A VILE ARTICLE.

Why Friday's Issue of United Ireland was Seized.

Maude Gonne Makes a Vicious Attack in it and Her Majesty.

New York, April 7.—According to the Dublin correspondent of the World the copy of the United Irishmen, which was seized contained the following extracts from an article by Maud Gonne, entitled "The Famine Queen:"

"In truth, for Victoria, in the decrepitude of her 81 years, to have decided, after an absence of half a century, to revisit the country she hates, whose inhabitants are the victims of the criminal policy of her reign, the political necessity must have been terribly strong, for after all she is a woman, and, however vile, selfish and pitiless her soul, she must sometimes tremble as death approaches when she thinks of the countless Irish mothers who, shelterless and watching their starving little ones, have cursed her before they died.

"Every eviction during 63 years has been carried out in Victoria's name, and if there is justice in heaven the shame of poor Irish emigrant girls, whose very innocence renders them an easy prey, and who have been overcome in the terrible struggle for existence on a foreign shore, will fall on this woman, whose nourgeois virtue is so boasted and in whose name their homes were destroyed. Taking the shamrock in her withered hand, she dares to ask Ireland for soldiers to protect the exterminators of their race."

Origin of the Wedding Ring.

According to legend Jupiter sent to Prometheus in honor of his deliverance by Hercules a ring in which was set a piece of the stone to which Prometheus had formerly been bound in chains.

In Northern mythology the ring symbolizes the bridge from this world to the next, or, according to another idea, the rainbow symbol of eternity. Hence it is plain that from most ancient times the ring was the symbol of remembrance and eternal recollection. Since the earliest days of Christianity the ring has been a precious pledge of faithfulness, the talisman of two souls forming a sacred life union.

The custom of wearing the wedding ring on the fourth finger of the left hand goes back for its origin to the Egyptians, from whom the Greeks borrowed the custom and handed it on to the Romans. The fourth finger was dedicated to Apollo, the sun god, and gold was an additional symbol of the sun. Besides, it was believed that Apollo's finger was connected by a nerve directly with the heart, and it was most appropriate that the sign of loving union should rest on this finger.

Another theory is that the ring was the sign of slavery, and was, therefore, worn on the left, the weaker, hand. In Germany the engagement ring often serves for the wedding ring also, being worn on the right hand until the marriage, when it is transferred to the left. In Spain the engagement ring is most ornate and is invariably worn on the fourth finger of the right hand.

Onions Gone to Seed.

A party of young men and women were bicycling along a Weld county road. It was a sketching class, and every eye was wide open for an artistic subject. Suddenly the whole party dismounted with various exclamations of delight and surprise. Just within the fence on the left grew innumerable graceful stalks, each bearing aloft globes of pale green that shaded into gray and purple. "How enchanting," said a young woman. "How decorative," said a young man. "Just what we are looking for," said the teacher, who was a full fledged artist. A gardener was standing near at hand. "Do tell us," cried a girl, what those beauoo-tiful things are?" "Which?" replied the gardner. "Why, those," said the girl. "Them?" said the gardener, with a chuckle. "Them's onions gone to seed."

The Ungainly Adjutant-Bird.

"The plainest of the large wading birds to be seen in many of our zoological gardens is the adjutant, a native of India and Africa," remarked a naturalist. "Nature seems to have designed him in an experimental mood, and, disgusted with her handiwork, to have turned him out unfinished. The young adjutant, with his bald head and beak like a pickaxe, is repulsively ugly, and the melancholy gravity of his demeanor suggests that he has seen himself mirrored in some still pond, and the revelation is weighing upon his mind.

"As he grows older, however, and begins to take a lively interest in dead rats, the effect of the shock to his vanity passes away. He becomes jaunty—nay, frivolous—and in sheer lightness of heart attends dancing parties on the mud slopes of his enclosure, where he ducks and bows and kicks and scrapes with half-distended wings, to the admiration of his feathered companions. All the cranes and storks are great dancehs, and in the early pairing season you may see really graceful terpischorean performances in the paddock of any zoo where they are on exhibition. An elderly adjutant practising his steps all by himself is a spectacle the sympathetic observer can hardly regard without mingled laughter and tears. He is so awkward, so ungainly, yet so cheerfully earnest about it, you are sorry for the deluded bird, and yet canrot refrain from hoping that the heart of the hen adjutant will be moved by the pathetic display of inaptitude."

The life of a man upon this earth is made up for the most part of little pains and little pleasures. The great wonder-flowers bloom but once in a lifetime.

The affections themselves carry ever an appetite to good, as reason doth; the difference is that the affection beholdeth merely the present, reason beholdeth the future and sum of times.

ITCHING LIMBS

For Three Years. Nights Itching and Burning Terrible.

Wife Suggests CUTICURA. Uses it. Presto! What a Change.

Feels Like Kicking Doctors for Three Years' Suffering.

The itching and burning I suffered in my feet and limbs for three years were terrible. At night they were worse, and would keep me awake a greater part of the night. I consulted doctor after doctor, as I was travelling on the road most of my time, also one of our city doctors. None of the doctors knew what the trouble was. I got a lot of the different samples of the medicines I had been using. I found them of so many different kinds, that I concluded I would have to go to a Cincinnati hospital before I would get relief. I had frequently been urged to try CUTICURA REMEDIES, but I had no faith in them. My wife finally prevailed upon me to try them. Presto! What a change. I am now cured, and it is a permanent cure. I feel like kicking some doctor or myself for suffering three years when I could have used CUTICURA remedies.

BABY'S FACE SOLID SORE

My little nephew, John Staunton, was afflicted with the worst sores I ever saw all over his body. His head and face at times were a solid scab and he suffered dreadfully. He was a pitiable sight. His father used all the remedies that he heard of, and doctored with all the doctors. He wore a tar cap, also, which did no good, but got no relief until he used the CUTICURA (ointment) and CUTICURA SOAP. Now he is a clean, healthy child.

