GREAT BRITAIN REDIVIVUS

Incidents are not wanting of a great awakening in the British Isles over the necessity of manufacturing at home the goods formerly so freely imported from Germany and Austria. To add to her present striking force, she is doing many things as a matter of war policy which are proper steps along the line of a peace policy. As a war measure she will very probably establish a general tariff. Once enforced that tariff will not cease with the war.

Many will be the changes in Britain's national policy in consequence of this devastating and debt creating war. The reasons to be given for a change from free trade to tariff will not be an abandonment of former principles but a case arising out of necessity.

Free Traders will maintain they have not been converted to the idea of a tariff but have bowed to the necessity of a national crisis. The placing of a tariff against the enemy countries will be welcomed as a proper measure to keep Germany from ever again becoming powerful enough to plunge the world into such another war as this.

But generally the adoption of a tariff will commend itself to all because they are for the future good of Britain and her colonies. The tariffs will be so constructied as to bind these together in closer bonds of union than ever has been contemplated. The blood of our martyr soldiers from every part of the Empire so freely spilled in a common cause has cemented the bonds of the Empire in a never ending unity in trade as well as the cause of humanity.

Some day (and we think it is not many months distant) our Empire will be again at peace with Germany. To carry out that peace it will not be our idea to maintain our present deep seated feeling against an enemy and boycott them in every way. But this will be no reason why we should not trade entirely among ourselves as far as possible and also maintain most favorable trade relations with the other nations that have made common cause with us. To prefer to manufacture at home, and to deal most freely with our most friendly nations will be our slogan even though it may appear to be a boycotting of everything German and Austrian.

More Troops Arrive Safely

Official announcement has been made of the safe arrival at a British port of troopships Messanabie and Scandinavian. They contained on board two hundred and two officers and twenty-nine hundred men and forty-seven nurses all from Canada. When it is known that even one submarine if it can steal safely out in a storm through the British fleet, can wreck havoc on many vessels it always gives a feeling of deep relief when we are assured of the safe arrival of our soldiers on the other side. Britain's control of the seas is a marvel.

Wm. T. Blair, nephew of Prof. Blair, who has charge of the greenhouse and garden work at the Experimental Station, has asked for leave of absence to join the Nova Scotia Highlanders for Overseas Service. The Department of Agriculture is being communicated with in the matter. Mr. Blair's father, W. L. Blair, Inverness, N. S., has enlisted in the 185th Battalion. He served in the Northwest Mounted Police Force for five years, and was there during the Reil rebellion taking part in that campaign.

Ves Laing Wounded.

A letter received Thursday, written "Somewhere in France", February 23rd, by a Halifax member of the 6th Mounted Rifles, said:

"We have been over a month round the firing line and only arrived here two nights ago for a rest. We had very dirty weather while in the trenches, snow and rain making it very muddy and uncomfortable. Ves Lang was wounded by a bomb. It is cold now, consequently we do not enjoy drilling much. We are to go to another part of the line shortly and expect to find it exciting there as the trenches are only 110 yards apart.

["Ves" Lang enlisted for active service with the 25th Battalion. He played hockey at Kentville on the occasion of the visit of the Crescent vs Socials hockey teams from Halifax. His friends will hope for his speedy recovery.
