, the lungs, or any other important organ. It penetrates the surface to the interior, through the countless tubes that communicate with the skin as summer rain passes into the fevered earth diffusing its cool and regenerating influence.

SKIN DISEASES & GLANDULAR SWELLINGS.

Every species of exterior irritation is quickly reduced by the anti-inflammatory action of this Ointment. Angry ERUPTIONS, such as SALT RHEUM, ERYSIPELAS, TETTER, RINGWORM, SCALD HEAD, NETTLE RASH, SCABIES (or ITCH) &c., die out, to return no more under its application. Hospital experience in all parts of the world proves its infallibility in diseases of the skin, the muscles, the joints and the glands.

ULCERS, SORES, AND TUMORS.

The effect of this unrivaled external remedy upon Scrofula, and other virulent ulcers and sores, is almost miraculous. It first discharges the poison which produces suppuration and proud flesh, and thus the cures which its healing properties afterward complete are safe as well as permanent.

WOUNDS, BRUISES, BURNS, AND SCALDS.

In cases of the fracture of the bones, injuries caused by steam explosions, BRUISES, BURNS, SCALDS, RHEUMATISM, STIFFNESS OF THE JOINTS, and contraction of the sinews, it is employed and warmly recommended by the faculty. This marvellous remedy has been introduced by its inventor in person into all the leading Hospitals of Europe, and no private household should be without it.

UNDENIABLE TESTIMONY.

The Medical Staff of the French and English Armies in the Crimea have officially signed their approval of Holloway's Ointment, as the most reliable dressing for sabre cuts, stabs, and gun-shot wounds. It is also used by the surgeons of the Allied Navies.

Both the Ointment and Pills should be used in the following cases:

Recent Testimonial from a native Medical man in Bombay.

Agiari Lane, Native Town, Bombay, October 2nd, 1855.

Dear Sir,—I have great pleasure in informing you of the great good your excellent Cough Lozenges do in Pulmonary diseases.

I am a Medical Practitioner in Bombay, and am satisfied with their good effects, and would feel obliged by your sending me the wholesale price for a quantity.

I remain, Sir, yours, respectfully,

Recent Testimonial to the value of Keating's Cough Lozenges.

I cannot express what I suffered—coughing, expectorating, and the respiration impeded. Strange to say, I gradually recovered, without any treatment, except by taking a few boxes of Keating's Cough Lozenges. My lungs were so much affected, and the general health so debilitated, that I had but little hopes of recovery.

IRISH HEARTS.

AN INTERESTING AND TRUTHFUL SKETCH.

At this moment, when the sufferings of the Irish people engrosses so large a share of public sympathy, the following sketch from an Irish character may not be found uninteresting. To us it seems touching and truthful. The story teller prefaces the incident by stating that he found an Irish family—a husband, wife, and several children, on one of our Lake steamers. They were in great destitution; and the beauty of the children was the theme for the admiration of their fellow travellers. At the request of a lady passenger who having no children of her own, was desirous of taking one of the little Irishers and adopting it; the narrator addressed himself to the head of the family. We do not know the author of the sketch, and give it as we find it.—U. S. Gazette.

Although, says the story teller, I had considerable doubts to the results, I offered my services as negociator, and proceeded immediately upon my delicate diplomacy. Finding my friend on deck, I thus opened the affair:—

"You are very poor?"

His answer was characteristic—

"Poor, sir!" said he; "av, if there's a poorer man than me troublin' the world, God pity both of us, for we'd be about aiquil."

"Then how do you manage to support your children?"

"Is it support them, sir?" Why, I don't support them any way; they get supported some way or another. It'll be time enough for me to complain when they do."

"Would it be a relief to you to part with one of them?"

It was too sudden; he turned sharply round.

"A what, sir!" he cried; "a relief to part from my child? Would it be a relief to have the hands chopped from the body, or the heart torn out of my breast? A relief indeed? God be good to us, what do you mane?"

