WAKING UP.

The government is waking from its profound repose; it's hustling round and taking some steps to can the foes. Big men are being chosen to make things hump along; our feet, which have been frozen, will know some warmth ere long. Ford's building naval flivvers, or something of the kind, to give the Teuton shivers, and knock the U-boats blind. And Schwab is nimbly skipping along Atlantic piers, to hustle up that shipping that's badly in arrears. And Ryan has been captured to turn out aeroplanes, and everyone's enraptured who knows this man of brains. And Edison, the wizard, has something up his sleeve to chill the Teuton gizzard, and make the kaiser grieve. Our Uncle Sam has risen, he takes a wiser stand; the nation's brains are his'n, to order and command. The giants he is calling, they come with loyal cheers; the little men are falling back to their normal spheres. In times of peace the lawyers may do official chores, but when the foe's destroyers are threatening our shores, we need the towering giant, conditions to improve, the captain, self reliant, who's built to make things move. The government is looking for big men everywhere; the giants it is booking don't deal in heated air.
