IN THE EVENING.

All day the wind had howled along the leas,
All day the wind had swept across the plain,
All day on rustling grass and waving trees
Had fallen "the useful trouble of the rain,"
All day, beneath the low-hung dreary sky,
The dripping earth had cowered sullenly.

At last the wind had sobbed itself to rest,
At last to weary calmness sank the storm,
A crimson line gleamed sudden in the west,
Where golden flocks rose wavering into form;
A hushed revival heralded the night,
And with the evening time awoke the light.

The rosy color flushed the long gray waves;
The rosy color tinged the mountain brows;
And where the old church watched the village graves,
Wooed to a passing blush the yew-trees frown;
Bird, beast, and flower relenting nature knew,
And one pale star rose shimmering in the blue.

So, to a life long crushed in heavy grief,
So, to a path long darkened by despair,
The slow sad hours bring touches of relief,
Whispers of hope, and strength of trustful prayer.
"Tarry his leasure." God of love and might,
And with the evening time there will be light!

NOTES AND NEWS.

UNITED STATES.

Better than farming—Last year the National Secretary of the Grangers, at Washington, received nearly $7,000 for salary and arrears, besides other perquisites.

The Cincinnati Commercial speaks of that city as "our own Athens." Why not? No other city is better entitled to consider itself the capital of Grease than Porkopolis.

A Pennsylvania farmer states that he cured his daughter of the Grecian bend by pouring water on her, and holding her out in the sun till she warped back again!

At Cincinnati, Ohio, Friday, Israel Elias had some difficulty with his son, and the boy attempted to run away, when the father seized his musket and fired at the boy, inflicting probably fatal wounds.

At a recent ball at Johnstown, Pa. James Gore and Charles Doran quarrelled because they couldn't both dance with the same girl in the same set. A fight ensued and Doran was soon covered with Gore.

The Indianapolis Journal has a reportorial Jenkins who means well, doubtless, but this doesn't prevent his putting his foot in it now and then. His latest gush is over a grand local wedding where the "groom and groomsman were handsomely dressed in black satin neckties, white vests, and their button-holes were filled with fragrant roses." No doubt it was pretty as far as it went, but wasn't it a rather scant attire for so public a occasion?

The Portland (Me.) Press sarcastically says, concerning the movement for cutting down teachers' salaries: "There are towns in this State in which women are paid two dollars a week—and board—for teaching; teaching, too, under circumstances which make it a positive pleasure, with the rosy faces of innocent children clustered about them, and the balmy air of June making its way into every corner of the school-room through crevices in the walls permitted to remain there by thoughtful agents and committee men."

They put it differently in Boston. Instead of making respectability a plea for diminished punishment in cases of wrong-doing, the Boston notion is to look at it the other way. Thus, a "very respectable" young man and woman the other day pleaded guilty in the criminal court to an indictment for improper behavior, expecting to be punished by the fine imposed by the statute. The district-attorney, however, urged upon the court that, if persons in their standing in society were punished by a mere fine, the cause of public morals would suffer, and both parties were sentenced to the house of correction, the man for eighteen months, and the woman for six.

A county in Nebraska has been agitated by an extraordinary bit of polemics. The question was, "Whether, when a minister refuses to call off the sets at a dance, it is sufficient evidence of heretical tendencies?" The debate was not so animated as it would have been if anybody (except the minister himself) could have been found to uphold the negative. The decision, we grieve to say, was against this over-scrupulous gentleman, and the indignant population gave him twenty-four hours in which to leave the county, with his baggage and the Bible which he had studied to so little purpose.

GENERAL.

You can't eat enough in a week to last you a year, and you can't advertise on that plan either.

What are you doing there?" said a grocer to a fellow who was stealing his lard. "I am getting fat," was the reply.

Rochefort has indorsed American hotels by saying, "I wasn't bitten once." It is possible the bugs knew him.

