THE SLAUGHTER OF ELEPHANTS

French Explorer Wantonly Killed Six in Four Minutes.

Viscount Du Bour De Bozas Tells of His Hunting Adventures in Wilds of Abyssinia.

Killing six elephants in four minutes is the "record" of elephant slaughter just established by the Viscount du Bour de Bozas, in Abyssinia, as against the record established by Superintendent of Keddars Sanderson, working in the Garrow Hills of India, when he captured 136 of the great creatures in one drive. But between the wanton killing of six such creatures and the capture of 136 for military and other purposes, there is a wide gap toward humanity, which the Frenchman probably has not considered.

Finding six elephants at a water hole to which they had been obliged to come for drink, the Frenchman, waited upon by coolies carrying his express guns loaded to his hand, fired at an average range of 25 feet, knocking over the great brutes with more than the ease that the man with a target rifle shoots rabbits.

And yet, trained to domesticity, any one of these animals might have been given charge of a babe, keeping flies off it, keeping it in bounds of its out-of-door nursery, gentle with it as ever was the child's mother. And one of them could have been set to piling teak, working as men would not have worked; careful always, considerate of the right of way of vehicles and of passers-by—royal to his master and his master's wish.

SIX IN FOUR MINUTES.

And six of these in four minutes! It might be sport in Abyssinia; it is akin to murder as the news of it comes to America. The viscount had an appointment from France to make explorations in Abyssinia, and King Menelek had given full passports to the party. But from the French point of view there was no necessity for elephant shooting; certainly not for six of the animals in four minutes. But this is the viscount's story of it:

"The thorny shrubbery for a time served to conceal my movements, but it was not long before the elephants—by their angry actions—left me in no doubt as to their knowledge of my presence. They snorted and trumpeted, trampled upon the shrubbery about and gave many evidences of fear and rage combined. Then they threw up their trunks, searching the wind, which happily was favorable to me in throwing them off my scent, for I was not 25 feet away from the nearest.

"Then I made up my mind to begin operations. I quickly drew for the sight over my rifle at the nearest elephant and shot twice as quickly as I could pull the trigger, aiming at the thigh and the foreshoulder.

"As the bullets hit him he gave a terrific roar, at which the second elephant turned, and I sent two bullets at him in the same fashion.

"I was not left long in doubt as to the number of elephants in the group after this shot. Three of them seemed to rise out of the horizon. With the brilliant rising sun at their backs and magnifying their size until they looked like mammoths, they charged at me, making strident cries and trumpeting madly in their rage.

FALL OF THE GREAT BEASTS.

"In the unearthly chorus they were joined by the two elephants I had struck. The earth seemed full of elephants, but the two shot at were hard hit and upon the ground. As they fell with mortal wounds they formed a rampart which effectually arrested the furious charge of their enraged companions. In fact, my first two victims stood between me and almost certain death, for I cannot conceive how I could have evaded or withstood the charge of the three had they been given a free highway.

"One of my men handed me a recharged carbine, and, hardly knowing how I did it, I sent eleven balls into the newcomers. I had the greatest relief and satisfaction of seeing all the five elephants die before the smoke of the encounter had lifted."

The sixth elephant, until then unseen, charged, but stopped short of the rifleman, and he, with a reloaded rifle, sent two shots into the great hulk, toppling him over dead.

"It was the sixth and last victim, and I contemplated, at the clearing of the scene, a tableau not often witnessed. Four elephants lay dead in one group. Two others lay a little farther away in the brush.

"The fusillade had not lasted four minutes. But in that time I had lived a century."

This is elephant slaughter—a "tableau" arising out of man's lust of blood. In contrast to it is Sanderson's record as government elephant hunter for India in 1887.

ARMY OF 300 HUNTERS.

It was in the Garrow Hills in that year that Sanderson, from 1,000 coolies applying for position in the great hunt, selected 300 men, choose his leaders for them, and sent them on into the jungles. He followed later, with rations, noise equipments, and the tools for constructing the mighty "keddar" into which the big beasts, then ravaging the rice fields of the settled section, were to be driven. In the woods a second examination of men caused the turning back of the inefficients, and with a small regiment of picked men he pushed on to the Garrow Hills.

The keddar, as constructed, was a giant corral, built of tree trunks, braced and entertwined with saplings, having a drop gate suspended by a rope which one blow of an axe would sever. From this gate wide wings, built of heavy trees spread outward, the jungle inside of them left unmarked by any sign of man. Beyond the ends of these wing walls, however, trees in line with them for many yards were hacked and the jungle brush broken and trampled. This for the reason that a herd of elephants fear such signs almost as much as they fear man himself.

