—The Fancy Dress Skating Carnival at the Bridgetown Skating Rink, held on Wednesday night 9th inst., was a gratifying success to all concerned. The attendance was large—fully equal to the capacity of the building. About 35 skaters in all appeared on the ice. The costumes of a number of the lady skaters were very pretty and tasteful, —the gentlemen also made a good appearance—a number of the latter appeared in comical costumes—"Good-Night" rather "taking the cake" as the boys say. The best of order was maintained throughout. Below we give the names of the skaters and their costumes:—

'Remember dat a lawyer will work harder to cl'ar a murderer dan he will to convict a thief.

'Remember dat a nabur who offers ye loan of his hoe am fishin' around to secure de loan of your wheelbarrer.

'Remember dat you can't judge of de home happiness of a man an' wife by seein' 'em at a Sunday skule picnic.

'Remember dat while de average man will return the k'rect change in a business transaction, he'll water his milk an' mix beans wid his coffee.

'Remember dat all de negatives of de best photographs am retouched, an' de wrinkles an' freckles worked out.

'Remember dat society am made up of good clothes, hungry stomachs, deception, heartaches an' mixed grammer.

'Remember dat people will nebber stop to question de truf of any rumor or scandal affectin' your character, but it takes years to satisfy 'em dat your great-grandfadder wasn't a pirate an' your grandmudder de leadin' gal in a 15-cent ballet. You kin now sot down and close your eyes an' reflect an digest, an' de rest of us purceed to carry on de usual programme of the meetin'.'

—The perpetual clock, which, has been running in Brussels for a year without stopping or being touched by human hands, is wound up by a draught of air through a tube which operates on a fan connected with the machinery. The draught is made to pass upward through the tube by exposing it to the heat of the sun.

—At a microscopic exhibition in Boston the sting of a honey bee was shown upon the screen, and it was so sharp that the point could not be seen. A fine sewing needle was shown at the same time, and the point with the same power of the microscope was five inches across. 'God can make a fine point,' said the exhibitor, 'but man cannot.'

DAILY HABITS.—Always eat your food slowly, masticate well, sit down to your meal in good humor, as you go to bed, smiling and peaceful. Keep good-natured, and never indulge in anger. This is the way to insure digestion, sound sleep and long life.

—When Oscar Wilde saw Niagara Falls he exclaimed: 'Bulk, but no beauty.' When a little Detroit boy first saw the sublime cataract he solemnly whispered: 'Mamma, I feel like taking off my hat to God.' That is the difference between embryo idiocy and embryo manhood.

PURE BRED ESSEX HOGS!
THE subscriber imported in 1882, a number of Pure Bred Essex Hogs from the United States, and in crossing them with other breeds, have proved them excellent. Read what is said of them by a large breeder in New York:—
"The Essex and their grades are admirably adapted to our climate and circumstances.
"The Essex are the quietest hogs in the world.
"They are the easiest keepers in the world.
"They are the best grazers in the world.
"The Essex have less bone and offal in proportion to their size and weight than any other breed."
I have no hesitation in recommending them to the public, and believe the above to be true.

Death.

A Philadelphia physician has made a special study of the phenomenon of death, both through his personal observations and those of others, and his conclusion is that the dissolution is painless. 'I mean,' he explains, 'that it approaches as unconsciously as sleep. The soul leaves the world as painless as it enters it. Whatever be the cause of death, whether by lingering malady or sudden violence, dissolution comes either through syncope or asphyxia. In the latter case, when resulting from disease, the struggle is long protected, and accompanied by all the visible marks of agony, which the imagination associates with the closing scene of life. Death does not strike all the organs of the body at the same time, and the lungs are the last to give up the performance of their functions. As death approaches the latter become more and more oppressed; hence the rattle. Nor is the contrast sufficiently perfect to change the black venous into the red arterial blood; an unprepared fluid consequently issues from the lungs into the heart, and is thence transmitted to every other organ of the body. The brain receives it, and the energies appear to be lulled thereby into sleep—generally tranquil sleep—filled with dreams which impel the dying to murmur out the names of friends and the occupations and recollections of past life.

