"FUR WILL FLY" WHEN MORGAN AND ZOCCANO CLASH ON LABOR DAY

Featherweight Championship Bout Will Be Free to Women.

Reports emanating from the camps of Eddie Morgan and Tony Zoccano, the pugilists who will meet at the Patricia Theatre on Labor Day for the featherweight boxing championship of the Dominion, indicate that a great battle is in store for local fight fans. Morgan claims that he never felt better in his life and promises to run away with the Canadian title.

Zoccano is in Brantford undergoing a severe training. He is endeavoring to have a special train run up to London on Labor Day to accommodate fistic fans of the Telephone City who are desirous of seeing the contest.

Promoters of the bout have decided to allow women in free of charge. This action is to demonstrate to the fair sex that the so-called brutal sport of boxing is not brutal at all, but can be witnessed by all classes of society without causing a qualm of alarm.

Several fast preliminaries are slated before the big feature of the program. A number of soldiers under the supervision of Sergt. Tom Dyer will commence mixing things at 10:45 p.m. and the featherweight title battle will likely come off an hour or so later.

The match on September 2 has all the symptoms of being the best exhibition of real fighting ever seen locally. Both men are good boxers, but are apt to become fighters of the old-time variety after the first few rounds. Their last exhibition in this city was genuine to the core. So much so, in fact, that Zoccano wanted to beat up Morgan again after the contest had been awarded to the London pugilist.

WINNER OF KENTUCKY DERBY MAKES POOR THIRD IN THE COHOES

Saratoga, N. Y., Aug. 31.—That Exterminator was a lucky horse to win the Kentucky Derby was indicated yesterday when he finished a poor third to Andrew Miller's Ticket and Mrs. Arthur's Bondage in the Cohoes handicap at a mile and a quarter, which was the feature of the card.

Though Exterminator was giving away a lot of weight, he was the early favorite, but the money poured in on Ticket until he was an equal favorite with the Derby winner when they went to the post. The going was much the same as when Exterminator won the Derby, but the muddy track also suited Ticket, which was capably ridden by Schuttinger.

Fairy Wand set the pace with Exterminator in second place in the run along the back stretch. There Ticket was last, but lapped on Bondage. Rounding the turn Ticket moved up and, most of the field going wide, let Bondage on the inside. This pair quickly ran over the others and with Bondage in the deep going on the rail, Ticket was not pressed to win by a length and a half. Exterminator was eight lengths back of Bondage, Favorite players had another successful day, as four of the choices finished in front.

The Saratoga cup and Hopeful stakes to be run today has attracted many new visitors, including Harry Payne Whitney, who came here from New York to see his sturdy 3-year-old Johren measure strides with Roamer in the cup race. This will probably be a match race, as both Sun Briar and Cudgel have been withdrawn.

The Hopeful, the richest 2-year-old stake of the meeting and perhaps of the season, has attracted twenty of the best youngsters, with Sweep On and Hannibal scheduled to carry 130 pounds each.

BRANT SEMI-PROS TAKE REVENGE ON W. O. R. BALL TEAM

Defeat Locals by 8 to 1 in Last Game of the Season.

BRANTFORD, Aug. 30.—The Brantford Semi-Pros. got revenge here tonight against the W. O. R., of London team, when the locals handed out an 8 to 1 trimming. The Londoners narrowly escaped a shutout. Little stealing home in the ninth, which avoided a whitewash and sprang a surprise.

Down pitched for the visitors, and for five innings staged with the Brant for spit-baller, a pretty a pitching duel as has been seen here this year. Neither side could muster more than a couple of singles in the five rounds. It was in the sixth that the Brantfords got to Down, scoring three runs on four consecutive safeties. Bradley and Mitchell singled, while McKelvey doubled to right. Burke's single sent McKelvey home. In the seventh the Brantfords added two more, the London support cracking behind their pitcher. With two out, Dumond dropped a line drive and two runs came home. The locals added three more in the next round, McLeod's two errors being largely responsible.

The visitors did not look quite up to the form they displayed here on their first appearance, when they gave Brantford a good walloping. Eddy, the W. O. R. third baseman, gave a performance at third, his fielding being roundly applauded. His two-base hit just about knocked the top board off the fence along the dyke. Thomas, for the locals pitched shutout ball, and was well supported all through.