Inside this wide angle of heavy walls converging to the corral gate cross lines of dry grass were stretched and covered with the natural green of the jungle, the purpose being that when the herded creatures should pass these succesive lines of timber they should be fired from behind stampeding the animals into the corral, which had been made further proof against a charge by a circular ditch running all around the inside.

THEIR SAGACITY THEIR UNDOING

The herd being found, the hunters left to the sagacity of the beasts their own capture. For, with outposts here and there, just enough alarm was inspired in the creatures to keep them moving, and just enough of "signs" were left in the jungle to keep them headed for the keddahs. Not until the herd were within the solid walls of the wings was the first row of grass fired. Then natives, shooting muskets, beating drums and clappers and hooting and shouting, closed in behind.

One hundred and thirty-six of the great brutes had stamped past the hidden gatekeeper, when a blow of his axe dropped the last section of the great barrier. One female had escaped by charging the line of fire behind, and she had her revenge two miles back, when, coming upon a native who had been engaged in the hunt, she killed him and trod his body into shapelessness.

Viscount de Bozas' six elephants killed in four minutes, are food for the vultures and carrion-eating animals of the jungle. Some of those entrapped by Sanderson have done noble duty in British campaigns in Asia, establishing for their kind the title of king of beasts.

"SPIRIT" CASE BEFORE A CLEVELAND COURT!

An Alleged Medium Tells About the Tricks of the Trade.

[Cleveland Leader.]

A legal fight for possession of a number of "spirit robes" was started in Justice Morrow's court the other morning.

"I am not a good judge of spirits real, rectified or raw, and have not had much education along the lines of spirit wearing apparel," said Justice Morrow just before the case was called, "but I guess I can take care of it."

The "spirit robes" in question were attached by Constable Ed Peck on replevin papers sworn to by A. J. McIntosh, No. 186 Prospect street. They were found at the home of C. P. Hunger, of the German Spiritualist Association. McIntosh received $50 from Mrs. John Tite, of No. 17 Sayles street, in consideration of developing her as a medium. McIntosh later showed her several white robes and caps on which a chemical solution had been placed so that when exhibited in the dark they would give forth a phosphorescent glow. He told her that this method of materializing spirit forms was used by all mediums. She took the paraphernalia home with her. McIntosh claimed he loaned it to her and wanted it back.

"I had been investigating along spiritualistic lines and got acquainted with McIntosh," said Mrs. Nettie Tite, who was the first witness. 'He told me he could develop me into a medium in two weeks. He said he would do it for $50, and that I could then go to the camp meetings and make the money. Later I gave him the money and asked to be instructed in the phenomena. He asked me what I wanted and I asked that he instruct me in regard to materialization, slate work, independent writing and the materialization of flowers. By materialization I meant the appearance of the form of some dead friend or relative. McIntosh gave me five sittings. The first time I was alone and his wife and children formed the circle."

"What was done the first time?" asked Attorney Hart.

"Well, the circle was formed and I saw what looked like spirits," the witness replied. "They had the names of George McLean, Shoo Fly, Nellie and Lillie, and some of them talked like children. I saw McIntosh go into the cabinet, a curtain stretched across one corner of the room. I heard him slapping himself and making believe an Indian was bringing him out of his trance."

"What did the Indian say?" asked Hart.

"Well, McIntosh made noises like an Indian," said Mrs. Tite.

"What are Indian noises? I never heard any Indian noises. Imitate it," said Hart.

"Hoot, hoot," said Mrs. Tite.

"That isn't Indian, that's Scotch," said Hart. Those in the court room were convulsed.

"Every one in the circle held hands, didn't they?" inquired Attorney Myler.

"Yes, those in the circle held hands from a battery," replied the witness.

McIntosh was next placed on the witness stand. He said he had told Mrs. Tite that he could develop her into a medium in two weeks.

"I gave her several sittings," said McIntosh, "and then explained to her the method of doing the business. I told her that if she followed the business she would have to get up and hustle instead of sitting quiet in the cabinet. She looked around and said: 'Where are the spirits?' I said, 'There isn't any.' I said that I had never seen any, and then produced the robes and showed her what had made the spirits. She said: 'Is it possible that I have been fooled all this time about these materializations?' I said that this was all there was to it."

"Tell us just how you performed a seance."

