An Attractive Field.

To the investor, whether he be interested in manufacturing, mining or agriculture, these provinces offer a most attractive, and what is more, an eminently safe field for his enterprise. Emigrants instead of hurrying westward will learn of the nearer and equally remunerative opportunity for employment, where living is cheaper and the climate less vigorous.

In both respects, therefore,—labor and capital—the Maritime Provinces are justified in looking to the future with confidence and hope.

The question is a delicate one and is vested with peculiar interest in view of the fact that a large part of the land on the Mexican side of the border in that vicinity is owned by Americans or American companies.

BLONDES FARE WORSE THAN BRUNETTES

U. S. Medical Corps Experiments Show Those of Fair Complexion More Susceptible to Alcoholic Stimulents

Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—After two years of careful and thorough investigation the medical corps of the United States army has succeeded in demonstrating that in one respect at least brunettes enjoy a decided advantage over blonds, regardless of age or nationality. This is in their ability successfully to resist the ill effects of alcoholic stimulants.

Observations on enlisted men in the Philippine scouts, Philippine constabulary and Manila police force, show that the ability to withstand tropical climate and other hardships is about evenly divided, and thousands of observations along other lines show that in vitality, muscular strength, intellect and the like it is about six of one and half a dozen of the other. But in the effect of alcohol on the system, the blonds have gone down woefully to defeat and the brunette have demonstrated conclusively a marked superiority.

The medical officers first declared that the use of alcohol was more common among blonds than brunettes, and gave this as one of the distinguishing features of their comparative tests. But the brunettes apparently objected to this interpretation and gave data to prove that the difference was not in the amount consumed, but in the ability to withstand consumption. This did not mean that there were more than a few enlisted men who indulged to excess, but simply showed that even with moderate consumption the temperature, pulse, respiration, mental exhilaration and other stimulating symptoms of the blonds were more easily affected than the brunettes, many of whom showed no trace of disturbed nerves at all.

All my life I have heard the preachers speak about the dead, but they don't agree where they are. Now I am going to hear what his lawyer has to say about it. He must have something good to tell us or he would not come here and lecture free.

D. 1855, the said plan being on file in the office of the Common Clerk of the City of St. John, going thence Northwestwardly in a direction at right angles to the said Street Thirty (30) feet or to the western side line of Nelson street.
