CORRESPONDENCE

WALTHAM, Jan. 9th, 1882.

To the Editor of the Post:

SIR,—I receive a copy of your paper occasionally from a relative living in this place. Conspicuous in the most interesting and best conducted paper that the Province of New Brunswick produces, I notice a good deal of much interested in the development of the resources of this province, and wishing to make some enquiries, I felt that I could not get them more truthfully and detailed than through those columns of your paper, that is based in the interests of same and every enterprise coming from New Brunswick to the United States, bringing memories of the best portions of our country. There are in Massachusetts to-day thousands of men and women, young men and women, leaving their friends to come to a strange place to seek for employment to earn money. Some for the sake of having what they call a good time spending it, others for the sake of dress and finery; but I am glad to say the majority of them, for the sake of helping their struggling parents to feed and clothe a large family, or to pay off a mortgage that may be upon the old homestead, and save it from the hammer of the auctioneer. Now why can they not do this at home in New Brunswick as well as here. It is not because the climate is not good, for there is not a better climate between Abenaki and California. It is not because the land is bad, for there is just as good land there for general purposes, as you will find anywhere else. It is not because it is difficult to obtain land, for there is no government under the sun that has made it so easy to obtain land, as you can under the laws of New Brunswick. It is not because there is no employment for skilled or unskilled labor, for the friends of Confederation promised that under Confederation the people should have all the employment and good times that they could wish for and more too.

Now, Mr. Editor, if some of your readers would please answer this question, I would be under great obligations to them.

I am, sir,
Your obdt. servt.,
RICHMUCTO.

No More Hard Times.

If you will stop spending so much on fine clothes, rich food and style, buy good healthy food, cheaper and better clothing, get more real and substantial things of life every way, and especially stop the foolish habit of employing expensive quack doctors or using so much of the vile humbug medicine that does not only harm, and put you back in the battle, pure remedy, Hop Bitters that cures always at a trifling cost, you will see good times and have good health.—Chronicle

Loss of Appetite in Children.

FROM CHARLES H. COLGATE, Manufacturer of Flavoring Extracts, 21 Blackstone street, Boston.

"Last Spring my little daughter, aged five, became very much emaciated with loss of appetite, and very great prostration of strength, so much so that we were obliged to take her out of school. This continued through the summer and caused us much anxiety. After trying various remedies without deriving any benefit, our family physician recommended the use of PERUVIAN SYRUP. After using it one week we saw a marked improvement in the children's condition, and in a month she was rapidly gaining in health and strength, her appetite being excellent. At this date she is perfectly well, with round, plump cheeks, and healthy color, and and is again attending school regularly. I consider her restoration entirely due to the PERUVIAN SYRUP, and feel that I cannot too highly recommend it as a tonic."—Druggists sell PERUVIAN SYRUP.

Who Does?

Every person who has used it speaks in the highest terms of PUTNAM'S PAINLESS CORN EXTRACTOR. The press speaks well of it. Clergyman, lawyers, doctors and the people generally all speak well of it. Buy Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor and you will speak of it properly the same. Look out for the article "just as good." Ask for Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor. Safe, sure, painless. Be sure and take no other than Putnam's Corn Extractor. It is the only reliable.

Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer is no new preparation for the public to experiment with; its success is unparalleled for restoring gray hair to its natural color, promoting its growth, and producing new hair on bald heads.

Joseph Bessan, Percy, writes—"I was induced to try Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil for a lameness which troubled me for three or four years, and I found it the best article I ever tried. It has been a great blessing to me."

The celebrated author, in this admirable Essay clearly demonstrates, from thirty years' successful practice, that alarming consequences may be radically cured without the dangerous use of internal medicine or the use of the knife; pointing out a mode of cure at once simple, certain and effectual, by means of which every sufferer, no matter what his condition may be, may cure himself cheaply, privately and radically.

MADEMOISELLE CELINE.

"If you please, sir," said Cissy, with a little courtesy, "I am the girl that dances."

Mr. Pinkard laid down his cigar, turned his revolving chair around with a twist, and stared hard at the new comer.

"You, said he. 'Nonsense!'

For when Mr. Pinkard, the manager of the modest little travelling theatrical company, had replied to the New York agency for a first-class "dancer" to play the various roles demanded by the repertoire, he had expected to see a far different sort of person from the little girl in the neat brown cotton dress, the tie of red ribbon around her neck, and the brown cotton gloves mending carefully on the finger ends. Mdlle. Celine had been a large young woman with a dazzling complexion, blonde hair, a pink complexion and a great deal of jewelry, which she displayed on all occasions.

"But, please, sir," said Cissy, "Here is a note from Simpson & Co."

"You a dancer!" said Mr. Pinkard. "Why, you look like no kitchen maid! I wanted a dancer, girl, not a scullery-maid."

Mr. Pinkard flung open the door of his dressing room, and beckoned to a little old man in spectacles who was copying music close to a window there.

"Jochim," said he, "come here a minute with your violin, and play something for this girl—dance."

Little old Mr. Jochim, rousing himself from an apparent trance, hung his whole soul into a wild, swaying sort of measure, one of those sad and tuneless melodies which makes one hear involuntarily the moaning dead graves of Spain. And Cissy—Mdlle. Celine they called her in the letter, and her real name was Celina Stubbs—began instantly to dance.

Very graceful, following the time of the violin, as a reed sways in the autumn wind, she floated to and fro in the room. Mr. Pinkard watched her with sparkling eyes.

"You'll do, Celine, said he. "Yes, I think you'll do!"

