BARNEY KING'S MOVEMENTS.

THE NAPANEE MURDER SUSPECT TELLS HIS STORY.

He Details His Journeyings as a Tramp Tailor in Search of Work From the Time He Left Davis Bros.', Prescott, Until His Arrival Home at Napanee on New Year's Eve.

NAPANEE, Jan. 14.—Barney King, or more properly speaking Bernaby Roi, now confined in the Napanee Jail charged with the murder of Angus McLeod at Napanee on Sept. 14 last, has authorized his solicitors, Messrs. Herrington & Warner, to make public the following statement in order that his friends may have an opportunity of verifying his account of his whereabouts at the time of the murder.

I am of French descent and my people live at St. Valier, Que. I am a journeyman coat maker and during the month of August last was in the employ of Davis & Bro., Prescott, and boarded at the Queen's Hotel. On Monday, Sept. 4, I drew my wages from Davis & Bro. and went to Ogdensburg and spent the day, returning to Prescott at night. The next day I spent in Prescott, chiefly at Daniels' Hotel. On Wednesday, Sept. 6, I went by freight train to Brockville and from there telephoned Livingston of Kingston for work.

Pawned a Ring in Kingston.

I arrived in Kingston that evening about dark and stopped all night with Mr. Pelletier. On Thursday I engaged with Mr. Prevost at $9 a week, but did not go to keep this engagement as I hoped to do better. I pawned a ring in Princess-street with a broker whose name I think is Taylor. I proceeded to Napanee, where I arrived about 4 or 5 p.m. and went down town. I saw Mr. McAllister on the street and also Mr. Hogen, and about 6 o'clock telephoned to the Big Store, Deseronto, for work. I went west on a freight train about 8 o'clock and stopped off at Belleville. During the evening I was drinking with the bartender and a Jew at Doctor's Hotel. I was detained by a policeman at the depot until the arrival of a World's Fair train, which passed through Belleville about 3 or 4 o'clock in the morning (Sept. 8). By this train I went to Port Hope, where I arrived early in the morning.

Came to Toronto During the Exhibition.

I applied at several shops for work and had dinner with a tailor whose place of business is opposite Clark's. I do not remember his name, but he is a dark complexioned man and has a stout wife. During the afternoon I traveled to Toronto in a freight car in company with a man in charge of stock for the Toronto Exhibition. That night (Sept. 8) I slept at a lodging house in York-street, Toronto, kept by Edward Nuttall.

Saturday morning I saw an advertisement in the paper for a tailor at a village about 28 miles from Toronto. I cannot recall the name of the place, but from an examination of a railway map I think it is Norval. In order to get there I walked to Parkdale and took the train. The situation had been secured by another applicant, but the tailor, whose name I forget, gave me a coat to make, and sent me to an hotel to remain over Sunday. I think it is the only hotel in the place.

Beat His Way to London.

While there I fell in with a young tailor whose name I think is James Hickerman, and on Monday, Sept. 11, we set out together and walked to the next station and beat our way on the train to London, stopping at one large town on the way, where we applied for work, but failed to secure any. We arrived in London about noon on Tuesday, Sept. 12, where we also applied for work and I left my name with several tailors. That night we slept in a freight car near the station, and the next morning, Sept. 13, we went west to Wyoming, from Wyoming on foot to Petrolia and back again to Wyoming, and from there by foot to Port Huron.

We passed through the tunnel about 6 and about 9 caught a train for Detroit. The next morning (Sept. 14) we woke up in the Detroit freight yards and walked to the city. We spent that day in the city looking for work. Among other places visited by me in Detroit I remember breakfasting at the corner of Randolph and Catalac Square. I applied at several shops in Michigan-avenue and left my name with a firm of merchants in Jefferson-avenue; the junior member of the firm was named Spec. They have since been burned out, I believe. They advised me to go to Jackson. That night we slept in a box car at the freight yards of the Milwaukee and Grand Haven R.R.

Worked in Pontiac, Mich.

The following morning I breakfasted at the same place as the morning previous; got shaved next door at a colored barber's and again looked for work and left in the evening (Sept. 15) for Pontiac, Mich., where I secured work with James McKeand. I remained over night with the operator at the station, and in the morning went to board with a Mrs. Smith, where I remained a week. There are dozens of people in Pontiac who can identify me.

I have made no secret of my whereabouts, as I had no occasion to do so. I arrived back in Napanee on New Year's eve, when I was greatly surprised to learn that I was suspected of having some knowledge of the murder of Mr. McLeod. Why my name should be associated with this dreadful crime I cannot understand. I would thank the people whom I met on my trip from Prescott to Pontiac, and whose names I do not know, if they would communicate with my solicitors at once."

Richard Caddick's Funeral.

With all the honor that his life had won, the body of Richard Caddick was laid to rest on Saturday afternoon. The funeral procession was one of the largest the city has accorded to a private individual. The Sons of England, of which body Mr. Caddick was Past Supreme President, turned out in force.

