

It Lasts as Long as the Building

Once walls and ceilings are perfected with Beaver Board, you have finished with them for good. They will last as long as the building.

Joined with ease and simplicity of use and with beauty and charm of result, this quality makes Beaver Board the logical material for all walls and ceilings.

No more soiled wall paper. No more cracked and falling plaster. But walls and ceilings which meet the most modern ideas of home decoration.

Beaver Board is quickly nailed to old walls or to new partitions. No muss or litter. No waiting for plaster to dry.

The result is sure—provided genuine Beaver Board is used with the Beaver Quality trade-mark plainly printed on the back of every panel. This trade-mark of good building material is also on Vulcanite Roofing—an insurance of better roofs. Beaver Board and Vulcanite Roofing are sold by lumber and building material dealers.

Think It Over.

Do your ceilings now with Beaver Board.

About nine dollars worth of Beaver Board will do your ceiling.

You wouldn't object to paying $9 or even twice as much for a nice rug for your floor.

Even the best rug will be worn out after five or ten years, but a Beaver Board ceiling will last as long as your house.

A Beaver Board ceiling won't crack like plaster, and won't show unsightly seams like pitch pine. A Beaver Board ceiling is worth looking at.

If you want draught-proof--dust proof--easily-cleaned--attractive walls, do them with Beaver Board.

Beaver Boards can be had 32 inches and 48 inches wide and 8, 9, 10 and 12 feet long. The only tools required to work with Beaver Board are a hammer and saw.

Any intelligent carpenter will tell you "Beaver Board is BETTER than ordinary Wall Board."

On the back of every genuine Beaver Board you'll find the BEAVER QUALITY trade mark. Take care to look for it. Don't accept imitations.

Carpentier Has Boosted Boxing.

New York.—W. B. "Bat" Masterson, writing in the Morning Telegraph, says: "Old 'Campaigner' who contributed a column or two to the Winning Post, one of London's leading sporting publications, pays Georges Carpentier a glowing tribute in one of his recent articles in the Winning Post. Old 'Campaigner' avows that he'll have as much as a 'Pony' ($25) on the European champion if he wins the Dempsey for the World's Heavyweight Championship. In his appreciation, to the French champion, Old 'Campaigner' says:

"I have thought fit to write about Carpentier, because during the past few days I have seen much of him. I am not sufficient of a 'rubbish' writer to ask you to believe that he is near to being invincible; were I disposed I could trot out the names of many of our fellows of another day who would probably have been in him in quick sticks, but I have never happened across a pugilist during the all too many years I have been associated with the game who lives by fighting, with a personality so rare.

"At Antree, recently, I could not help remarking as I saw Carpentier in Lord Derby's box, how mighty different these days he from those who have gone. If anybody had come along and said that a pugilist would be invited to be of such a party as that, which included the King and Queen, you would have recommended to him a course of brain scraping.

"Yet Carpentier, professional fighting man though he is, was not out of his place at the National, and such is his personality and his great good sense, that it came to be accepted as a matter of course that he would be asked to spar at Knowsley, before their Majesties, and all the distinguished guests of Lord Derby.

"There is no denying it that possible world's champion, or just a good average scrap.—I personally think he is ever so much more than any other man in history. He has never missed a single opportunity to prove that a pugilist is a human being.

When one comes to consider his early youth (he was at work before he was in his teens) pleased to earn five francs a march, it is really wonderful how he has acquired the polish, the tact and the learning he has.

"Be his boxing and fighting ability what it might, I shall always say of the Frenchman that he is a living example of what even a pugilist can be—a man in the best and highest sense. As did the King at Knowsley. I wish him luck in all that he does and attempts to do."

The Contagion of Fear.

One firm finds itself making smaller profits for a time, so cuts down its staff. Immediately some other firm, disturbed by this evidence of business falling off either in its own line or some other, follows suit, and, having a bigger staff, discharges more. The contagion continues to spread, and yet others fall into line and reduce the number of employees. As a result times grow harder rather than less hard. The dismissed employees cease to be effective factors in buying, and still other lines of business feel the depression. At the same time there is no visible retrenchment in the extravagance of the employers' living. The full weight seems to fall on the employee, who, having nothing but his employment, has taken from him "even that which he hath." Much of this condition is caused by unreasoning fear, the things that kills the soul, destroys community of feeling, makes men selfish, willing and anxious to trample others under foot to maintain their own hold on the good things of life. Fear, than poverty itself is the fear of poverty. It is time that hope and courage supplanted fear and that employers retain their employees even though it mean self-denial and retrenchment.—Halifax Echo.
