HEALTH OR SICKNESS!

CHOOSE BETWEEN THEM.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS

The blood furnishes the material of every bone, muscle, gland and fibre in the human frame. When pure, it secures health to every organ it necessarily produces disease. HOLLOWAY'S PILLS operate directly upon the elements of the stream of life, neutralizing the principle of disease, and thus radically curing the malady, whether located in the nerves, the stomach, the liver, the bowels, the muscles, the skin, the brain, or any other part of the system.

USED THROUGHOUT THE WORLD.

HOLLOWAY'S PILLS are equally efficacious in complaints common to the whole human race and in disorders peculiar to certain climates and localities.

ALARMING DISORDERS.

Dyspepsia, and derangement of the liver, the source of infirmity and suffering, and the cause of innumerable deaths, yield to these curatives, in all cases, however aggravated, acting as a mild purgative, alternative and tonic; they relieve the bowels, purify the fluids, and invigorate the ystem and the constitution at the same time.

GENERAL WEAKNESS—NERVOUS COMPLAINTS.

When all stimulants fail, the renovating and bracing properties of these Pills give firmness to the shaking nerves and enfeebled muscles of the victim of general debility.

DELICATE FEMALES.

All irregularities and ailments incident to the delicate and sensitive organs of the sex are removed or prevented by a few doses of these mild, but infallible alteratives. No mother who regards her own or her children's health should fail to have them within her reach.

SCIENTIFIC ENDORSEMENTS.

The London "Lancet," the London "Medical Review," and the most eminent of the faculty in Great Britain, France and Germany, have eulogized the Pills and their inventor.

Holloway's Pills are the best remedy known in the world for the following diseases:

Asthma	Female Complaints	Piles
Bowel Complaints		Stone and Gravel
Coughs	Heaches
Colds	Indigestion	Secondary Symptoms

31, Wine street, Bristol.

SIR,—It is with much pleasure I have to inform you of the benefit I received from your Lozenges. I was attacked with the typhus fever, during which time I had a violent cough, so that it kept me awake the greater part of the night. A friend persuaded me to try a box of your "COUGH LOZENGES" which I did and am happy to say that with only one box of your valuable compound I was quite free from cough.

You can make what use of this you please, for I think such valuable medicine ought not to go unnoticed.

I remain, Sir, your obedient Servant,
WM. T. TRUSCOTT.

"I have unexpected news to communicate," said Doctor Selby, as he entered the room where his family were assembled. "Here is a letter from the uncle I have mentioned so frequently, in which he speaks of visiting us in a few weeks."

"How old is he?" asked Mrs. Selby, in reply to his remark.

"Over sixty, probably" rejoined her husband. "Adela was an infant when he left for the western country. He is a physician of considerable celebrity, though now, as he writes, retired from the practice. But here is the letter. Please to read aloud, as the girls will be glad to listen." Mrs. Selby took the proffered letter and then read as follows:

"ST. LOUIS, May 12th, 1851.

"My Dear Nephew,—You will probably be surprised at receiving a letter from one, whom no doubt now seems more like a stranger than a relative. I, as well as yourself, have experienced both happiness and sorrow. An earnest desire to visit the scenes of former life, as well as to see my own relatives, proves too great to resist, and in accordance with a request made long ago, I shall probably be with you in a few weeks. Years by their rapid flight have not left me unchanged.—Lines of care upon my brow, a head with it profusely sprinkled with silver hairs, and that troublesome though common infirmity of age—deafness—rendered it imperatively necessary that my professional duties should be abandoned. I fear, nephew, that the unfortunate circumstance of my loss of hearing will be a troublesome one to your family; but I shall not allow it to deprive me of the pleasure of seeing you once more.

"I am alone in the world. Death has claimed for his own the partner of my joys and sorrows. My children have one by one passed away as the green leaves in the autumn, leaving me, the gray headed old man, in desolate loneliness. But I am writing in a sad strain; I would not murmur at these events, for were they not ordered by a Being of infinite wisdom?

Having been unusually fortunate in my business undertekings, and as nothing is left to detain me here, I shall pass the remaining years of my life in the vicinity of my native place. Remember me kindly to your family, and especially to Adela, who is probably a tall young lady by this time. Hoping I shall soon see you, I remain your affectionate uncle,

WILLIAM R. SELBY."

"He shall have a warm welcome, and we will do all in our power to make him happy. He, too, has not been exempt from the troubles of life," remarked the doctor.

"Yes, father, we will strive to make him forget his sorrows, and feel at home among us," added Adela, a lovely girl of sixteen. "I must immediately practice my songs. Perhaps he may love music."

"He will undoubtedly wish for more substantial amusement than that of listening to the nonsensical prattle of a childish young lady," replied Mrs. Selby with a slight sneer.

"And pray don't put yourself to the trouble of practising, Miss Adela," added Josephine Selby, who was one year her junior. "He would not appreciate it, for the very good reason that he could'nt hear a note."

Adela colored, Mrs. Selby smiled, but the father frowned.

"The words prove your good will, my Adela, though my unfortunate uncle might not be sensible of your kindness. I would I could say as much for Josephine."

"Do not chide her, husband," said Mrs. Selby, "Josephine means well, but her exuberant spirits sometimes lead her into difficulty."

"I wish my relative treated with the greatest possible respect, and while he remains with us his happiness and comfort must be made the chief object. I shall inevitably be absent a great part of the time in attendance upon my patients, and the duties of hospitality will devolve upon my family," replied Doctor Selby, in rather a stern tone.

"And they shall be cheerfully performed," rejoined his wife soothingly.

"Through the liberality of this uncle I obtained a college education, and owing to his influence, I gained a large practice. He presented me with a library, furnished me with funds, and has always manifested a fatherly interest in my welfare and success in life. I can never repay the kindness I have received at his hands, and you may judge whether I do not owe him a debt of gratitude," asked Mr. Selby.

"I imagined your father was in good circumstances," remarked Mrs. Selby. "I think it has been so reported."

"He was at one time," was the reply; "but owing to unforseen circumstances, the property which he had acquired by years of hard labour was swept from his grasp. My uncle said that this event should not hinder me from entering the college, and pursuing the plan that had been first arranged. His conduct was generous and noble, and it was a sad loss, when I was deprived, by his departure, of that advice and society which were so highly prized. He has a fine mind, and his conversation is both instructive and entertaining."

"You have given him a first rate character—I am impatient to see him," said his wife.

This conversation was brought to a close by a message requesting the presence of the doctor.—The latter hastily left the room, and the mother and daughters were alone.

Adela and Josephine were the only children of Doctor Selby, a worthy physician in the town of W———. The present Mrs. Selby was his second wife, the mother of Adela having departed this life when the latter was but a few weeks old. In the course of a year after this event, the doctor discovered that he was very lonely, and longed for the sympathy and society of a companion.—He accordingly married again; but we fear his second choice did not make good the place of the dead wife. He ascertained, as many have done before him, when too late, that no congeniality of thought or disposition existed between them.—She was weak minded, frivolous,—had evidently masked her real character, and taken advantage of the doctor's offers to place herself in a situation which she could not attain under other circumstances. She was not really unkind to Adela, (who was her father's favorite, and the image of his departed wife), but a certain nameless something characterized her conduct to the elder daughter. The doctor's partiality for Adela also aroused her jealousy; but she could not with truth assert that his conduct to Josephine was not kind