It was shortly after half past two when, headed by the Veteran's Band playing a solemn dead march, the cortege moved from the family residence at 206 Robert-street. Following the band were the boys of the naval brigade of the Sons of England, of which body Mr. Caddick was High Admiral. The representatives of the 34 city lodges in imposing line were next. Then came Kent Lodge, of which the deceased was a member. Grand Marshal Fred Herbert and the District Deputy and Grand Lodge officers preceded the carriage containing the pallbearers. They were, Dr. J. S. King, Dr. S. B. Pollard, A. J. Mills, George F. Carrette, J. C. Swait, R. Irvene and T. R. Skippon. The mourners carriages and private carriages stretched out in the rear.

At the grave in Mount Pleasant the impressive burial service of the Sons of England ritual was conducted by Supreme President, Thomas Elliott (of Brantford) and the Rev. W. H. Clarke. All the arrangements showed great care on the part of W. H. Stone, who had them in charge.

is very instructive, and it must be also exasperating to one who is a creditor, d the statements of two printing shments recently failed. HONORED THE HEROES OF INTELLEC

The Portraits and Busts of William Hume Blake, Prof. Croft, Bishop Strachan and George Paxton Young Unveiled.

It was an auspicious occasion that of the unveiling of the portraits of William Hume Blake, sometime Chancellor of Toronto University; the Right Rev. John Strachan, first president of King's College, the late Professor Croft, once professor of chemistry and natural science; of the bust and portrait of late Professor Young, professor in metaphysics and ethics, at the Toronto University library on Saturday afternoon.

The library reading hall was crowded with a number of the most distinguished of the University's graduates and friends, who had assembled to honor the dead heroes of mind and cultivated intellect. The Hon. Edward Blake, M. P., was in the chair, and around him were Lieut.-Governor Kirkpatrick, His Lordship, the Bishop of Toronto, President Loudon and Rev. Principal Burwash of Victoria. Mrs. Kirkpatrick also arrived.

Among the others present were: Professors Hutton, Alexander, Fraser, McCurdy, Dale, Ramsay Wright, Baker, Mavor, Coleman, Cameron, Wrong, A. B. McCallum, Hume, Vander Smissen, Squair; Rev. Drs. Sheraton, McLaren, Greig, Dewart, D. J. Macdonnell, R. Y. Thompson, G. M. Milligan, Cede, Justice Proudfoot, Dr. I. H. Cameron, W. F. Maclean, M. P., John King, John Henderson, Wm. Houston, Dr. Primrose, Geo. Eakin, J. K. Kerr, J. G. Hodgins, W. J. Robertson, Jas. Brebner, Capt. Kirkpatrick, Hamilton MacCarthy, Dickson Patterson, Robert Somerville, John I. Davidson, Wm. Boultbee and others.

President Loudon requested the Lieut.-Governor, as visitor of the Provincial University, to accept the portrait of the late William Hume Blake. He, in a brief address, gave a short summary of the biography of the man who, he said, had aided more perhaps than any one other in the development of the provincial institution when it was in greatest need of assistance. The President held in his hand and read an extract from an appeal which the chancellor has made for aid in 1856 and which resulted in the university receiving £75,000 for the construction of a new university and £20,000 for the benefit of the new library and museum. The President spoke of the work which that chancellor's son had done for the further development of the provincial educational institution and mentioned that the persistence of the father must have been inherited by the son. Little Miss Wrong, daughter of Rev. Prof. Wrong, and great granddaughter of the late Chancellor himself, unveiled the portrait.

The Lieut.-Governor, as a visitor of the University and in behalf of the Provincial Government, thanked the University officials for these portraits, which he believed to be but the beginning of a series of other portraits of eminent men, distinguished for intellect and for advancing the cause of learning. The Lieut.-Governor further praised the abilities of the man whose portrait had been unveiled.

Prof. Hutton then presented the portraits of the Rt. Rev. John Strachan and the late Prof. Croft, which have been in the residence dining hall for some years, but which had never been formally presented to the authorities. The pictures of these eminent personages will not grace the walls of the library, but will be returned to Residence directly. Prof. Hutton spoke of the intellectual hero "who had builded better than he knew" in establishing two universities and not one, both of which have one common end in the teaching of the religion of true learning.

The memory of Prof. Croft was also treated very flatteringly by the classical professor.

