Over Work or Worry Prematurely Breaks Down Women.
For "worn-out," "run-down," debilitated school teachers, milliners, seamstresses, house-keepers, and women generally, whose duties keep them on their feet from morning to night, Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is the best of all strengthening cordials. It promptly cures dyspepsia, indigestion, nervous prostration, exhaustion, and all female weaknesses and irregularities. It imparts vigor and strength to the whole system. It promptly cures weakness of stomach, indigestion, bloating, weak back, nervous prostration, debility, sleeplessness, nervous irritation, and all female weaknesses. It is a marvelous restorative, and a most powerful, yet perfectly safe, stimulant to the female system. It contains no alcohol, nor does it injure the most delicate organization. A large treatise on Diseases of Women, profusely illustrated with colored plates, and numerous illustrations, sent for 10 cents in stamps. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.
SICK HEADACHE, Bilious Headache, and Constipation, promptly cured by Dr. Pierce's Pellets. One a dose. 25 cts. by druggists.

HERE AND THERE.

Some Facts, and a Few Other Good Things.

Ten dozen league balls a day per man is the rate at which they are made.

After all it may turn out that there are only two kinds of honest butter—Canadian butter and the goat.

Almost anybody can take a compliment when it is thrown at him, but not everybody knows how to wear it after he gets it.

It has been decided by a Brooklyn church that playing cards isn't wicked, and two-thirds of the congregation have quit using them.

A certain sort of tobacco blindness is on the increase. The victim is so affected that he can't see that he is puffing smoke right into the face of the person nearest him.

A Philadelphia physician, who has little respect for the code of ethics among his professional brethren, bluntly asserts that much of the so-called malaria is pure laziness and heart disease nothing worse than indigestion.

The terrible floundering of Miss Cleveland's novel when it gets to the love passages, remarks The Boston Advertiser, teaches anew the lesson that love is a very perilous thing to monkey with, for those who don't know anything about it.

In England the population doubles in fifty years; in the United States, Canada and Australia in twenty-five years; in Germany, 105 years, and in France and in countries using the French language, 140 years.

One excuse for the exorbitant prices charged at many summer resorts is the shortness of the season. It seems that each year the season is becoming shorter and now includes only the last part of July and August. One hotelkeeper at a seashore resort, it is said, took thirty servants to his hotel in the beginning of last summer and did not receive a guest until the first of August, and, as a consequence, the visitors were taxed for a month's failure.

Some time ago a meek and harmless citizen had a virago for a wife. Being asked how he was able to live with her, he answered:—"I have no trouble. When she says 'yes' I say yes. When she says it is cold, I says 'yes, mother, it is cold.' Often she woke me up in dark and stormy nights and would say, 'Just see how bright the moon and stars are.' I always said, 'yes.' She would then turn over perfectly satisfied, go to sleep, and be happy." Many a husband can learn a lesson from this example.

The latest invention of comfort for tourists is a new travelling cap made with an air cushion in the back. Ordinarily it is just like any other travelling cap, but when you want to rest your head on the seat back, and don't want all the hair on the back of your head rubbed off, all you have to do is to put your mouth down to the opening, blow up the little bag, and put in a cork. Then you put your cap on your head, and there you are with as nice a cushion as a man could ask for. It is the invention of a train-boy.

Some time ago a teacher in charge of a school in a West Georgia county was approached by a pupil and requested to explain the meaning of "49 B C." The teacher read the sentence in which the hieroglyphics occurred, and observed that it referred to an incident that had taken place in a remote period. "Ahem!" he said, "them figgers an' them letters is frequently found in history books. You see, a long time ago folks didn's know's much's we do, and they sorter guessed at dates. Now, 49 B C means 49 'bout correct."

Henry Watterson, in one of his editorial letters to the Courier-Journal, says: I do not speak without advisement, for I have had plenty of experience of London society these twenty years, and with no private pique or feeling. But the more I see of England and the English the more I am persuaded of the irreconcilable difference between us and them, and the more odious seem to me the affectation and imitation of Anglicism by the American, who, having got a glimpse of the nobility, would straightway get himself a coat-of-arms.

Not since the lady dropped her glove to prove his love and he leaped among the lions wild and recovered it has a nasser task been set for a lover than that laid out for a young man in Carondelet, whose sweetheart requested him to drown three large and vicious family dogs. He enticed the brute to a precipice overlanging the river and tied a chunk of iron about his neck. A desperate struggle ensued, and at its close the dog trotted home with the iron. A few hours later the young man's body was recovered from the river, and a lynching party started in hot pursuit of the family dog.

WOMAN'S WORLD.

Some Fashions that are Still Approved.

Flower bonnets are still extensively worn. Clusters of bright red pepper-pods are seen upon gay bonnets fresh from Paris.

Broad white ties of mull or French lawn, daintily embroidered on the ends, are again very fashionable for neckwear.

Black lace mitts coming far up on the arm, and terminating in scalloped tops in open-work meshes, are run through with narrow colored velvet ribbon.

The newest Parisian sleeves are cut from one piece, so as to fit quite snugly, but half as long again as the arm. They are gathered at the seam, which is arranged well underneath so that they will wrinkle on the arm like a long glove of Suede kid.