"Well, I was in my stocking feet and had my coat off. I took off my vest and had on a black shirt. I stepped into the cabinet, which was merely a dark piece of cloth strung across a corner of the room. I put on one of the robes and stood outside the cabinet. I made only one form appear at that time, but the next time I made three. I would put a cap on each hand and wear the robe. I couldn't make more than three forms appear at one time. When persons asked if the form was such and such a person, I would nod my head."

"Did you ever see a genuine materialization?" asked Hart.

"No; I never saw any that were more genuine than the ones I took part in."

Horse Sense.

"Any fool can take a horse to water, but it takes a wise man to make him drink," says the proverb. The horse eats when hungry and drinks when thirsty. A man eats and drinks by the clock, without regard to the needs of nature. Because of careless eating and drinking "stomach trouble" is one of commonest of diseases. Sour and bitter risings, belchings, unnatural fulness after eating, dizziness, headache, and many other symptoms mark the beginning and progress of disease of the stomach.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It cures through the stomach diseases of other organs which have their origin in a diseased condition of the stomach, and allied organs of digestion and nutrition. It strengthens the stomach, purifies the blood, cures obstinate cough and heals weak lungs.

"I was taken with Grippe, which resulted in heart and stomach trouble," writes Mr. T. R. Caudill, Moutland, Alleghaney Co., N. C. "I was unable to do anything a good part of the time. I wrote to Dr. Pierce about my condition, having full confidence in his medicine. He advised me to take his 'Golden Medical Discovery,' which I did. Before I had finished the second bottle I began to feel better. I have used nearly six bottles. I feel thankful to God for the benefit I have received from Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. I can highly recommend it to all persons as a good and safe medicine."

PARLIAMENT CLOSES TODAY

A Grant of $50,000 for Earthquake Victims Passed.

Several Government Bills Dropped—Mr. Sutherland's Plans for St. Lawrence Navigation.

Ottawa, May 14.—Rapid progress was made in the House of Commons today. Prorogation of parliament is fixed for tomorrow afternoon, at 3 o'clock. Several measures, which the government had not intended pressing this session, but were simply introduced for the purpose of giving notice to the house, were held over until next session.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier informed the house that he desired to take advantage of the opportunity of giving an answer to the numerous applications which have been made for assistance to railway construction. The government, he said, had determined not to ask parliament this session for an appropriation for that object.

In committee on ways and means, Hon. Mr. Fielding's resolution extending the period of the time for the free admission of machinery used in the manufacture of beet root sugar for one year until April 1, 1903, was adopted.

INTERCOLONIAL EXTENSION.

This afternoon Mr. Charles Marcil, M. P. (Bonaventure), in view of the action of the senate in rejecting the Gaspe and Western Railway bill, asked the government during the recess to consider the advisability of extending the Intercolonial to Paspebiac, on the Bay des Chaleur, utilizing the Atlantic and Lake Superior Railway. Thus an open ocean port would be available practically all the year.

Mr. Lemieux (Gaspe) questioned the feasibility of navigation of the Bay des Chaleur throughout the winter. Mr. Lemieux desired to see a better winter steamship service to his constituency.

Sir Richard Cartwright called attention to the difference of view as to winter navigation. He thought that the government might be able to arrange an improvised steamship service to Gaspe.

ST. LAWRENCE NAVIGATION.

At 4:40 the house went into supply on the few remaining items of the supplementary estimates. Upon the item of $280,000 for improvements in the aids to navigation on the St. Lawrence, Hon. Mr. Sutherland said that the rates of insurance upon ships on that route were from two to five times as much as from competing United States ports. This proved a severe handicap to the producers of Canada, and the representatives of the shipping interests, as well as of the marine insurance companies, had represented that a material reduction could be obtained by improving the aids to navigation. Mr. Sutherland enumerated the various improvements contemplated, which included more powerful light and fog signals at all important points, and placed upon the table maps showing the location of the works. Thorough investigations regarding the tides and currents around Cape Race and other dangerous points was, Mr. Sutherland said, to be made at once.

Mr. A. A. Bell (Pictou) expressed pleasure that the minister of marine and fisheries had taken a sufficient amount of money to render the southeast coast of Newfoundland comparatively safe, as that was the danger-point in the St. Lawrence route.

RELIEF FOR VICTIMS OF EARTHQUAKE.