Mr. W. F. Maclean, on behalf of Mr. W. A. Shortt, now of New York, and his friend and classmate of 1880, asked the Chancellor to accept the portrait of the late George Paxton Young which he had the pleasure to unveil. It was the work of Mr. Shortt's own hand, and excellent and good as it was as a portrait it was still more excellent as being the tribute of a loving scholar to the memory of a loving master. Dr. Young needed no eulogy on this occasion. His influence pervaded these walls and animated the lives of all his students. He was revered by the latter, because he taught first of all that philosophy was free, next that when we came to hold opinions we should hold them with the greatest humility, and third, that beyond the region of philosophy and logic there was a large domain in which faith was supreme. It was a satisfaction to him, and to all the admirers of Prof. Young, to know that those departments of learning which he taught and practiced, namely, philosophy, mathematics and logic, and they were the highest of all studies, could be taught and cultivated for the least amount of money, while the new and modern studies of physics and natural sciences required an ever-increasing revenue; and it was a still greater source of satisfaction to them all that Canadian youth had the brains and courage to follow these departments into their higher flights.

Mr. John A. Patterson followed and unveiled the bust of the late Professor, the work of Hamilton MacCarthy. He gave a history of the memorial fund, which was divided between this token and a scholarship which had been established in Toronto University. He gave an eloquent resume of Dr. Young's life.

Rev. Chancellor Burwash spoke of the many sides of the late professor's intellect. He said if Toronto had not secured him for its professor in philosophy, Victoria would have had him for mathematics.

W. J. Robertson, St. Catharines, spoke as an old student. Rev. Prof. R. Y. Thompson of Knox College told of the reverence the Presbyterian college had for that philosopher who once had been a professor with them. He said, too, that Knox was taking steps for the perpetuation of the philosopher's memory by establishing a similar memorial. Rev. D. J. Macdonnell also spoke briefly.

Hon. Edward Blake delivered the closing address, and in eloquent words he spoke of the works of the men of whom every one had been speaking. In this democratic age, he said, there was a kind of heredity which was honored and reverenced, for the son of a man who has achieved respect from the good deeds he has done for the people is well received and honored. "I noticed that when this governor entered public life first he was better received in the constituency which he contested because he was the son of his father. I myself well remember the anxiety and care my father had when he occupied the position of Chancellor of the University." Prof. Croft was remembered and praised for the good deeds he had done and the genial nature he possessed." The Rev. John Strachan, though all did not agree with him in everything he would do, honored him for what he did do. Prof. Young, too, was spoken of favorably.

The Chancellor then spoke of the subject of memorials. He had always discouraged the establishing of portraits and busts in favor of the more substantial scholarship. He had favored the latter, and in this respect he spoke of the substantial memorial which the friends of the late Alexander Mackenzie had erected by raising an endowment of $16,000, which yielded an annual sum for scholarships in political science close on to $1000.

Mr. Blake spoke in glowing terms of the late Alexander Mackenzie's and George Brown's interest in Toronto University. George Brown himself had said once: "I would rather be Chancellor of Toronto University than hold any other position if I were a graduate." Mr. Blake said he would give every support to a movement to perpetuate the names of these men by placing memorials in the Hall of the University if such a movement were organized. The portraits of the late Dr. McCaul and Daniel Wilson will be added soon to the two already placed in the Library hall.

Parmelee's Pills possess the power of acting specifically upon the diseased organs, stimulating to action the dormant energies of the system, thereby removing disease. In fact, so great is the power of this medicine to cleanse and purify that diseases of almost every name and nature are driven from the body. Mr. D. Carswell, Carswell P.O., Ont., writes: "I have tried Parmelee's Pills and find them an excellent medicine and one that will sell well."

Mimico School Election.

Great interest was evinced in the Mimico school elections on Saturday, the vote being the largest polled in recent years. Mr. W.H. Adamson defeated his opponent, Mr. John Clark, by a majority of 23 votes.

MANNING ARCADE.

Tips From Wall-street.

It is said a plan of reorganization for Union Pacific has been agreed upon. The Government will be asked to take 2 per cent. bonds for its indebtedness.

Ryan & Co.'s advices: Bull points are out on New England. General Manager Morrill of the St. Louis and San Francisco has gone to New York to urge the separation of that road from Atchison. The dividend on 4000 shares of C.B. & Q. sold in Boston at 1 per cent. Wormser bought Union Pacific. The market was fed to shorts all day. The bulls argue that if a startling bullish Government report, heavy exports and light receipts cannot sustain prices there is no use looking for an advance until stocks here are materially reduced or the visible has had six or eight millions sliced off. Instead of a world's shortage Beerbohm is now estimating an overplus of 25 million bushels. Reports from maturing crops in Australia and South America are very favorable, so are advices from India, and the discouraged bulls see little encouragement whatever way he turns. It looks as if wheat would sink to a lower level than it has yet touched for May. Corn and oats weakened by decline in wheat, but the big shorts are not yet able to cover on as low a basis as they would like, and it does not look as if they would soon get the desired opportunity. Provisions opened weaker in sympathy with stock-yard advices, but there were large buying orders from Swift and Robson & Ryan, which absorbed the offerings and rallied prices moderately, a good many traders think provisions too high; but they are not doing much speculatively to cheapen them.
