LOCAL GOVERNMENT FOR ALL RUSSIA

Omsk Foreign Minister Outlines the Plans of Admiral Kolchak.

REAL FOUNDATION

Central Government Will Exercise Functions Only of General Character.

Paris, July 25.—Radical decentralization in the reconstruction of Russia is the settled policy of Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian government at Omsk, according to Sergius Sazonoff, foreign minister of the Omsk government. A detailed explanation of this policy and a general outline of the political plans of the Kolchak government were given today to The Associated Press by M. Sazanoff, who recently returned from London, where he conferred with British officials.

The statement, the Omsk foreign minister said, was made because Admiral Kolchak's reply to the allies, in which he promised autonomy to various states that have broken away from old Russia, has caused much discussion. He said he considered it desirable to give his government's attitude toward the various nationalities and sections seeking autonomy.

The local government should be the real foundation of the political structure, he said, and the central government will exercise only functions of a general character. He expressed the belief that the future held more for great political bodies than for the small ones, and that "nationalities now animated with centrifugal tendencies will certainly appreciate the benefits of being allied with the big state with all its promises of guardianship and possibilities of development."

Radical Decentralization.

Laws regulating the status of nationalities, Minister Sazonoff said, necessarily will be incorporated in the constitution to be framed for Russia by the constituent assembly, if Admiral Kolchak succeeds in reaching Moscow. Consequently, he explained, Admiral Kolchak's regulations or decisions cannot be considered as final until approved by the assembly. However, he added, Admiral Kolchak contemplates radical decentralization in reconstructing Russia, which was hopelessly centralized under the old regime.

"One of the most harmful defects of the old system," he said, "was the endeavor to direct the details of life in the most remote corner of the great empire thru a far-removed bureaucratic centre.

"In new Russia the local government is to be the fundamental basis in life. Experience is teaching that the local government is the real foundation of all efficient public structures. It is Admiral Kolchak's purpose to leave all local matters to the inhabitants themselves, and to conserve for the central state only functions of a general character to be embodied in the constitution.

Foresee Various Reforms.

"Because of differences in customs, culture and traditions one may foresee varied forms of local self-government, ranging from complete home rule down to elemental forms of communal administration among nomadic tribes in Asia, where the low state of culture will make a period of education necessary before complete self-government will be possible. In such cases the practice will be similar to that followed by the United States in its territories."

It is the Omsk government's intention, M. Sazonoff said, to give the different peoples full opportunity to construct their lives according to their own customs and traditions, and to cultivate their languages and religions.

"However, self-government must not prejudice the unity or sovereignty of the state as a whole," he said. "The essence of an autonomous arrangement is provincial self-government with a local legislative assembly popularly elected, as a basis. Provinces will be determined on ethnographic lines, and their legislatures will control provincial and judicial revenues and expenditures within their territory.

"One may enumerate control of foreign relations, the army, the navy, a unified money system, state finance, high courts of justice, civil and criminal codes, posts, telegraph lines, and other ways of communications as functions properly belonging to the central government."

Protection of Minorities.

Protection of the rights of Minorities thruout all Russia, will be an important feature of the all-Russian government's policy, the foreign minister said. "This is, in reality, but a consequence of the principle of the unity and equality of citizenship, forbidding any discrimination whatever in any part of the country against any citizen, irrespective of religion or locality of birth," he said.

"We are aware of the spirit of alienation and distrust," M. Sazonoff declared," which at this moment animates many representatives of nationalities. We deplore the injustice and the prejudice of this animosity, altho we understand that it is but a reverberation of certain conditions of the past. We face the situation patiently. The future belongs to great political bodies, and not to the small. Nationalities, once the basis of their autonomous life, is firmly settled in justice and in law, will understand that the real safeguard of their national self-government lies in unity with Russia, a people peaceful and noi-arrestive in their aims and purposes."