The first opera written by a woman was produced on the 14th at the novelty theatre in London, Eng. The title is "Florian," and it is the work of a Miss Ida Walter.

A boating costume, recently made, is of light woollen material in the new shade of gray. It is made with a blouse bodice, finished with red sailor collar and cuffs to correspond; the trimming down the front of the bodice being feather-stitching in red silk. The skirt is full, and simply draped. A Tam o' Shanter cap, the shade of the red, is intended to be worn with this dress.

Vests of white corduroy, buttoned with pearl buttons, are worn with indigo blue costumes.

Gloves of pean de suede have the arms from the wrist upwards of guipure lace corresponding in tint to the kid.

Young girls' dresses of nun's veiling have "accessories" of rich-looking silk, with fluted or corrugated surface. This silk is to be had in all the fashionable colors.

The Pall Mall Gazette tells this story of an eminent physician and Mary Anderson. Mary was playing Juliet, and the performance delighted the distinguished doctor until toward the conclusion of the play, when his countenance became sicklied o'er with the pale cast of thought, and he seemed disturbed. When it was over he went up to the actress. "My dear young lady," he said, "you are wrong in one of your effects. Don't you know that a corpse doesn't stiffen for at least six hours after death?" "My dear doctor!" responded Mary, in her deep rich baritone, "do you think I'm going to keep my audience waiting for six hours while I stiffen?"

In buying a baby carriage don't select the brightest colors you can find for the screen that is interposed between the eyes of the child and the sun, if you would begin at the beginning to defend your baby from that modern curse ophthalmia. He lies on his back, of course, and kicks, and crows, and stares delightfully up at the bright shield above. There can be no reasonable doubt that injury must result from such thoughtless exposure. The darker, denser coverings, while not so attractive either to the baby or his mamma, are safer and more soothing.

The card is the epitome of civilization. A lady's visiting card is representative, and implies far more than the mere data of name and residence. Giving you her card, a lady gives with it her social recognition, her good-will, her remembrance, the entree to her house. The card being thus representative should stand for more than it often does. A card is a call, and save among special friends it is the most desirable form of a call. It implies that you are held in kindly regard, and that future meetings will be agreeable. It does away with any possibility of mistakes, or with awkwardness of chance meetings. In fact, the card is the sign and symbol of social enlightenment, and deserves to be canonized.

A WORK OF CHARITY AND NECESSITY.

A Massachusetts Court Decides that a Barber may Pip His Trade on Sunday.

BOSTON, July 23.—It has been to-day decided that it is lawful for barbers to ply their trade in Massachusetts on Sunday. When the board of police, two months ago, complied with the request of journeymen barbers that the Sunday law be enforced against the bosses, a test case was made against Bernard P. Verne, proprietor of the Young's Hotel barber shop. The case was tried to-day before Judge Barker and a jury. The judge's charge settled the case. The point at issue under the statute was whether the work was of necessity or charity.

It seemed to the court that the work is the same whether it is done by a person himself, or whether it is done for him, and so far as shaving is concerned, the cutting of one's beard or hair, or the washing of one's head, it does not seem that it can be said to be other than a work of necessity or charity under ordinary circumstances—that is to say, if any man is guilty of shaving another, then that person who was shaved would be equally guilty. If he had shaved himself, he should in ordinary cases order him to be discharged, because it seems that the work is a work of necessity. Where it is work that a party desires for any proper reason to have done—that is, if he desires to be shaved, or to shave himself in order that he may feel clean, or feel better, or look better—that seems to be a work of necessity. And if he offers himself to a barber to be shaved, to have his hair cut, or to have his head washed, or any of these ordinary operations of the barber, then, unless the barber knows that he does it for some purpose outside of the ordinary reasons which actuate men, it seems that the barber is entirely justified in doing the work, and that is a work morally fit and proper to be done. Therefore, if there is nothing but that shown to have been done in any case by a barber on Sunday, he would say that it was a work of necessity and charity and perfectly fit and proper to be done.

The jury promptly brought in a verdict of not guilty, and no more criminal prosecutions of this kind will be made in Massachusetts.

DETROIT'S FEMALE FIEND.

The Case Comes up in the Probate Court—Col. Hudson Awarded the Temporary Custody of the Child.

DETROIT, July 23.—The little child Clarence Hudson, whose story of inhuman treatment by his foster-mother, Mrs Col. C. T. Hudson, has fairly aroused the town, arrived back from South Chicago at two o'clock. The news of the child's return spread rapidly, and the people began to gather about the Hudson house on Locust street as early as 8 o'clock. There were a number of women in the crowd, and threats of mobbing the female fiend if she made her appearance were freely made. She did not appear, however, and the neighbors resolved themselves into knots to discuss the next move, imprecations being heaped upon the woman.

The case was called in the Probate Court at 10 o'clock. It appears that Col. Hudson was not responsible for his wife's devilitry, and that he would place the child with his relatives beyond her reach. The court awarded him the temporary custody of the lad. Tales of fresh cruelty in connection with the boy's treatment are being retailed about town. Mrs Hudson is still with Mrs Druser in South Chicago. The child, although barely four years old, seems as grave and dignified as a little old man. He is a remarkably handsome child, with a fine intellectual face, clear grey