But the other members of the company did not receive Mdlle. Celine, with rapturous delight.

"That little dark thing," said Miss Alvarez, who did the "first lady," "with no more complexion than a chestnut!" said Miss Terrine, who came on in the walking parts, where there was a good deal of stalking and very little to say.

"It's an insult to the troupe," said Mr. Montague, who had been cast to the Rollo Poets.

For Cissy, anxious though she was to please, did not seem to harmonize with the others. She did not know how to dirt, and was manifestly horrified when Miss Susanne Sedley told the manager that the reason she wasn't in time on Thursday's rehearsal was because her mother was very sick.

"But you know, Miss Sedley, that isn't true," said Cissy. "You were walking with Signor Chiardi."

"Will you mind your own business, little Miss Meddle?" indignantly demanded the fair Susanne.

So by degrees Cissy fell into disgrace. She danced her exquisite as ever. Nobody could deny that she was a beautiful dancer, but the stage she was ignored in different stages of rudeness by every one and by degrees she fell into a sullen sort of moodiness, and went home speaking to no one, with her head drooping like a broken flower. Mrs. Pinkard, the manager's mother, saw she was decently lodged and cared for at every place through which they passed, but even Mrs. Pinkard, good soul though she was, did not take kindly to the dark-browed silent girl.

"I like people with something to say for themselves," said Mrs. Pinkard. "Mademoiselle Celine is very bold. She looks at you with big eyes like a startled rabbit, and when I spoke to her about her dress—I really is something outlandishly shabby—she began to cry, and said she was saving up all her salary to pay some debts that her father owed when he died! Really she calls herself 18, but I should say she was at least 1000 years old. I do like young people to be young people!" said Mrs. Pinkard, with energy.

But, all the same, Celine's dancing was immensely liked by the public. She was encored every evening—she had flowers thrown to her, which she picked up, saying to herself, "O, how pretty they are, and how expensive they must have been! I would so much rather have had the money;"—and, in fine, the public seemed to be well suited with Mdlle. Celine, and her wild, poetic pasaella. And the more popular she became to audiences, the more the other members of the company held aloof from her!

One evening Celine was dancing in a new part. Mrs. Pinkard herself had helped to dress her. The manager was in a bargaining mood in a neighboring city, so she had very little assistance. She felt the weight of a fresh responsibility.

Celine is a born artist, said Mrs. Pinkard, on the dour way, as she put the most of her luxuriant hair and the rich complexion that was

Mrs. Pinkard was sitting in the little dressing room, waiting for Celine to come on. But Celine herself had vanished from the stage in a cloud of star-spangled white gauze, with a city silver wand held high above her head. I don't know, I don't know, said Mrs. Pinkard, there was a blinding flash of brilliance across the footlights, which did not come from the foot-lights, to vanish as suddenly and mysterious as it came, leaving a dazzling cloud of rolling smoke.

One of the scene-shifters had carelessly rolled a lighted cigar-end which dropped behind one of the scenes. The inflammable material had caught fire, and the whole building blazed up like so much tinder, and the whole building was in a blaze before the audience were well clear of it. The terrified people turned out into the bitter sleet of the frozen winter night in their velvet and tinsel dress as they were—some in gauze, some in their cloaks over their tulle, stage jewels, red, in white, alright—and not till they were all out in the street did anyone notice that Mrs. Pinkard was not among the number.

Celine, in her dressing room, swung back on the gauze, and seemed to rent the vault of heaven itself. "Oh God have mercy upon us, she will be burned to death!"

People looked with white, appalled faces at each other. In the hurry and confusion, and almost simultaneously with the manager himself, who arrived by a late train, hurried upon the scene.

"My mother, he shrieked. My mother! They tell me she is inside the blazing theatre—they tell me she is burned to death."

"She is, poor, cried Montague. "Dead or alive, that dancing girl has brought her out of the fiery furnace of flames."

They took them both to an adjacent hotel—poor Mrs. Pinkard was insensible and senseless, Cissy pale and silent.

"I don't know how I did it," said she; "I only know that I could not stand still and leave her to perish."

Mrs. Pinkard recovered, but she never was quite strong again. But when she began to sit up a little she called her son to her.

"Markham, said she, "you must do something for Cissy Stubbs. She has saved my life at the peril of her own."

The manager looked up with a smile. "Dear old mammie," said he, "I have done something. I have raised her salary $10 a month."

"Pshaw," said Mrs. Pinkard.

"I have dismissed the Alvarez because she quarreled with little Cissy," he added.

"Now Markham, do be in earnest," pleaded the old lady.

"Well, mammie, what do you want, then?" said he. "Just decide on something for yourself."

Mrs. Pinkard looked wistfully at her son. "I should like to adopt her, Markham," said she.

"Do you really like her so much?"

"More than I can tell," Mrs. Pinkard answered fervently.

"Well, then," said the manager, "you will be glad to hear that I asked

Catharic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles of medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effectual remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and efficient treatment. AYER'S PILLS are specially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and secretive processes, and restore regular, healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from alcohol or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

AYER'S PILLS are an effectual cure for Constipation or Costiveness, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Dizziness or Vertigo, Foul Stomach and Breath, Disorders, Headache, Loss of Memory, Numbness, Biliousness, Jaundice, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Dropsy, Dysentery, Worms, Neuralgia, Colic, Gripes, Diarrhœa, Gout, Gravel, Piles, Disorders of the Liver, and all other diseases resulting from a disordered state of the digestive apparatus.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal.

While gentle in their action, these Pills are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system.
