PRINCE MAY VISIT U. S.

By Courier Leased Wire.

London, June 21.—(Correspondence of the Associated Press).— A visit to the United States by the Prince of Wales has been suggested recently in the British press.

"The suggestion is admirably well timed," says The Daily Express. "The Prince would cross the Atlantic, not as a representative of the British Government, but as a simple young Englishman, the type of tens of thousands of similar young men gallantly fighting at the front. He would carry to the American people a direct personal message of brotherly appreciation."

BELGIAN VESSEL SUNK.

By Courier Leased Wire

Washington, July 2.— The Belgian steamer Chillier, 2,966 tons, was sunk by a submarine 1,400 miles off the Atlantic coast on June 21, the Navy Department to-day announced. Twenty survivors were picked up by a sailing vessel on June 27.

THE HUN HAND IN FRANCE.

"Defeatist" Handbills Call on French Workmen to Demand Peace.

Details of the "defeatist" campaign carried on by German spies at France are found in recent copies of l'Humanite, the leading French Socialist newspaper. In publishing two of the handbills sent out by the "pacifist" organization at St. Etienne, an important munition centre near Lyons, l'Humanite points out that the typographical errors and the mistakes in construction indicate they were printed in a German establishment.

The distribution of these pamphlets calling upon the French workers to rise against their Government and cease making munitions was effected but a short time before the beginning of the German offensive in the west. One of the circulars, after asserting that a revolutionary uprising would bring about a speedy peace, continued:

"Frenchmen, enough blood! There is not a family but that mourns some loss. This war must cease. It will last for twenty years if we do not put an end to it ourselves. We must accept the peace offered by Germany two years ago. Germany has always said that it will restore her old boundaries to France."

The other circular was decorated with the French colors and stated that an inquiry instituted by a secret committee had shown that 91 of every 100 of the inhabitants of all France were in favor of the immediate conclusion of peace.

Among the Pueblos.

A wheatless meal does not bother the Pueblo Indians of New Mexico in the least. Wheatless days are to them no serious deprivation. Though wheatless weeks were to be prescribed, they would be entirely content.

Fact is, they don't care much about wheat. They do not grow much of it, and could get along very well without it. Corn is good enough for them, as it was for their ancestors.

Long before the first white man arrived in New Mexico the Pueblo Indians, living in mud-built towns that were the most primitive of apartment houses—a whole village residing under the roof —subsisted by planting corn, beans, melons and a few other vegetables. Such agriculture meets all their needs to-day.

The climate of the region is very arid. Thus, without much trouble, they can dry their summer-grown vegetables for winter use by simply exposing them to the sun. In this way they preserve their corn and beans, likewise peppers—on the rooftops, or hung in strings.

The flat roofs of the houses in autumn are covered with trays of sliced peaches, apples and plums, drying in the sunshine. It is a sight really quite remarkable. Melons and pumpkins are stacked against the walls.

Harvest time (as everywhere in the world) is an occasion for ceremonial thanksgiving. It is celebrated by formal dances, with much beating of raw-hide covered drums.

The cornbread of the Pueblos is baked in primitive ovens built of mud and rudely dome-shaped, in the open. They have baked it in that way for thousands of years, and it is mighty good.

Nature as a Builder.

In Los Angeles, California, there is a wall which rises up on one side of a high building that has an artistic value never intended by the builder. He had moved his bags of cement on to the ground to be ready for work and was then called away for a day or two. In the meantime one of the very infrequent torrential rains came, and each sack turned into stone under the action of the water, and the fabric of the sacks themselves were absorbed into the cement so that it was impossible to remove it. Consequently each sack was wrought into the wall as if it had been a boulder on the line of an old stone wall. They were then chinked and bound together with worked cement, and after a time the weather disposed of the sacking, but left the blocks marked with the impress of the weave. The result is a highly ornamental cement wall, resembling at a little distance a wall of some woven material.—Family Herald.

U. S. COTTON CROP

By Courier Leased Wire

Washington, July 3.—A huge cotton crop is the prospect this year, the department of agriculture to-day forecasting the production of 15,325,000 equivalent 500 pound bales. A crop that size would be the third largest ever grown.

The acreage this year comes close to the record, being exceeded only by that of 1913.