"You don't understand me," I replied; "if now, it were in one's power to provide comfortably for one of your children, would you stand in the way of its interest?"

"No, sir," said he; "the heavens knows that I would willingly cut the sunshine away from myself, that they might get all the warm of it, but do tell us what you're driving at?"

I then told him that a lady had taken a fancy to have one of his children; and, if he would consent to it, it should be educated and finally settled comfortably in life.

This threw him into a fit of gratulation. He scratched his head, and looked the very picture of bewilderment. The struggle between a father's love and a child's interest was evident and touching, at length he said:—

"O, murther, wouldn't it be a great thing for the baby? But I must go and talk with Mary—that's the mother of them; an' it wouldn't be right to be giving away her children at ... her face, and she to know nothing at all about it."

"Away with you then," said I, "and bring me an answer back as soon as possible."

In about half an hour he returned, leading two of his children. His eyes were red and swollen, and his face pale from excitement and agitation.

"Well," I enquired, "what success?"

"Bedad, it was a hard struggle, sir," said he. "But I've been talking to Mary, an' she says, as it's for the child's good, maybe the heavens above will give us strength to bear it."

"Very well, and which of them is it to be?"

"Faix, and I don't know, sir," and he ran his eye dubiously over both. "Here's little Norah—she's the oldest, an' won't need her mother so much—but then—O! tear and aigers—it's meself that can't tell which I'd rather part with, so take the first that comes, wid a blessin'. There, sir," and he handed over little Norah—but back he snatched her up in his arms, and gave her one long, hearty father's kiss, saying through his tears:

"May God be good to him that's good to you, an' them that offers you hurt or harm, may they never see St. Pether."

Then taking his other child by the hand, he walked away, leaving Norah with me.

I took her down in the cabin, and we thought the matter settled. It must be confessed, to my great indignation, however, in about an hour's time I saw my friend Pat at the window. As soon as he caught my eye he commenced making signs for me to come out. I did so—and found that he had the other child in his arms.

"What's the matter now?" asked I.

"Well, sir," said he, "I ax your pardon for troubling you about so foolish a thing as a child or two, but we were thinkin' that maybe it'd make no difference—you see, sir, I've been talking to Mary, an' she says she can't part with Norah, because the creature has a look ov me; but here's little Biddy, she's purtyer far, an' av you please, sir, will you swap?"

"Certainly," said I, "whenever you like."

So he snapped up little Norah, as though it were some recovered treasure and darted away with her, leaving little Biddy, who remained with with us all night; but lo! the moment when we entered the cabin in the morning, there was Pat making his mysterious signs again at the window, and this time he had the youngest, a baby in his arms.

"What's wrong now?" I enquired.

"Be the hokey fly, sir, an' it's meself that's almost ashamed to tell you. You see I've been takin' to Mary, and she didn't like to part with Norah, because she's the model of her mother, but there's little Paudeen, sir. There's a lump of Christian for you, two years old, and not a day more—he'll never be any trouble to any one, for av he takes after his mother, he'll have the brightest eye, an' av he takes after his father, he'll have a fine broad pair of shoulders to push his way through the world. Will you swap again, sir?"

"With all my heart," said I, "it's all the same to me;" and so little Paudeen was left with me.

"Ah, hah," said I to myself, as I looked into his big, laughing eyes, "the affair is settled at last."

But it wasn't, for ten minutes had scarcely elapsed, when Pat rushed into the cabin without sign or ceremony, and snatching up the baby in his arms, cried out—

"It's no use, I've been talkin' to Mary, an' we can't do it. Look at him, sir; he's the youngest and best of the batch. You wouldn't keep him from us. You see, sir, Norah has a look ov me, an' Biddy has a look of of Mary; but be me sowl, little Paudeen has the mother's eye, an' my nose, an' a little of both of us, all over! No, sir, we can bear hard fortune, starvation, and misery, but we can't bear to part from our children, unless it be the will of Heaven to take them from us."