—The 'disastrous effects of sobriety' are pointed out by a writer in 'Macmillan's Magazine.' England raises 43 per cent. of her revenue from strong drink. That source of revenue is now seriously threatened. It shows no elasticity, but rather a tendency to decline. When everybody is sober and total abstinent what will become of the 43 per cent? From a fiscal point of view the problem of 'sobriety' seems a serious one; but there is really no cause for alarm. The men who cease to spend their money in poisoning themselves will expend their money in purchasing useful clothing and nourishing food for themselves and their family. To the tax payers, Total Abstinence would bring immense relief. Only if this relief were to come more quickly! It will, like all reforms, be individual work; slow work, taxing the patience of the saints. God's day is a thousand years; He is patient; He has millenniums in which to work out His purpose, but our day is brief and we must use the moments as they fly in order that we may accomplish something good. Make one man sober, if you cannot stop the whole rum traffic; raise a sober family; convert one drunkard; stir the zeal of some one else. Do your little best, and the effect will contribute to the coming millennium.—Presbyterian Witness,

HOW TO TELL DIPHTHERIA.—'I was called out of bed past midnight to go four miles in the country and attend what the messenger stated was a bad case of diphtheria.' 'And you went?' 'Had to. When I arrived I found a ten-year-old girl crying with a sore throat. I looked into it, asked the girl a few questions and found that she had done a big washing that day. Had a little cold—nothing else.' How can you tell the difference?' 'I'll give you a rule by which you can always determine,' was the response. 'If the throat is red and smaller, no fear of diphtheria; but if it looks as some one had thrown a handful of ashes into the throat—a dull gray color—look out. It's diphtheria's danger signal.'

BEEF TEA AND MILK.—Physicians who used to prescibe bromide or soda or potassum for sleeplessness now urge their patients to take beef tea instead, says the Christian Union. The writer, trying various prescriptions with little benefit, was at length so fortunate as to receive such advice. At first beef tea was used with some light bread or biscuit broken in it, sipped from a spoon as warm as it could be taken. Afterwards milk, just scalded, not boiled, was substituted and, to make it more easy of digestion, a teaspoonful of lime water was added to half a tumbler of milk. To facilitate matters, a pocket stove with an alcoholic lamp, or an arrangement for the gas fixtures, should be at hand. If neither beef tea or milk can be easily procured, hot water alone with an infusion of hops or mint may be submitted or even hot water alone will quiet restlessness and induce sleep. A darkened room that moonbeams cannot enter, a little fresh air from an open fireplace or window, are valuable assistants in making sleep continuous. When once the habit of wakefulness is broken up, the beef tea or milk may be taken cold, but not iced. If you are a poor sleeper, it will be well to continue this late supper as a permanent thing in your daily life.

THE STUPID BOY.—Never set down a boy as stupid because he does not make headway at school. Many of the most celebrated men that have ever lived have been set down by conventional pedagogues as donkeys. One of the greatest astronomers of the age was restored to his father by the village schoolmaster with the words, 'There's no use paying good money for his education. All he wants to do is to lie on the grass on his back and stare at the sky. I'm afraid his mind is wrong.' Scientific men have been flogged for falling into brown studies over their books, and many an artist of the future has come to present grief for drawing all over his copy-book, and surreptitiously painting the pictures of his geography. Your genius, unless musical, seldom proves himself one in his childhood; and your smart and self-sufficient piece of precosity, who takes all the medals, and is the show scholar of the school, often ends by showing no talent for anything beyond a yard stick. Sir Walter Scott was called stupid as a child, and it was not even considered at all to his credit that he was fond of 'sick trash' as ballads, and could learn them by heart at any time. The boy who really worries you by being so unlike his bright brothers may be the very one who will make you proud and happy some years hence. Take that for your comfort.

Mrs. Topnoody Tell Him.

Mr. and Mrs. Topnoody sat by the fire the other evening talking over the events of the day. Finally Mrs. T. remarked:

'By the way, Topnoody, did you stop for that umbrella Mrs. Jackson borrowed Sunday?'

'No, my dear, I forgot it.'

'Did you? Well, did you forget to order the coal?'

'Ahem, my dear, you must excuse me this time, but I did overlook it.'

'Of course, and did you get those buttons I wanted, and did you tell the man to come up to morrow and fix the gas meter, and did you see the grocery man about that strong butter you brought home yesterday, and did you ask Mr. Johnson about the kitchen stove and did you get the tickets for the concert to-morrow night?'

'My dear, really now, I've been so busy that I—'

'Don't go to palavering, Topnoody. I never saw such a man in my life as you as you as you are. You don't pay a particle of attention to anything I say to you, and you are worrying my life out by inches.' Then she relapsed into silence and gazed earnestly at the fire. At last Topnoody ventured to say;

'My dear, let us overlook each other's faults. Let us bear and forebear. Tell me what you are thinking about, my dear?'

'You want to know, do you? Well I was just thinking, Topnoody, if all the men in the world had been Topnoodys, and all women knew as much as I do now, that the Lord might run a fine tooth comb up and down every meridian between Dan and Beersheba, and along every line of latitude from the cradle to the grave, seven days in the week, and not find married people enough for a census return. It's a mighty fortunate thing, in some respects, Topnoody, that we didn't find out we are fools until it is everlastingly too late. That's what I'm thinking about.'

Topnoody didn't pursue his inquiries further.—Merchant Traveller.