George Eliot is said to have the refusal of $50,000 for her forthcoming novel. Probably the higher the figure the more positive the refusal.

A scientific journal desires its young readers to remember that their marbles were originally nothing but "amorphous chunks of protoplastic clay."

When you see a lady walking along the street, with both hands clasped over the crown of her head, apparently in deep meditation, you can "bet your life" that her hair is coming down.

"Are you going to make a flour-bed here?" asked a young lady of her father's gardner. "Yes, miss; them's the orders." "Why, it'll spoil our croquet ground!" "Can't help it, miss. Your papa says he is bound to have this plot laid out for horticulture, not husbandry."

The Hamilton Times has a faculty of invariably barking up the wrong tree. It says now that Norris, the private paper pilferer, was never appointed Private Secretary to Mr. Swinyard, the Government Railway Commissioner for Prince Edward Island. The Times knows full well that Norris was appointed, but neither Mr. Swinyard nor the country could swallow such a bitter pill, and the Government was compelled to remove him and appoint a successor.

A correspondent of The Providence Journal, mentioning the extravagant ideas of young feminine graduates, says that "not long ago a graduate of one of the most famous schools in the land, upon an anniversary, was asked to return to the school for a day and read an essay upon an important topic. The essay was rarely beautiful and inspiring. On their way from the hall one of the listeners asked another, 'Was not that fine?' 'Yes,' replied her friend, 'but what a mean little trail she wore.' Fancy a man remarking at the close of a lecture by Geo. Wm. Curtis, 'It was fine, but his coat tail was too short by an inch and a half.'"

There are many romances of real life that find their denouement in the Paris Morgue; but the strangest yet happened quite recently. The body of a girl exposed on one of the dreadful slabs was of such surpassing beauty that the Morgue was thronged all day with sight-seers, and one poor lunatic actually drowned himself in order, as he took care to explain in a letter found in his lodgings, that he might rest for a time near to the only creature he had ever admired, and whom he had seen too late. The story is as ludicrous as it is horrible, but it is so thoroughly French that there is no reason to doubt its truth. No less than seven hundred bodies are annually exposed at the Morgue, and the establishment is conducted with the greatest order by five officials, some of whom are always at their post day and night. Of these the chief man, the greffier, enjoys the magnificent stipend of 2400 francs a year—$480—by no means too exorbitant a sum for so horrible an occupation.

Reading Others' Thoughts.

Some remarkable but well authenticated powers have been recently exhibited by Mr. John R. Brown, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, who, under certain conditions, can read the thoughts of those about him however much they may endeavor to conceal them. He is at present stopping in New York, and recently allowed a number of gentlemen to visit him at the Sturtevant House. He was obliged to use letters of the alphabet printed on pieces of pasteboard. He then allowed any one to hide an article anywhere in the house. A gentleman in the company left the room, and returned in a few minutes. Mr. Brown then blindfolded himself with a linen handkerchief, took hold of the gentleman's left hand with his own right hand, and after a few eccentric movements, namely, passing his hand several times over the gentleman's arm and across his forehead, the two left the parlor, followed by the company, and proceeded to search for the hidden article. The gentleman submitting to the experiment was led, or rather pulled, by Mr. Brown through the corridors of the hotel and into a half dozen chambers until one was reached where Brown stopped before a bureau with about a dozen drawers, and, pointing to one particular drawer, said: "You will find it there." The hidden article, a pocket-knife, was found in the drawer. Another gentleman was experimented with, and following his thought, Mr. Brown spelled out with his pasteboard alphabet "Langrove," a small town in Vermont, where the gentleman was born. In other ways he was found to be equally correct. Dr. Cochier, of Michigan University, says of him: "If an individual will intently fix his attention upon a concrete object localized in a particular place, Mr. Brown, while blindfolded, will lead him to the object." Mr. Brown claims that by means of this power he has discovered the guilt of certain criminals in the West, and thinks with practice he can utilize it still more.

Peru's Scholastic Troubles.