CUTICURA

That is to say, CUTICURA RESOLVENT, greatest of blood purifiers and humor expellers, purifies the blood and circulating fluids of HUMOR GERMS, and thus removes the cause, while warm baths with CUTICURA SOAP, and gentle anointings with CUTICURA (ointment), greatest of emollient skin cures, cleanse the skin and scalp of crusts and scales, allay itching, burning, and inflammation, soothe and heal. Thus are speedily, permanently, and economically cured the most torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin, scalp, and blood, with loss of hair, when all other remedies fail.

The outlook for the summer season indicates even a greater rage for elegant diaphanous materials in black than existed last summer.

A grain of seed in the eye can cause excruciating agony. A grain of pepper in place of the grain of sand intensifies the torment. The pain is not confined to the organs affected. The whole body feels the shock of that little irritating particle. It is so when there is any derangement or disorder of the delicate womanly organs. The disorder may seem trivial but the whole body feels it. The nervous system is disordered. There are fretfulness, irritability, sullenness and depression of spirits. The general health of woman depends on the local health of the organs peculiarly feminine. Remove the drains, ulcerations, bearing down pains, and other afflictions of woman, and the whole body feels the benefit. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a specific for the diseases that undermine the strength of women. It is free from opium, cocaine and other narcotics, poisons which enter into many other preparations for woman's use. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

It is rumored that sage green foulards, figured with white, will take the place this spring of the ever popular bright blue ones.

REILLY'S YELLOW DOG.

The Benevolent Young Physician Has a Lesson in the Value of Experience

He was a young physician with a ground-floor office in the poorer quarter of his city, a good deal of leisure on his hands and a youthful desire to do good. So when the Reillys, who lived around the corner in a shanty which had never seen better days, moved out of the neighborhood leaving their yellow dog behind, the doctor said it was a mean shame and called the dog into his office and patted him on the head. One such call was enough to make a yellow dog who was used to living out of a garbage pail firm in the belief that he had found a friend.

With July came the time for the young physician to take his annual vacation—annual because he meant to make it so, counting this as the first. He explained this to the druggist whose prescription blanks he used, when he used any. And the druggist said:

"Say, did you notice the Council passed an ordinance last night about shooting all unmuzzled dogs found on the street?"

He said this because wherever the young doctor was there, too, was Reilly's yellow dog.

"The annual rabies scare is on," said the doctor, with all the medical man's scorn of hydrophobia.

"I expect the Reilly dog will have to go," observed the druggist.

The doctor put his hand into his pocket and jingled a quarter against a half. "No, he won't," came in a decisive tone. "I like that dog. I'm going to get a muzzle for him myself and put it on before I leave," and his heart expanded as only the prospect of committing a good action can cause it to expand.

When the young physician returned from his vacation he was surprised to observe that there was a sneer behind the smile with which the druggist greeted him. This was ill-befitting the meeting of friends. Something made him think of Reilly's dog.

"Where's the dog?" he suddenly asked.

The druggist grinned. Then he asked: "Say, did you ask any one to take that muzzle off once in a while and feed him while you were gone?"

The doctor's face fell. "No," he said, "I forgot that. Where, where is he?" he faltered.

Sausage now," said the druggist, turning away to wait on a customer. In a few minutes he came back.

"That's the way you blamed philanthropists always do things," he said, savagely. "I'll be blessed if I don't think people and things would get along a lot better without you."

The doctor looked glum. "There's something in what you say," he admitted humbly, "but physicians and philanthropists have to get their experience somehow."

A Reasonable Request.

Uncle Mose—Yaas, chillun, in de old days when der wuz ghosts an' witches an' hogoblins—

Unconquered.

"Pooh! pooh! my dear, that's perfect nonsense," snorted Mr. Enbody, superciliously. "Somebody must have broken the vase, of course."

"Well, no one will own up to it," replied his wife, defensively.

"That's because you have not interrogated them in the proper manner. Women lack that firm persistence, that adamantine resolution not to be fooled or foiled, that irresistible determination requisite to extract the truth from an unwilling witness. Give him the impression that you can neither be balked nor misled and the most stubborn will soon yield to your invincible will. It is simply an illustration of the power exerted by a greater intellect over a lesser," dissertated Mr. Enbody, loftily.

"Yes, I presume so," assented his wife, a faint smile flickering momentarily about her mouth. "Suppose you try."

"So I will, madam, so I will," asserted Mr. Enbody, leaving the room with the step of a conquering hero elect.

After a considerable interval he returned, sank into his chair, picked up his paper and resumed his reading; all this without a word, and with a slight frown interrupting the placidity of his expression.

"Well, did your 'greater intellect' find out who broke the vase?"

"I did, madame. I found it out by the legitimate logical process called elimination, and I find beyond dispute that I broke it."

"Why you couldn't have,' cried the bewildered Mrs. Enbody. "You weren't here, and"——

"Nevertheless I did," affirmed Mr. Enbody. "I find that the cook didn't, the waitress didn't, the nurse didn't, the children didn't, and you didn't; that leaves but one person in this household who did, and that is I. Of course I'll replace it," he concluded, hastily retiring behind his paper as his wife seemed on the point of saying something.

She Had to Interrupt.

"We might just as well come to an understanding right now," said the angry husband. "It's hard for you to hear the truth, especially from me, but—"

"Indeed it is,' interrupted the patient wife. "I hear it so seldom."

A Change of Affix.

"When you married you thought your husband a demi-god?"

"Yes."

"And now?"

"Now he reminds me more of a demijohn!"