The game was the last twilight affair here this season.

SPORT AS IT ISN'T

(By Percy Prune, The Advertiser Sport Critic.)

Having just completed an interesting article on "What's What in Sport," I now take it upon myself to write a line or so on "Who's Whom in Athletics." I do this because I wish to put one over on my moribund contemporaries, who, I am led to believe, are about to scribble a series of articles on "Where's Where in New York," and "Which's Which in Europe."

So many people are under the hallucination that Ty Cobb, Jack Dempsey and other men of their pattern are the foremost figures of the sport world. It is not so. There are numerous guys who have devoted their lives to games who are never mentioned by the short-sighted sport writers of the present day. Although modesty is one of my most celebrated characteristics, I am going to come out with the statement that Percy Peanuckle has done more to uplift sport than any other athlete. As you know, Percy Peanuckle is a relative of mine. He was christened after me and is second nephew to the Duke of Bone Dome, who, as you know, is a cousin of mine by the marriage of grandmother's adopted daughter Damitina.

Discovered the Pea.

Percy Peanuckle's father was the man who first discovered the well-known and celebrated vegetable, the pea. For this remarkable service to humanity, he was given the title of the Earl of Pea. Later on this remarkable man revised Mr. Dan Webster to put the word "knuckle" in his dictionary. For this he was elevated to the rank of the Tzar of Peanuckle. Percy inherited his old man's inventive genius and one day constructed a card game. For this service, the game which he constructed was christened "peanuckle." Percy has not only spread this wonderful game throughout the wilds of America and the plains of Switzerland, but he has also advertised the sport widely through the hills of Sahara. True, he has become wealthy through his efforts, but he would not have become wealthy were it not for his remarkable foresight in publishing a book on the game entitled, "How to Become a Peanuckle Shark." Following the publication of this book, Percy got thousands of royalties, or, in other words, graft money from the sharks his book had produced.

A Student of Crap.

While traveling in the suburbs of Africa, Percy conceived the idea of educating the natives of the dark continent to the intricacies of crap. He realized that billiards could never be made popular in Africa, owing to the ivory condition of the natives' heads, and also to the fact that ivory was too common an article to be productive of enthusiasm when transformed into a billiard ball. For this service he was offered the title of the Counte of the Crap, but refused it. Percy always was a man of democraptic principles.

Percy has not only uplifted sport, but he was the originator of the old and ancient pastime of rotten-egg throwing. True, Percy did not instigate the throwing of over-ripe hen fruit intentionally, but, nevertheless, the pastime would never have come into existence had it not been for the existence of Percy. Several decades ago he rendered a song entitled, "Father Get the Monkey Wrench, Your Poor Old Dad's a Nut." After the first verse the unappreciative audience pelted him with decadent pieces of immatured poultry. Truly, Percy Peanuckle's name should have an auspicious place in the Hall of Fame.

Another man who receives far less attention than he deserves is Marmalade Marmaduke. This remarkable sportsman gave up his life to that popular and soul-refreshing pastime called, "Hitting the Booze." Marmaduke's breath finally sniffed out, after he had completed a tour of practical demonstrations of the sport, which he encouraged with all the strength and capacity of his renowned wine cellar. He coached some of the most famous marksmen the "Hitting the Booze" game ever produced. His following was probably the largest ever enjoyed by human and inhuman being. It dwindled down slightly in the latter part of his life. A portion of his admirers ceased to follow. They preferred calling taxicabs.

Marmalade's Finish.

The end of Marmalade is one of the most touching incidents of modern and present-day history. Refusing to drink nothing but Scotch and eating nothing but rye, Marmalade in a delirium disintegration demarded that they let him have one last hit at his booze.

"I'm the guy that put the key in whiskey," he yelled inarticulately through his convulsions. "Let me play my favorite pastime once more."

But the nurse made a fatal mistake. Instead of bringing him the game of "Hitting the Booze," she brought him the game of Rum. It happened to be bay rum. Let me draw a curtain over the final chapter of Marmalade's career. His last words were:

"John Barleycorn, my love, Jo. You've got me, yes you have bo.' I know I'm going to fall, Jo, in the battle of Bay Rum."