Hon. W. S. Fielding handed to the speaker a message from the governor-general, transmitting a further supplementary estimate, and the house went into committee of supply. In committee Mr. Fielding explained that the supplementary estimate was for $50,000 for the relief of the sufferers by the volcanic disasters in the West Indies. "We have," he said, "all had our attention drawn by the press to the story of the appalling disaster which has fallen on the French Island of Martinique, and to the distaster, perhaps not so great, but of a very serious character, which has fallen upon the neighboring British Island of St. Vincent. The whole world is moved to sympathy by this terrible circumstance, and there seems to be a general desire that aid should be given to those who are suffering in consequence. It is thought well that the government of Canada should contribute to this relief fund. We have therefore presented to the house an estimate appropriating the sum of $50,000 for the relief of the sufferers from the volcanic disasters in the West Indies. We propose that one-half of that sum shall be at once supplied to the relief funds for the island in which the greatest disaster has occurred, the Island of Martinique. As respects the balance, it will either, in whole or in part, be applied to the relief of the sufferers in the Island of St. Vincent.

Mr. R. L. Borden fully concurred, and supported the action of the government in asking parliament to make the appropriation.

The item was put through, and the house adjourned at 10:25 p.m.

A NEW YORK WOMAN IS TURNING BLACK

Victim of an Incurable Disease—A Study for the Doctors.

N Y WOMAN wn,6..e v*ffl bro..6 ..6

New York, May 15.—Suffering from Addison's disease, an exceedingly rare ailment, Mrs. Catherine Blosisi, 44 years old, of No. 333 East One Hundred and Fifteenth street, was taken to Bellevue Hospital Tuesday. This is only the third case of the kind, which the institution has had in all the years of its existence. The disease affects the kidneys, and the sufferer turns first yellow and then to a deep bronze color, almost black.

Mrs. Blosisi, whose body is very dark now, was taken to the hospital by her husband, Dominick. He said the disease first became known about four months ago, when his wife's skin began to change color. The skin was not affected in spots, but all at once, and it gradually became yellow. The woman paid no attention to it for a long time, as she felt no pain then, nor now, though she is weak.

Dr. Jones diagnosed the ailment as Addison's disease, the name coming from its discoverer, Dr. Addison, Dr. Jones added that it was generally fatal. Because of its rarity and the consequent lack of means of experiment and study no cure for it is known. There is seldom any pain, the patient wasting away from languor or lassitude.

The Death Roll.

King City, May 14.—J. W. Crossley, reeve of King township, a lifelong Reformer, and brother of Evangelist H. T. Crossley and Rev. D. O. Crossley, passed away at his residence early on Saturday morning, aged 61. He will be much missed in the town, among the Masons, in which craft he was master, and in the Liberal party, of which he was a consistent member. He leaves a widow and five children. The funeral was largely attended, the council members acting as pall-bearers.

VOLCANIC VIOLENCE.

Omaha, Neb., May 14.—According to dispatches received from Panader, Mount Lena, Nebraska's miniature volcano, has been for two days sending up smoke and steam. The volcano is situated on the Missouri River, in Cedar county, about 150 miles above Omaha, and has been practically dead for 30 years. Reports say that all the settlers in the immediate neighborhood are preparing to move. Geologists have said the smoke is caused by water from the Missouri sweeping into the limestone rock formation of the mountain, but the people are fearful of an eruption.

IN MEXICO, TOO.

Guadalajara, Mexico, May 14.—The Colima volcano shows strong indications of a great eruption, and the inhabitants living in the valley at its base are moving to a safe distance from the peak, from which smoke and puffs of flame have been belching for several days. Mount Colima has threatened renewed activity for several weeks, its condition causing the work of constructing the extension of the Mexican Central Railroad to Mansanillo, passing near the base of the mountain, to cease temporarily. The route of the extension will probably be changed in order to avoid any possible disaster that an eruption might bring.

PROOF IS EASY TO FIND.

One thing of great importance discovered by the manufacturers of Malt Breakfast Food, is a practical way of combining the vegetable digestive agent, Malt Diastase with the choicest quality of Wheat.

The action of the Malt on the starch of the grain supplies the action in which the weakened stomach is defective, and the result is restored digestion, new health and greater strength.

While thousands of dyspeptics and strong people have given the most convincing testimony as to the superiority of Malt Breakfast Food over all other breakfast foods, the following letter from the celebrated Webster Edgerly, president of the Ralston Health Club, is worthy of the special notice of all who would eat to live happily:

"Your Malt Breakfast Food was duly received and tested. We think you have the best breakfast food for imparting strength that has yet been made. We wish all you can send us to give away for trial. We will soon displace all oatmeal and other foods in the market within our reach."