Peru has been having a little broil over her school system, the facts of which a correspondent of the New York Herald states to be as follows: The Government having established an efficient system of common school education at almost no expense to the people, thought to extend its usefulness by putting even better facilities of instruction in the hands of the masters. As Peru regards the United States as her model, the attention of the Minister of Education was attracted to a practical periodical on public schools, published in New York, and a number of copies were obtained and translated into the Spanish language. The masters and teachers were delighted with the work and everything went smoothly, until a zealous Franciscan friar of Arequipa, named Marcial, discovered that the journal was heretical in its tendencies, since it called to the attention of teachers the recognized fact that in this age intellect should be untrammelled. So great was the excitement which his anathemas against it produced that the Prefect of Arequipa was obliged to collect all the copies he could find and destroy them. Then the sensation spread to Lima. The Minister of Public Worship remonstrated with the Bishop against the conduct of the reverend Marcial, but the religious organ of the city openly accused the administration of opposition to the third article of the Constitution, which declares that "the Catholic and Apostolic creed is that of the nation and no other shall be allowed." The difficulty is not yet entirely settled, and it is hard to tell which side will ultimately triumph.

A Horrible Wife Murder.

CHICAGO, July 9.

A dispatch from Fond du Lac, Wis., gives particulars of the murder of Mrs. Loftus by her husband, at Gravesville, Calumet county, yesterday afternoon. Loftus crept into the house and dealt his wife a blow with a hammer while she was standing over a wash-tub, doing the week's washing. She fell and then he crushed her skull with an axe, and dragged the body under the house. To make certain of his work he returned for the axe and nearly severed the head from the trunk. The body was soon afterward found by the woman's six-year old daughter. Loftus was arrested in a saloon; he was quite drunk. He confessed the deed in an interview with the editor of the Fond du Lac Commonwealth. He said he had deliberately planned to kill her. The following is a part of the interview:

Editor—What was the trouble between you and Mrs. Loftus?

Prisoner—Well, we have had a good deal of trouble, and I made up my mind that I could not stand her actions any longer. I was very bad off that day.

Editor—So you knew what you were about when you killed her?

Prisoner—Yes, Sir; I meant to kill her, and did kill her, and it is over with now.

Editor—Did she know you were in the room when you went in to hit her with the hammer?

Prisoner—No, she did not; I was careful not to let her know it, for she would have got away.

Editor—Why did you drag the body under the house after you had killed your wife?

Prisoner—I did it because when the children came home they would be scared.

A Cincinnati Jenkins.

Miss F. A. T., of Mill Creek, is at that age which men find most fascinating—between fifty-five and sixty. She is sylph-like, with plenty of hauteur and sil vous plais, though she is rather too fat for hot weather.

Miss S. A. L. is the most dear, delightful, sweetest, dearest little woman in the world. She lives in one of the most magnificent residences in Clifton. Can make her own dresses, and knows how to cook—In fact, gets two dollars and a half a week as third assistant cook. It is rumored that she is in love with Tom McDougle, the jeune domme who tends one of the most aristocratic and fashionable peanut stands in the city.

Miss P. E. T., of Bucktown, is a dear, delightful, sweet, distracting little blonde. She is fond of fun, is a sweet Swedenborgian, has a sublime complexion, dances like an archangel, plays the piano like Gabriel, and has a cunning little strawberry mark on the small of her back. I think she is yet unwon, and she gets a dollar a dozen, and hires a boy to carry the washing home.

Miss B. E. L., of Riverside, is a blonde of magnificent gorgeousness. Her falling hair (this does not mean that she is losing her hair) is like gently descending sunbeams, and she wears an exquisite number 9 shoe.

Miss P. O. L., of Garo street, is a blonde of gorgeous magnificence. She wears a beautiful red flannel petticoat, which she bought in '52. Washes herself every Fourth of July, and is just now suffering with a large boil under her left arm.—Cincinnati Times.
