FOREST.

A large gathering of the friends of Mr. Peter Graham, ex-M.P.P. for East Lambton, from Warwick, Plympton, Bosanquet, Forest, Thedford, Arkona and Wyoming, met at his residence in Warwick on the evening of the 18th to celebrate his 70th birthday. Mr. Graham was taken by surprise, but about 8 o'clock the meeting was called to order, Mr. G. M. Everest, of Forest, acting as chairman. Short addresses were given by Hugh Mackenzie, M.P.P., and Messrs. Duncan Campbell, R. Stutt and M. A. Smith, congratulating him upon having succeeded in hewing out for himself a comfortable home from the forests of Lambton, and upon the vigor of body and mind possessed by him at his advanced age. Mr. H. J. Pettypiece, editor of the Forest Free Press, was then called upon to read an address to Mr. Graham, referring to his long and faithful services to the Reform party and his uprightness in private and political life, after which the Chairman, on behalf of the company, presented Mr. Graham with a gold-headed cane and a large birthday cake, to all of which Mr. Graham replied, thanking his friends for their kindness and the valuable support they had given him in the past. Refreshments were served upon the lawn by the ladies and the Forest and Thedford brass bands enlivened the evening with music, and with games, conversation and singing. An enjoyable evening was spent, all wishing Mr. Graham many returns of the day.

Sixteen car loads of cattle were shipped from here on the 18th for the English market by Messrs. Rawlings, Livingston, Hamilton and Marshall, and Finlay and Angus McKinlay, the two last accompanying their cattle, intending to visit Scotland before their return.

ENGLAND.

Mr. Thos. Cook, the veteran tourist agent, is erecting a block of almshouses and a mission hall for the use of the poor of his native village, Melbourne, in Derbyshire.

A daughter of Archbishop Tait resides, it is said, in a very humble way in one of the slums of Lambeth, London, acting as a nurse of the sick and attending the infirm.

The rage for tartans in Paris is making tartan stockings the fashion in London, and almost all the plaids are to be had in silk—the Campbell, the Stuart and the Mackenzie and many others.

Sir John Millais, the great English artist, has curly hair that is hardly touched with gray and bright eyes that do not show any trace of their affliction—that of long sightedness. Millais' terms for a portrait are $15,000.

James Berry, the public executioner, is about to put his reminiscences into book form under the delightful title, "The Men and Women I Have Executed." A better title would be, "People Who Have Taken a Drop with Me."

Lloyd George, a new member of the House of Commons, is the son of a village cobbler. He was educated by his uncle, a self-made man, and at the age of 15 took to outdoor preaching, which has made him quite an orator.

Sir Edward Bradford, the newly-appointed commissioner of London police, is a little man, and has lost a part of one of his arms which a tigress bit off, but notwithstanding this he manages his horse with extraordinary skill.

The Salvation Army is going to celebrate its 25th anniversary at the Crystal Palace, London, with "American Warriors," "French Wonders," "German Go-aheads," "Irish Invincibles," "Mexican Marvels," "Oh-be-joyful Africanders," "Quiet Quakers," and "Exultant Scotch."

In the Queen's Bench Division recently—before the Lord Chief Justice and a special jury—the case was heard of the Queen against Mr. Herbert Booth, commandant of the Salvation Army, and two other defendants, for causing an obstruction by holding meetings of the Salvation Army in the streets of Whitchurch. After a long hearing the jury found a verdict of not guilty.

Elizabeth Slee was charged before the Kirkby Stephen Bench the other day with neglecting the health of her children by keeping them in a house formerly used as a pig-stye, the children having to lie on a damp floor without bedding, and with only a few rags to cover them. The Chairman said the thing was a disgrace and a scandal, and the defendant was fined 40 shillings and costs, or one month's imprisonment with hard labor. The owner of the house was also ordered to be prosecuted.

On June 21 a man named Hall started to drive from Brentwood to Edinburgh for a wager of £100, on a trolly drawn by a donkey. The conditions were that he should not leave the tub on the trolly unless forcibly ejected, and that he should get his living by performing conjuring tricks. He and his driver, named Mansfield, reached Leicester on Sunday, and were apprehended for cruelty to the donkey, and were on Monday sentenced to 21 days' imprisonment each.

The ancient room at Hampton Court Palace, recently thrown open to the public, has been the subject of an interesting letter contributed to the Times by Sir J. C. Robinson. The room, which formed part of Cardinal Wolsey's private apartments, is, it appears, more interesting and important than had been supposed. It is suggested that it may have been Wolsey's private chapel; but its small size and the presence of a fireplace are thought to be against that view. But neither of those difficulties seems conclusive; and the fireplace might well have been added after the Cardinal's fall, and yet be characteristically Tudor. The panel pictures which form the frieze are interesting and remarkable, and were clearly the work of the Italian artists whom Wolsey attracted to London. But the elaborate ceiling seems to be the chief beauty of the room. The Tudor artificers excelled in the making of these plaster-enriched ceilings; and this one, which is especially ornate, still bears the Cardinal's motto. Sir J. C. Robinson, who a contemporary says is a trustworthy guide in such matters, considers the ceiling to be as fine as any of those famous ones in the old palace at Mantua. The most remarkable thing about all this is that so splendid and interesting a room should have been lost sight of for a century and a half, and that for 40 years past it should have been used as a butler's pantry. Happily it has now been cared for, and has become one of the show-places of the palace. It is not impossible that an investigation would reveal other interesting apartments at Hampton Court.

SCOTLAND.

By command of the Queen, the Braemar gathering is this year to be held at Balmoral in September.

The estate of Durris, on Deeside, was recently exposed to public sale at £270,000, and was afterwards sold privately.

It is said that out of a population of 60,000 in the Orkneys no fewer than 12,000 are professional seamen and boys.

The Lord Mayor of London said at Edinburgh that he had the highest possible admiration for Scotchmen, and he had married a lady who was all but Scottish, for she was descended from the Macdonalds of Ayr.

Lord Shand, of the First Division of the Court of Session, Edinburgh, has resigned. He was a judge for eighteen years.

At Neuendorf, Prussia, the lightning fired the gable end of a barn where a pair of storks had built their nest for years. The flames soon caught the nest in which the brood was screaming, but the mother stork, refusing to leave, spread her wings over the young ones and was burnt alive.

The St. James' Gazette makes the statement that there is a schism in the English Church as to what one's ghost is, one side holding that it has an existence of its own, and can walk abroad as it likes, the other party thinking that it is begotten by the relation between the minds of two living persons—that it is, in fact, a "co-operative hallucination."

One cannot speak or work against the Church in Russia. A Luthern pastor, of Riga, called the Greek Church a "heathen church" and confirmed a girl belonging to the orthodox faith, and he was condemned by the District Court to the loss of all private rights and privileges, with banishment to the Province of Perm, without leave of absence from the place where he lives for a period of two years. He was prohibited from entering other provinces for a further period of ten years, and excluded for another term of ten years from the capitals and from the Governments in which they lie.
