Three months ago incendiary fires were started in Sandwich, and since then ten houses have been destroyed, in two instances nearly resulting in loss of life. The fires have invariably been started in vacant buildings. On Thursday morning the firebugs committed another of their fiendish acts, and as a result the handsome brick Roman Catholic school was burned to the ground. It adjoins the residence of Inspector Girardot, and it was first noticed to be on fire about midnight. The villagers turned out, but the waterworks are not yet completed and the only thing they had for protection was the bucket brigade. Nothing in the building was saved and the loss will foot up nearly $3,000; partially insured.

The master-in-chambers has given judgment at Osgoode Hall in the interpleader action of Miss Margaret Roddy and Joseph Leah. This was a contest as to who should get $1,000, the amount of a benefit certificate in the Order of Chosen Friends, which the late Daniel Leah carried on his life. Daniel Leah was engaged to be married to Miss Roddy, and the couple were to have been made man and wife last September. In June Leah insured his life for $1,000 in a secret society order, and made the certificate payable to his wife, saying to the secretary, as he paid a year's premium in advance, that it would be but a couple of months when Miss Roddy would be his wife. In August he went to a picnic at Embro, with his betrothed, and was drowned. Miss Roddy claimed the $1,000, and so did Joseph Leah, the brother of deceased. The master ruled that as the policy was made payable to a person who did not in law exist at the time, nor have an existence now, this money must be paid to Joseph Leah, the brother of deceased, for distribution among his relatives. To pay the money to Miss Roddy, the master ruled, would be to admit that Miss Roddy was the widow of deceased.

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Mr. Hiscox Replies.

To the Editor of the ADVERTISER:

In your issue of to-night I noticed a letter signed May R. Thornley, who says she had hoped that this municipal campaign would come to a close without her being forced into print. I was surprised on reading a letter on the subject at this late hour. No doubt she was fully aware that no answer could appear in print that the masses of the people would read before the election takes place. Anybody who does that with that view is a coward; and anybody who says that I am not interested in any good measure for anything that will be of benefit to the city of London says what is untrue. I nominated Mr. Essery, and I had as much right to do so as May R. Thornley had to write a letter to the ADVERTISER. I can write this, and do write it, with as few unkind thoughts as May R. Thornley. Yours respectfully,

GEORGE T. HISCOX.
